The Largest Jack Manufacturer in the World Writes about Zutoo

Regarding your Zutoo Tablets I beg to say: I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all or nearly all of the so-called "cures" on the market, till warned by my physician to discontinue their use on account of their bad effects on the heart. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them when needed with equally good results. 'I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never fail to give quick relief.

I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost.

SUITS VACATION TIME

SERMON OF GREAT CONTRASTS INSPIRED BY YOSEMITE.

TALMAGIAN WORD-PAINTING

What the Preacher Saw From a Lofty Peak Overlooking the Yosemite Valley—Then, Turning From Nature to Nature's God He Exclaimed with the Psalmist: "The Strength of the Hills Is His Also."

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dixey, of Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 25.—In this sermon, suited to the vacation season, the preacher takes for his pulpit a lofty peak overlooking the Yosemite valley and for his theme the vivid impressions awakened by his inspiring surroundings. The text is Psalm xiv, 4, "The strength of the hills is his."

"Big" is a word which can be applied to the United States, but that word "big" especially can be applied to the natural wonders of Niagara Falls and Yellowstone Park and the Grand Canyon of Arizona, and, above all, to the wonderful Yosemite Valley, which, as a wonderland, has not its superior in all the world. The first time I viewed it was under specially favorable circumstances. We left the railroad in the early hours of the morning for a long, seventy-two mile drive to this wonderful place. It was a day passing description and crowded with marvelous mountain scenes. Sometimes, during that long, twelve hours' ride, we could pick the choice bouquets of wild flowers. The flora of a luxuriant springtime was bidding us welcome. Then the storm clouds shut us in and the sun disappeared. Then, as we climbed up and up the heights of the Sierra Nevadas, we shivered and shook in a rain-storm, again in a hailstorm and then in a blinding snowstorm. Our limbs became so benumbed that circulation was almost stopped, but on and on and on we went until it drew near to the evening hours. Then the storm cleared away. God lifted the curtains of the clouds, and suddenly the grandest view ever panoramaed before mortal eyes was mine.

"There," said the driver, "is Yosemite Valley!" "Then," said I, "one of the dreams of my life is fulfilled." But though I have dreamed many wonderful dreams, though I have seen many of the wonder scenes of the world, I never dreamed of or saw a sight like that. Chaos and cosmos, love and hate, beauty and revolting hideousness, summer and winter, hoary headed mountains with their snowcaps of spotless white and with their limbs lined knee deep in wild flowers; appalling precipices and lovers' retreats; roaring, rushing cataracts, with their "spirits of the evil winds," and pinkeys playing amid the mists, and as passementeries among the nether robes of the different falls; repulsions and fascinations—all seemed to be there. They were standing out their hands toward me and calling, "Come, brother, come and sit at my feet. Come, and I will hurl three fingers cliffs and upon thy poor mangled body I will let the vultures and the wild beasts banquet. Come, and I will show you sights and wonders of which thou hast never conceived. Come, come!" Amid 10,000 different voices in one great chorus, "Come, come, come!" they kept calling. And the echoing mountains off in a distance threw back those calls as from great sounding boards. "Come! Come! Come!" Even to-day in imagination I can hear those strange, weird, conflicting voices calling me. Oh, the many emotions that surged through my heart and soul when I first looked down from "Inspiration height" and descended into the fairy valley. As the rocks and the cliffs began to close in around me I felt as did Dante with Virgil by his side and I was descending into hell. At the next moment I seemed to feel that angelic companions were by my side and I was on the confinal gates of pearl were opening for my celestial entrance. Michael Angelo painted both heaven and hell in one picture, Yosemite Valley is a "Last Judgment."

Everywhither I turned joy and sorrow, peace and anguish, happiness and terror, celestial Gabriels and demoniac Frankensteins, white winged doves and raven garmented messengers of devastation, side by side and in close quarters, were inhabiting the dark caverns of those rocks, or were waving to me from those dizzy heights, or were hovering under those tents of snow canvas, or were dwelling in the fantastic palaces above, yet within the range of my wondering sight. "Are those storm clouds?" I asked myself. Then I would answer, "No. Those are not storm clouds. Those are mountains reborn, for I see them waving over cathedrals and over village kirk spires." Angels seemed to be holding those mountains in their hands while listening to the worshiping supplicants within at prayer and saying, "Amen." Then, as I looked again, are for you as such an earth-quake is done and you shall come to dwell with Christ forever.

Here the rocks seemed to be great avalanches of snow or overtopping glaciers of ice ready to tumble down upon us and crush us. There they seemed to be whole cities in ruins, as though ten thousand Vesuviuses had belched forth their fires and demolished them and then the demons had come among these broken walls and destroyed houses, just to show what awful carnage pandemonium had wrought. Here there seemed to be huge mountains cut in twain with the other half thrown away into space. There they looked like worlds just started and then left in a formative state, as though the Divine Creator had gone off and forgotten all about them. Here they seemed to be unscaled mountains, though the walls about a huge prison for lost souls. While there, again, a sin Sentinel rock, they seemed to be signal stations lifting themselves high above the clouds to put us in connection with other worlds and with God. Thus there walls of rock, these fortresses of rock, these mighty obelisks and pyramids of rock, these great sheets of rock upon which God had registered the histories of the ages, seemed to be object lessons. It was as though the Creator had opened His treasure vaults just a little that we might peer in and see His unlimited resources. The psalmist's words, spoken thousands of years ago, were my words in the darkness of that night, and they are my words now, "The strength of the hills," or, as the revised version puts it, "The heights of the hills are his also."

As I climbed the awful, dizzy heights of one of the Sierra Nevadas, by the edge of an appalling precipice to Glacier Point, I was overtopped in my uppermost in my mind. Bending and trembling we go. Up and up the sure footed beasts carry us higher and still higher. Then the rocks by the side of the precipice grow deeper and deeper at each step. At last we are at the top, after a long five mile pull. Then, by building on to the point, you can look straight down 3,250 feet, or the altitude of nearly two-thirds of a mile I looked straight down into the awful sacred river. It was not a silver thread bending and winding among the many trees in the valley, but a real living snake, beautiful, but green. Its surface reflected every shade of green, from the darkest green, down to the lightest pool, to the lightest shades of aquamarine and chrysophrase. Yosemite falls' white garments seem to have a fall of 2,600 feet, or nearly one-half of a mile. Then, while I looked standing down into that awful precipice—looking down a pallisade so deep that I seemed to be looking into space—there came a small voice as seemed to talk to me. When God called to Samuel, he called at night. To Jonah at noon. To Peter on the pulpit of Glacier Point, it seemed that he called in the daytime. That voice was so real that I involuntarily said that I turned to my wife and asked, "Were you speaking?" "No; did you hear any one talking?" "Yes." I answered; "I thought I heard a voice and that it must be the voice of the Lord."

Then the mysterious voice seemed to address me in these words: "Then you go back to your pulpit you will walk on the stone streets of a great city. You will climb there, not mountains, but mountains from the tops of which you will see the sun setting among the heaving waves of the western Pacific. To the east you can see the sunbeams of the early morning burning themselves into the golden nuggets of many jewelled orchards. You can hear the mowing machines fighting their way through the harvest fields at your feet. But don't remember underneath you is the same rock, the same depths of rock, the same immensities of rock you now see from Glacier Point in Yosemite Valley. Remember, O man, that I put those rocks underneath thee that the waters of the Pacific might be an aquarium for thee and that the fish might feed on thee and that thy home might not be built upon the sinking sands. Even in the unseen rocks I am revealing to you loving, caring, sustaining and protecting my children."

Does this voice of the unseen rocks speak to you of God's love, as on the panoramic rocks seen from Glacier Point it seemed to speak to me? If not, a divine love when I stood in old Yosemite?

But the heights of the hills and the depths of the valleys of Yosemite were more than the every day present, sustaining care of a Divine Father. Those rocks were to me libraries of the past century and of the ages. Geologists are there as students of the unrolled volumes of the Sierra Nevadas. They are as the libraries of ancient Alexandria and Nineveh and Babylon. We have heard that these ancient books were so many that in Alexandria alone it took six months to destroy part of them when those parchments and manuscripts were used for common fuel to light the fires of the 4,000 bathrooms of that great city. But I want to tell you that when a man rides through Yosemite Valley and climbs its dizzy heights he is looking upon the historic pages of books older than the oldest tablets of stone exhumed from amid the ruins of an ancient Troy. He is looking at a greater library than the royal libraries of Nineveh, Babylon or Alexandria combined. There he is looking upon the millions of open leaves of rock written upon by the pen of but one Author, and that pen is "the finger of God."

If the recorded pages of the books of rock found among the shelves of rock and upon the fingers of rock and lying open upon the Arabian sea of Yosemite Valley do not teach us that God as an author has been at work ten centuries upon centuries and millenniums upon millenniums ago and that he will be at work for ten centuries upon centuries and the millenniums to come, then I say the Yosemite rocks "teach us nothing." Then we have eyes to see and we will not see, and we have ears to hear and we will not hear. Every step you take, every mile you ride, impresses home the one truth—that the Creator has been and will be eternal in his own life and eternal in his creations.

Mariposa Grove, which grows just outside the Yosemite valley and practically under the shadow of the Sierras, is a living oratory to teach the eternal purposes and workings of the Divine Father. My, what big preachers they are! About 600 of them grow near together, as though they were ashamed of their big girths and ashamed because, like Saul, they raise their huge bodies not only head and shoulders above all others, but because they make other trees look like pygmies beside them. "Grizzly Bears," "Columbia," "Havenpencils of ice which wrote yonder chapters upon those hillsides and mountains, millenniums ago, as glaciers, polished them walls until to-day they reflect the light of the rising sun as burnished mirrors? Can you see with naked eye the star as a signal fire burning on the picket line at the farthermost outer edge of all stars? Can you, at a mere haphazard guess, state the direct distance between this earth and that star? Can you put it up and in imagination until you see the zenith for a moment and the nadir for a bright Jewel in your coronet. Then, if you can, you may estimate how long it took God, with his eternal purpose, to produce yonder rocks and how long that eternal purpose shall live after the Yosemite Valley itself shall be cremated in the furnace of the earth's last conflagration. If these rocks teach us that thousands and millions of years in God's sight are as but a second of time, do you not believe we can trust to his care the few years we are upon this planet? If God can use the ages for playthings, may we not be satisfied to let him do with us as he will for the short space of three score years and ten, which is but a breath of God upon earth? "God is a spirit, infinite, eternal," etc. Yes, the everlasting rocks of Yosemite prove it. Every one shall receive the Judgment call in that day, when the angel shall stand with one foot upon the land and the other foot upon the sea, and swear that time shall be no longer. But while time endures everywhere in Yosemite, you may find, as I did, God speaking, God preaching.

And so I passed on through beautiful Yosemite, with snow-capped hills and with sweet scented valleys at thy feet I wave to them a farewell. Then eldest make of me a better man. Amid thy columns It was as if I had walked with the Divine among the cemeteries of dead trees of creation. By the lullabies of thy falling water I slept to dream of the God of my childhood. Upon thy emerald pools I have seen there reflected the beautiful faces of my past life. From thy trails I have learned that it is easy to follow the "strait path" if you do not look backward or be afraid to go in the place where the pedestrian ought to go. Happier have I turned back to my own home and my own work, but more than ever, because the Christ of the Nazarene hills who welcomed me among thy forest fires. VARYING THE MENU.

Delicious Soups and Salads For the Midsummer Days.

As the summer advances it is desirable to make such changes in the table as are demanded by hot spells. The heavy dinners and desserts that were greatly enjoyed during the cold weather are now entirely out of place and should be followed by those that is less heating, yet not less nourishing.

Soups of cream instead of meat, lighter desserts, more fruit and more fish are among the changes called for by Dame Nature herself.

Bisques of clam, of lobster, of peas, asparagus or tomatoes are all delicious and quite as nourishing as the heavy soups made from beef and other meats. Fish are now plentiful and are much less heating than meats, although it is not advisable for the meat diet to be cut down too rapidly.

Salads, too, should be served daily, and water cress, dandelion, lettuce and other greens may be used for this purpose. All are wholesome, and especially is served with a simple French dressing.

Many housekeepers complain of the trouble they have in mixing the French dressing, but the essential portion is tablespoonful of vinegar and three tablespoonfuls of oil, a saltspoonful of salt and a quarter that 'amount of mustard) into a bowl. Then stir and then shake the bottle vigorously for a few minutes and you will have a perfect dressing. Another way by far the easiest way to mix a French dressing is the mayonnaise dressing is rather more difficult to mix. At least an hour before the dressing is required put into the ice chest the small bowl in which you wish to mix it, a silver fork, an egg and the bottle of oil. If everything is cold the dressing is more easily made. Take the yolk of one egg and beat it only until it is well broken, then add, drop by drop, the oil, stirring rapidly all the time. When the dressing thickens, the oil may be added more rapidly, but it is necessary to use care. When thick enough add some lemon juice or vinegar until the dressing is thin enough. It should be made thick enough to mask the salad. —Table Talk.

What Women Suffer.

At All Ages They Need Rich, Pure Blood to Secure Health and Happiness.

A woman needs medicine more than a man. Her organism is more complex, her system more delicate. Her health is disturbed regularly in the course of nature. If anything happens to interfere with that natural disturbance, she goes through unspeakable suffering. In fact the health of every function and the happiness of every moment of a woman's life depends upon the richness and the regularity of her blood supply. That is the simple scientific reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are worth more than their weight in gold to women of all ages from fifteen to fifty. These pills actually make the rich, red blood that brings health and happiness and freedom from pain to every woman. Mrs. Neil Ferguson, Ashfield, N.S., says, "In justice to you, and in the hope that what I say may benefit other suffering women, I take pleasure in stating that I have found wonderful benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When I began using the pills I was so badly run down that I could scarcely go about; at times I suffered very much and felt that life was a burden. Thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I can now say I am enjoying perfect health than I ever expected to have again, and I can most heartily recommend these pills to other suffering women."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured Mrs. Ferguson because they filled her veins with the rich, pure blood necessary to the health and happiness of every human being. It is for this reason that these pills always cure such troubles as anaemia, neuralgia, heart trouble, indigestion, rheumatism, sciatica, St. Vitus' dance, paralysis, kidney and liver troubles, and the special ailments of growing girls and women of middle age. You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine, but you should be careful to see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around each box. If you wish you can get the pills by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women

Make Healthy Women.

Upon being taken into the stomach the various ingredients are absorbed by the blood, and then find their way to every organ and tissue.

Some reach the uterine system. They allay inflammation, stop all drains on the system and make women regular.

Some strengthen the stomach. They help digestion and increase the appetite.

Others act on the bowels. They cure constipation.

Other ingredients stimulate the liver and kidneys in carrying off impurities from the system.

Others reach the nerves. These tone up the nervous system and supply vital energy, thereby curing the nervousness, headaches and melancholy, to which so many women are subject.

The full effect of all the medicaments in the tablets is to arouse the entire female system to renewed life and vigor.

Improvement is noticed the first week.

BABY'S DANGER.

A mother cannot watch her little ones too carefully during the hot weather. Dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera infantum, and disorders of the stomach are alarmingly frequent during the summer months, and unless the mother has at hand an efficient remedy to check and cure the trouble a little life may go almost before you realize the case is serious. At the first sign of any of these ailments the wise mother will give her little one Baby's Own Tablets, which promptly cure all hot weather ailments. Mrs. John Lancaster, North Portal, N.W.T., says, "My baby was attacked with diarrhoea and vomiting. I at once gave Baby's Own Tablets and the next day she was as well as ever. I am never without the Tablets in the house as I believe them to be the best medicine a little one needs." Other wise mothers will follow Mrs. Lancaster's example and keep the Tablets always at hand —their prompt use may save a little life. Sold by all med cine dealers or sent by mail at 25 cents a box by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

He, after the ceremony—Do you really think I shall make a good married darling?

She—Ah, you're all right! How do you like your captain?

No person should go from home without a bottle of Dr. D. Kelloge's Dysentery Cordial in their possession, as change of water, indigestible vegetable, frequently brings on summer complaint, and there is nothing like being ready with a sure remedy at hand, which oftentimes saves great suffering and frequently valuable lives. This Cordial has gained for itself a wide-spread reputation for affording prompt relief from all summer troubles.

Lawyer—Now, see here; before take your case I want to know if you're guilty.

Prisoner — Am I guilty? D' yer s'pose I'm so fool enough to hire de most expensive lawyer in town if I was innereent?

He Power Grows With Age.—How many medicines one could blazon as panaceas for all human ills have come and gone since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil was first put upon the market? Yet it remains, doing more good to humanity than many a preparation which highly vaunted and extolled in its virtues wider and wider and in a larger circle every year. It is the medicine of the masses.

Sandy Pikes—Ah, lady, can't yer help a poor sufferer from de Russian famine? The lady—Were you really there, my poor man?

Sandy Pikes—No'm, I was a school teacher till I sprained me voice practicing Russian names.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

"Sambo," said the owner of a country place to his gardener, "remember that tree I wanted you to cut down, my wife thinks it had better be allowed to stand."

"Well, ah think it ought ter come down, Massa Brown. Ah think it orter."

"What are your reasons for thinking so, Sambo?"

"W—ll, sir, de first reason am dat de tree done lose purty nigh fifty per cent foose; de secon' reason am dat it's mighty old; and de third reason am cas' I cut it down last night."

A Cure for Rheumatism.—The intrusion of uric acid into the blood stream is a fruitful cause of rheumatic pains. This irregularity is caused by the deranged and unhealthy condition of the liver. Any one who will give this organ attention will find a remedy in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. They act promptly, are highly recommended and most beneficial, and for restoring health by action, they correct impurities in the blood.

Ife—I was an int mate friend of your late husband. Can't you give me something to remember him by? Sue, thirty-one—Why, yes, Ife.

Impurities In The Blood.—When the action of the kidneys becomes impaired, impurities in the blood are carried to every system enaces. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will regulate these kidneys so that they will maintain healthy action and prevent the complications which certainly come when there is derangement of these organs. For a cold or a neuralgic these Pills are in the first rank.

"Now, John," said the anxious wife, "I want you to promise me that you will come straight home after the lodge meeting adjourns to-night."

"That's asking a good deal, dear," said the husband. "I'll promise to come home as straight as I can—even if I have to walk a tab."

Simkins—Are you going to ask your family to the country this summer? Tomkins—No; we have decided to remain at home and enjoy all the pleasures of rural life. Simkins—How will you manage? Tomkins—By putting a fly screen in the mattress, removing the fly screens from the windows and staying in a supply of canned meats and vegetables.

"I have always allowed my wife to wish something for herself for every birthday, since we were married." "What does she wish generally?" "Well, the last fifteen times she has been wishing for a piano."

Alice rushed in from the garden, where she had been picking flowers. She was badly stung by a bee, and was holding on to her finger and rubbing it pitifully. "Oh, mamma," she cried. "I burned me on a bug!"

Mr. Newlywed—By the way, dearest, did I ever tell you how much money my late husband left me? Mrs. Newlywed—No, dear, you have never told me a thing about your past life.

Wife—I see by this paper that the average family has four and seven-tenths persons.

Husband—I suppose also the seven-tenths in this family.

Woman is often referred to by man as "doubting as Thomas," but she has sorrows. That may be complimentary but it would seem to be rather hard on Thomas. Even if we put it in terms of reason that when things are coming to us we should be glad to make them go better. But when things are going ill with him, he expects the wife to share half his burden. And there's a touch of real poetry in this presentation of masculine faith and love. Man don't appreciate fact that the strain of motherhood alone is a heavier burden than all the loads that rest upon male shoulders. They see the wife grow thinner, pale, nervous and worn without a thought that she is a sufferer. Among the pleasing letters received by Dr. Pierce are those from husbands who have dared up before it was too late to the crushing burdens laid upon the wife, and in the search for help have found in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a restorative which has given back to the mother the health of the maiden and the maiden's happiness. "Favorite Prescription" always helps, and almost always cures. It has generally cured nine-tenths of every hundred women who have used it when afflicted with diseases peculiar to women.

Agitation in the world of homeopathic medicine has been its very soul of progress, as in politics and religion—the conflict of opinion and individuality of men have been parent to the disagreements by which the history of these bodies have been elevated. So with most of our famous practitioners foremost in illustration of which truth stands the world-famous remedy for general debility and languor "Quinine Wine"—and which, when available in its genuine strength, is a miraculous creator of appetite vitality and stimulant, to the general fertility of the system. Quinine Wine, and its improvement, has, from the first discovery of the great virtues of Quinine as a medical agent teen one of the most thorough and successful remedies ever offered to the public. It is one of the great tonics and natural life-giving stimulants which the medical profession have been compelled to recognize and prescribe. Messrs. Northrop & Lyman, of Toronto, have given to the preparation of their pure Quinine Wine the great care due to its importance, and the standard excellence of the article which they offer to the public comes into the marked purged of all the defects which skillful observation and scientific opinion has pointed out in the less perfect preparation of the past. MARLBANK.

What proved to be the most interesting baseball match of the season was played on the Marlbank grounds last Saturday afternoon, between Marlbank and a selected team from Napanee and Selby, resulting in a victory for the home club. Exceptionally fine weather drew out a large crowd of spectators, who evidently watched the struggle for supremacy between the two teams, applauding every good play made in the game. Both teams were strong, but the best of good nature accepted the decision of umpire Wheeler, a Napanee man, who impartially meted out justice to friend and foe the justice that satisfied both players and spectators. The splendid conduct of the visitors bespeaks for them a friendly reception should they ever appear again on the Marlbank diamond.

Horsemen will find the job department of The Beaver fully equipped with the latest type for printing bills, programmes, etc. Prompt attention given to all work entrusted to us. No job too large, no job too small. A call solicited.

ARDEN.

There is every promise of an abundant harvest throughout this section of the country.

Mr. J. S. Heath is now in possession of the palatial residence owned by W. W. Pringle, County Commissioner. It is a most ideal summer resort in every way, and already one family from Toronto has arrived and intend spending the summer here. The name of this up-to-date resort is "Lakeview", doubtless suggested because no less than six lakes can be seen from the roof of the building.

HOW TO GET CONSUMPTION.

Ninety per cent. of the "lungers" contract consumption by allowing power of resistance to run down. There is favorable condition for the development of the disease to be produced. In a healthy system consumption can't take root. But where there is weakness and debility, there you find tuberculosis. For strengthening, toning and building up the weak, nothing equals Perronine. It makes the blood nutritious and the nerves enduring. The way it converts food into nutriment, and the strength it gives is surprising. Just what the system needs in consumption—cases that's Perronine. If tired and weak don't put off. Fifty cents buys a box of fifty tablets—at all dealers.

Sunshine Furnace

Water-pan

Dry air is light—it lifts and carries dust. Dry air cracks your furniture, gives you a headache, shrivels your skin, parches your lungs.

The water-pan in most furnaces is a pleasantry. It has no serious business in the work of the furnace—it is merely placed there for effect, because a water-pan is a good thing.

And a water-pan is an absolute necessity to your health and comfort, but it must be properly placed to radiate moisture evenly and uniformly throughout the house.

The water-pan of the Sunshine Furnace is the most scientifically arranged water-pan in any furnace in the world.

It does the work a water-pan should, and does it well.

38th Anniversary OF CONFEDERATION

The following Canadian History will be of interest to all readers of our advertisement, as to morrow is the 38th Anniversary of Confederation.

Before July 1st, 1867, there were five separate British Colonies in America These were Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland and Canada. Canada was the name given to what is now called Ontario and Quebec. These Colonies were independent of each other, and in 1867 the British parliament passed the British North America Act, which joined these provinces together into the Dominion of Canada. This law came into force on July 1st, 1867, and that date is observed as the anniversary of Confederation. In commemoration of this Historical Day, we draw special attention to the following:

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Toronto, July 5th, 1905.

To the Editor—Over a week ago there appeared in the daily papers a so-called report of some discussion regarding the report of the Lord's Day Alliance Committee adopted by the Church of England Synod of the Ontario Diocese. That report purported to state what G. F. Rutan, of Napanee, said, and did not even suggest what was contained in the Synod Committee's report which strongly supported the Lord's Day Alliance, and was unanimously carried. Surely the report was more important than the remarks of a member of the Synod, and yet even these remarks were incorrectly stated, and appeared under glaring headlines doing a great injustice to both the Church of England and the Methodist Church, as well as to Mr. Rutan.

I wrote Mr. Rutan about the matter, and quote from his reply, dated 28th June, as follows: "In reply to yours of the 27th instant, would say that I deeply regret that my remarks at the session of the Ontario Synod should have been reported as they were. In speaking of another subject, I incidentally remarked that the Sunday excursion referred to by you, was one gotten up to accommodate people who wished to attend the Methodist Conference at Picton, and I further stated I believed that the excursion was promoted by the Captain of the Steamer Bay. I have no reason to believe it was promoted by the Methodist Church. I am in sympathy with the Lord's Day Alliance in obtaining one day of rest under the Sabbath laws of Canada for the laboring people, and consider that it is unfortunate that the reporters for the public press paid so much to the sensational leaving public. Make such use of this letter as with in correcting the false impression given."

I hope, dear sir, you will give the letter a prominent place in your columns, and thus help to correct a very mixed and grave wrong to the Christian Church, and to a most important cause.

Secretary Lord's Day Alliance.

MISS JESSIE MACLACHLAN

The Popular Scotch Prima-Donna

In the picturesque little seaport town of Oban, Scotland, with its beautiful scenery and its inspiring historic associations, Miss Jessie MacLachlan, the famous Scotch prima-donna, was born. She was the young woman she first revealed her unusual musical endowment, for Nature gave her a voice of rare sweetness and power. When she was but twelve she joined the choir in her native town, and with a thrill of surprise the choir-master heard her sing. So pleased was he with the possibilities of her voice that he urged her to guard her golden treasure with care, to avoid indiscriminate singing until she should be trained and perfected under the best teachers. He recommended her to devote her life to song, and told her, with a prophetic glimpse, that she would be numbered among the world's greatest singers.

Under the most enthusiastic teaching of Edwin Holland of the Guildhall School of Music, and other masters, her training was continued until she was ready for her first public appearance. Her intense love of Scotland, a patriotism that seems the keynote of her whole nature, led her to realize the possibilities of the old Gaelic ballads, the heart songs of her people, and when Glasgow recognized her genius, her fame quickly spread through Great Britain, and the doors of conservative London opened in welcome.

At Balmoral she was commanded to sing before Queen Victoria, who expressed her royal appreciation by presenting to her a superb bracelet. For nearly two and a half centuries no Highland lassie had been numbered on the throne—the latest one being a MacCrimmon piper who, in 1651, had the honor of performing before the King and kissing his hand.

Miss MacLachlan's voice is a rich full soprano, vibrant with feeling and dramatic power. It is not the mere singing, the mere succession of pure liquid notes, that rouses her audiences, it is the magnetic force of her personality, her absorption of the spirit of the song that carries the words from the heart of some Scotch poet of centuries ago to find their echoing note in the hearts of his twentieth-century fellow-countrymen.

On her fourth tour of the world she is awakening enthusiasm wherever her voice is heard, and is now singing in Australia. In Boston, before an audience of 5,000, when she gave the stirring martial air, "Wi' a Hundred Pipers," men jumped on their chairs and waved their hands and shouted. In Toronto, encore after encore inspired new songs, until the singer grew wearied—a welcome typical of her entire tour.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by W. G. Mack, at the Department of Agriculture.

ANNUAL CELEBRATION.

FIRST-CLASS HORSE RACES AND GOOD BASEBALL MATCH.

The annual celebration at the Driving Park on Monday last was a complete success. A large crowd was present, most of whom took in the races, while quite a number watched a splendid game of baseball. Ideal weather prevailed throughout the day, and the excursion boats were loaded with pleasure seekers. An accident in the second heat of the 2.20 class slightly marred the proceedings. "Dollie Keswick" fell shortly after leaving the wire, and "Sidney Jack" being close behind ran on top of horse and driver. Fortunately the only damage done was the smashing of one of the sulkies.

The Picton Citizens' Band furnished excellent music during the day.

NEWBURGH.

At the meeting of the Methodist church trustees on Thursday evening, Miss Alma Wilson was re-engaged as organist. There were five applicants, and on the first ballot without nomination Miss Young was the successful choice of the board. The new organist comes highly recommended as a musician of the first rank, and will no doubt be an able successor to the retiring organist. Miss Madeline Thomson, who has presided with much grace and skill for the last two years, steps aside at the organ until the first Sunday in August, when the new organist will assume her duties.

Rev. J. Gander preached a very impressive sermon in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening.

On Saturday afternoon the married and single men of the village played a game of baseball on the palace grounds, the married men winning by 25-6, though there was a wide margin in favor of the former at the game proved very interesting. George Thomson, the "Jimmy Pigeon" of the team, played first base for the Benevolent, and did some good work, accepting everything that came his way. Wilfrid Shorts, at 2nd base, also proved that he were very difficult, and figured in a couple of fast double plays with Short-stop Shorts. Alex Bell was effective at times, in the first half of the first inning striking Walter Johnston to third base fumbled with W. Shorey at first, and the death of Miss Rogers, of Verona, on Wednesday of last week. Mrs. Rogers formerly lived here and was well known in this vicinity.

LAST WORDS.

Mr. Editor,—As a ratepayer interested in the light question, kindly allow me to make the following remarks, re the vote on this question. Under the By-law carried, it will be carried by the vote of persons who pay taxes and never expect to pay much in taxes, and we have forced ourselves to pay heavily for what none of us would touch in any other way. Next year we will have doubled the debt of the town, and just $35,000 more to ask the ratepayers to expend, that were not elected for that purpose, have no light this year, but fill the streets full of wires, like a bird cage. $45 for the By-law is not carried, the Conmee Act not being in force, but we must now call on Co. elect a commissioner, put him on bonds, pay him a reasonable salary, and thus have no security, and the cheapest and best light possible in Napanee. This plan seems to me to be preferable to the one proposed by the majority. Also that the money spent in preparing for and procuring the legislation required to bring it up to our present position, had been spent in getting a light for our streets would have been lighted most of the time during the last two years.

And now, a personal matter, G. F. Bolton, elected by last week's vote, to be surprised at my statement that the old Corporation had spent tens of thousands of dollars in the past in lighting the streets and had failed. Now, tens of thousands of dollars is an indefinite term, it means $40,000, and the old Corporation began the attempt to light the streets, only with a capital of $4,000 and a borrowing power of $4,000, that was not paid at the beginning, and was afterward made overpaid in the energy, worry, etc. So I think it is safe to say that the old Corp. had an investment of $10,000, and allow 8 per cent for repairs, interest, etc., this was quite common 17 years ago, this would bring the value of the investment up to between $24,000 or $35,000 at the present day, and the attempt to light the streets, only with a capital of $4,000 a failure. The same old story that was not paid at the beginning,

SEXSMITH—PRINK.

A very pleasing event transpired on Wednesday last, June 28th, at 2 p.m., at "Sylvan Glen," the restful home of Mrs. Sexsmith, North Park Crescent, when her second daughter, Rose Blanche, was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur T. Prink, of "Fairview Villa," a neat and cosy home situated overlooking the far famed waters of Hay Bay. The ceremony was performed in a very impressive manner by their pastor, Rev. W. Dawn, of South Napanee. Seventy guests were present from various places for and near, some took in from a distant room. The young couple received their vows and received the congratulations of their many friends. After toast and song, the happy pair departed to spend a few days with friends in the south. The numerous presents received by the bride were valuable and useful.

PIONEER GRAIN MAN DEAD.

Robert D. Martin Passes Away in Montreal—Successful Career.

Montreal, June 29th.—The death is announced, at his home in this city, of Robert Dinnick Martin, one of Canada's pioneer grain men. Mr. Martin, who was born in Napanee fifty years ago, has been ill for some years. In the early days of his business career Mr. Martin went to Deseronto, where he entered the elevator trade. He afterwards went to Winnipeg, where he became interested in the grain trade, and here developed one of the largest and most prosperous businesses of the kind in Canada. Mr. Martin, who for years has been associated with Mr. Max Saguis and Mr. A. Stewart, forming the R. D. Martin Company, Limited, came to Montreal some five years ago. He leaves a widow and five children. The remains were brought to Napanee on the 1.08 train last Friday, and interred in Napanee cemetery. A large number of friends were at the station to pay a last tribute of respect.

RESOLUTION OF CORN EXCHANGE.

A special meeting of the Corn Exchange Association was held in Montreal on Friday for the purpose of passing a resolution in connection with the death of Mr. Robert D. Martin, of the R. D. Martin Company, grain exporters, and a prominent member of the association.

Mr. Norman Wright, president, was in the chair, and on the motion of Mr. Alex. McFee, seconded by S. H. Robert Meighen, each of whom made fitting reference to the deceased, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

That this association sincerely deplores the death, while in the prime of life, of Mr. R. D. Martin, one of the most prominent of its members; that Mr. Martin's great energy and great character won for him the warm regard of his fellow-members, and that they have admired the patience and courage with which he bore the long period of ill-health that preceded his death; that the sincere sympathy of the members of this association is hereby tendered to Mrs. Martin and family in their most grievous sorrow; that as a mark of respect to the memory of our deceased colleague, this association does now adjourn."

CROYDON.

On Wednesday evening, June 28th, the residence of Mr. Jos. Tenbey was the scene of mingled pleasure and sorrow. A large number of friends gathered on these sunny grounds to bid farewell to Miss May B. Hall, who for over a year has held the position of teacher in our school, and by her assembled here in connection with us. As a slight token of the esteem in which Miss Hall was held by the parents of the section presented her with a handsome silver butter cooler and pickle cruet. The following address was read by Mrs. L. Doupe and the presentation given by Mrs. Jos. Tenbey and Mrs. H. H. Kelly:—

Dear Miss Hall.—

As you are about leaving this vicinity a number of your many friends have assembled here this evening in respect of the esteem in which you are held by all. We have always found you faithful in the discharge of your duties as teacher, as well as being interested and willing to help in our Sunday School work. In these as well as socially you have won the confidence of all. We hope that your health may improve and that prosperity may attend you in every way. As a slight token of remembrance we would ask you to accept this silver butter cooler and cruet in a spirit that you can feel that you have no sympathy and friends in this vicinity. Signed on behalf of S. S. No. 4.— Mrs. Jos. Tenbey, Mrs. H. H. Kelly.

Before the presentation the beautiful verses, "Take my life and let it be, Consecrated Lord to Thee" were sung by all.

The following reply was given:

Dear Friends,—I cannot find words to-night o sufficiently express my thanks to you all. During my stay among you I feel that I have in many true friends. My work among the pupils of this school has always been a deep pleasure to me, and I deeply regret to sever the connections. I thank you all for your gifts, which I shall always look upon with the happy remembrance of my stay among you.

Afterwards in the prettily decorated rooms, refreshments were served, and at a very late hour he guests returned to their homes.

The children of the school also presented Miss Hall with a toilet set, comb, brush and mirror, and a manacure set, encased in real leather case.

THE WINGS OF THE MORNING

BY LOUIS TRACY.

"My darling, do you think I can survive your loss? You are life itself to me. If we have to die, sweet one, let us die together."

Then Iris flung her arms around his neck.

"I am quite, quite happy now," she sobbed brokenly. "I didn't—imagine—it would come—this way, but—I am thankful—it has come."

For a little while they yielded to the glamour of the divine knowledge that amid the chaos of eternity each soul had found its mate. There was no need for words. Love, tremendous in its power, unfathomable in its mystery, had cast its spell over them. They were garbed in light, throned in a palace built by fairy hands. On all sides squatted the ghouls of privation, misery, danger, even grim death; but they heeded not the inferno; they had created a paradise in an earthly hell.

Then Iris withdrew herself from the man's embrace. She was delightfully shy and timid now.

"So you really do love me?" she whispered, crimson faced, with shining eyes and parted lips.

He fondled her hair and gently rubbed her cheek with his rough fingers. The sudden sense of ownership of this fair woman was entrancing. It almost bewildered him to find Iris nestling close, clinging to him in utter confidence and trust.

"But I knew, I knew," she murmured. "You betrayed yourself so many times. You wrote your secret to me, and, though you did not tell me, I found your dear words on the sands and have treasured them next my heart."

What girlish romance was this? He held her away, gingerly, just so far that he could look into her eyes.

"Oh, it is true, quite true," she cried, drawing the locket from her neck. "Don't you recognize your own handwriting, or were you not certain, just then, that you really did love me?"

Dear, dear! How often would she repeat that wondrous phrase! Together they bent over the tiny slips of paper. There it was again, "I love you," twice blazoned in magic symbols. With blushing eagerness she told him how, by mere accident, of course, she caught sight of her own name. It was quite very wrong, was it, to pick up that tiny scrap or those others, which she could not help seeing and which unfolded their simple tale so mercifully? Wrong! It was so delightfully right that he must kiss her again to emphasize his convictions.

They grew calmer, more sedate. It was so unlikely a true they loved one another that the fact was becoming venerable with age. Iris was perhaps the first to recognize its quiet certainty.

"As I cannot get you to talk reasonably," she protested, "I must appeal to your sympathy. I am hungry, and, oh, so thirsty."

The girl had hardly uttered a morsel for her midday meal. Then she was despondent, utterly broken hearted. Now she was filled with new hope. There was a fresh motive in existence. Whether destined to live an hour or half a century she would never, never leave him, nor, of course, could he ever, ever leave her. Some things were quite impossible—for example, that they should part.

Jenks brought her a biscuit, a tin of meat and that most doleful cup of champagne.

"It is not exactly frappe," he said, handing her the insipid beverage, "but, under other conditions, it is a wine almost worthy to toast you in."

She fancied she had never before noticed what a charming smile he had.

"'Toast,' is a peculiarly suitable word," she cried. "I am simply frizzling. In these warm clothes"—

She stopped. For the first time since that prehistoric period of when she was "Miss Deane" and he "Mr. Jenks" she remembered the manner of her garments.

"It is not the warm clothing you feel so much as the want of air," explained the sailor readily. "This tarpaulin has made the place very stuffy, but we must put up with it until sundown. By the way, what is that?"

A light tap on the tarred canvas directly over his head had caught his ear. Iris, glad of the diversion, told him she had heard the noise three or four times, but fancied it was caused by the occasional rustling of the sheet on the uprights.

Jenks had not allowed his attention to wander altogether from external events. Since the Pirate Dyaks' last escapade there was no sign of them in the valley or on either beach. Not for trivial cause would they come again within range of Jenks' rifle.

They waited and listened silently. Another tap sounded on the tarpaulin in a different place, and then both occurred in the belief that something had darted in curved flight over the ledge and fallen on top of their protecting shield.

"Let us see what the game is," exclaimed the sailor. He crept to the back of the ledge and drew himself up until he could reach over the sheet. He returned, carrying in his hand a couple of tiny arrows.

"There are no less than seven of these things sticking in the canvas," he said. "They don't look very terrible. I suppose that is what my Indian friend meant by warning me against the trees on the right."

He did not tell Iris all the Mohammedan said. There was no need to alarm her causelessly. Even while they examined the ominous little missile another flew up from the valley and lodged on the roof of their shelter.

The shaft of the arrow, made of some extremely hard wood, was about ten inches in length. Affixed to it was a pointed fish bone, sharp, but not barbed and not fastened in a manner suggestive of much strength. The arrow was neither feathered nor grooved for a bowstring. Altogether it seemed to be a childish weapon to be used by men equipped with lead and steel.

Jenks could not understand the appearance of this toy. Evidently the Dyaks believed in its efficacy or they would not keep on pertinaciously dropping an arrow on the ledge.

"How on earth do they fire it?" asked Iris. "Do they throw it?"

"I will soon tell you," he replied, reaching for a rifle.

"Do not go on yet," she entreated him. "They cannot harm us. Perhaps we may learn more by keeping quiet. They will not continue shooting these things all day."

The last arrow fell, and he sprang to the right of the ledge.

Again a tiny arrow traveled toward them in a graceful parabola. This one fell short. Missing the tarpaulin, it almost dropped on the girl's outstretched hand. She picked it up. The fish bone point had snapped off in contact with the floor of the ledge. She sought for and found the small tip.

"See," she said. "It seems to have been dipped in something. It is quite discolored."

Jenks frowned peculiarly. A startling explanation had suggested itself to him. Fragments of forgotten lore were taking cohesion in his mind.

"Put it down. Quick!" he cried.

Iris obeyed him, with wonder in her eyes. He spilled a teaspoonful of champagne into a small hollow of the rock and steeped one of the fish bones in the liquid. Within a few seconds the champagne assumed a greenish tinge and the bone became white. Then he knew.

"Good heavens," he exclaimed, "these are poisoned arrows. I am shot by a blowpipe! I have never before seen one, but I have often read about them. The bamboos the Dyaks carried were sumptuans. These fish bones have been steeped in the juice of the upas tree. Iris, my dear girl, if one of them had so much as scratched your finger nothing on earth could save you."

She paled and drew back in sudden horror. Another tap sounded on their thrice welcome covering. Evidently the Dyaks would persist in their efforts to get one of those poisoned darts home.

Jenks debated silently whether it would be better to create a commotion, thus inducing the savages to believe they had succeeded in inflicting a mortal wound, or to wait until the next arrow fell, rush out and try conclusions with dumdum bullets against the sumpitan blowers.

He decided in favor of the latter course. He wished to dishearten his assailants, to cram down their throats the belief that he was invulnerable and could visit their every effort with a deadly reprisal.

Iris, of course, protested when he explained his project. But the fighting spirit prevailed. Their love idyll must yield to the needs of the hour.

He had not long to wait. The last arrow fell, and he sprang to the extreme right of the ledge. One he looked through that invaluable screen of grass. Three Dyaks were on the ground and a fourth in the fork of a tree. They were each armed with a blowpipe. He in the tree was just fitting an arrow into the bamboo tube. The others were watching him.

Jenks raised his rifle, fired, and the warrior in the tree pitched headlong to the ground. A second shot stretched a companion on top of him. One man jumped into the bushes and got away, but the fourth tripped over his unwieldy sumpitan, and a bullet took its large section from his skull. The sailor then amused himself with breaking the bamboos by firing at them. He came back to the white faced girl.

"I fancy that further practice with blowpipes will be at a discount on Rainbow Island," he cried cheerfully. But Iris was anxious and distrait.

"It is very sad," she said, "that we are obliged to secure our own safety by the ceaseless slaughter of human beings. Is there no offer we can make them, no promise of future gain, to tempt them to abandon hostilities?"

"None whatever. These Borneo Dyaks are bred from infancy to prey on their fellow creatures. To be strangers and defenseless is to court pillage and massacre at their hands. I, of human more of shooting them than of smashing a clay pigeon. Killing a mad dog is perhaps a better simile."

"But, Robert dear, how long can we hold out?"

"What! Are you growing tired of me already?"

He hoped to divert her thoughts from this constantly recurring topic. Twice within the hour had been foreshadowed and dismissed, but Iris would not permit him to shirk it again. She made no reply, simply regarding him with a wistful smile.

So Jenks sat down by her side and rehearsed the hopes and fears which perplexed him. He determined that there should be no further concealment between them. If they failed to secure water that night, if the Dyaks maintained a strict siege of the rock throughout the whole of next day, well —they might survive—it was problematical. Best leave matters in God's hands.

With feminine persistency she clung to the subject, detecting his unwillingness to discuss a possible final stage in their sufferings.

"Robert," she whispered fearfully, "you will never let me fall into the power of the chief, will you?"

"Not while I live."

"You must live. Don't you understand? I would go with them to save you. But I would have death in my own hand. Robert, my love, you must do this thing before the end. I must be the first to die."

The sailor wrestled with the great problem. He may be pardoned if his heart quailed and he groaned aloud.

"Iris," he said solemnly, "whatever happens, unless I am struck dead at your feet, I promise you that we shall pass the boundary hand in hand. Be mine the punishment if we have decided wrongly. Again, I refuse to discussing his head in a defiant access of energy, "let us have done with the morgue. For my part I refuse to accept knowledge I am inside until the gates clang behind me."

They chatted in lighter vein with such pendulum swing back to nonchalance that none would have deemed it possible for these two to have already determined the momentous issue of the pending struggle should it go against them.

And so the sun sank to rest in the sea, and the stars pierced the deepening blue of the celestial arch, while the man and the woman awaited patiently the verdict of the fates.

Before the light failed Jenks gathered all the poisoned darts, and ground their venomed points to powder beneath his heel. Gladly would Iris and he have dispensed with the friendly protection of the tarpaulin when the cool evening breeze came from the south. But such a thing might not be even considered. Some hours of darkness must elapse before the moon rose, and during that period, were their foes so minded, they would be absolutely at the mercy of the sumpitan shafts if not covered by their impenetrable buckler.

The sailor looked long and earnestly at the well. Their own bucket, improvised out of a dish cover and a rope, lay close to the brink. A stealthy crawl across the sandy valley, half a minute of grave danger, and he would be up the ladder again with enough water to serve their imperative needs for days to come.

There was little or no risk in descending the rock. Soon after sunset it was wrapped in deepest gloom, for night succeeds day in the tropics with wondrous speed. The hazard lay in twice crossing the white sands were any of the Dyaks hiding behind the house or among the trees.

He held no very high view of his own powers. The one sided nature of the conflict thus far was due solely to his possession of modern rifles as opposed to munitions of war. Let him be surrounded on the level at close quarters by a dozen determined men and he must surely succumb.

Were it not for the presence of Iris he would have given no second thought to the peril. CUPID'S MIRROR.

"The beauty of a woman's face or figure is but the external sign of the good health within," says Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., the specialist in women's diseases. Further, to be happy and beautiful one must naturally have good health. Now, if a woman has dragging-down feelings, together with backache, nervousness, shooting pains and aches, a too great drain upon her vitality and strength, she will never look beautiful. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, all result from those disorders peculiar to women, and the only way to effect their cure is to strike at the source of the difficulty. There is every reason why one should write some great specialist, one who has made the diseases of women a specialty for a third of a century like Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. All correspondence is held sacredly confidential, and he gives his advice free and without charge.

During a long period of practice, Doctor Pierce found that a prescription made up entirely of roots and herbs, without the use of alcohol, cured ninety-eight per cent. of such cases. After using this remedy for many years in his private practice he put it up in a form that can be had at any store where medicines are handled.

In many cases Dr. R. V. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will fit the needs and put the body in healthy condition.

So sure of it is Dr. Pierce, he offers a reward of $500 for women who cannot be cured of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb. All he asks is a fair and reasonable trial of his means of cure.

Don't allow the dealer to insult your intelligence by offering you a cheap substitute.

article from between his teeth, a string apparently, and drew it toward him, mounting the ladder at the same time. The end tightened. He was then about ten feet from the ground. Two Dyaks, yelling fiercely, rushed from the cover of the house.

"Go on," he said to Iris. "Don't lose your nerve, whatever happens. I am close behind you."

"I am quite safe," she gasped.

Turning sideways, climbing with one hand, he drew his revolver and fired at the pair beneath, who could now faintly discern them, and were almost within reach of the ladder. The shooting made them halt. He did not know or care if they were hit. To frighten them was sufficient. Several others were running across the sands to the cave, attracted by the noise and the cries of the foremost pursuers.

Then he gave a steady pull to the cord. The sharp crack of a rifle came from the vicinity of the old quarry. He saw the flash among the trees. Almost simultaneously a bright light leaped from the opposite ledge, illuminating the vicinity like a meteor. It lit up the rock, showed Iris just vanishing into the safety of the ledge and revealed Jenks and the Dyaks to each other. There followed instantly a tremendous explosion that shook earth and air, dislodging every loose stone in the southwest pile of rocks, hurling from the plateau some of its occupants and wounding the remainder with a shower of lead and debris. The sailor, unmolested further, reached the ledge.

In a tall tree near the valley of death he had tightly fixed a loaded rifle which pointed at a loose stone in the rock overhanging the ledge held by Iris and Jenks. This stone rested against a number of precussion caps extracted from cartridges, and these were in direct communication with a train of powder leading to a blasting charge placed at the end of a twenty-four inch hole drilled with a crowbar. The impact of the bullet against the stone could not fail to explode some of the caps. He had used the contents of 300 cartridges to secure a sufficiency of powder, and the bullets were crammed into the orifice, being tamped with clay and wet sand. The rifle was fired by means of the string, the loose coils of which were secreted at the foot of the poon. By springing this novel mine he had effectually removed every Dyak from the ledge, over which its contents would spread like a fan. Further, it would probably deter the survivors from again venturing near the fatal spot.

Iris listened, only half comprehending. Her mind was filled with one thought to the exclusion of all others. Robert had left her, had done this thing without telling her. She forgave him, knowing he acted for the best, but he must never, never desert her again in such a manner. She could not bear it.

CHAPTER XIV.

YOU are a dear unreasonable little girl," he said. "Have you breath enough to tell me why you came down the ladder?"

"When I discovered you were gone I became wild with fright. Don't you see, I imagined you were wounded and had fallen to the ground. What else could I do but follow, either to help you, or, if that were not possible"—

He found her hand and pressed it to his lips.

"I humbly crave your pardon," he said. "That explanation is more than ample. It was I who behaved unreasonably. Of course I should have warned you."

"May I ask how many more wild adventures you undertook without my knowledge?"

"One other, of great magnitude. I fell to love with you."

"Nonsense!" she retorted. "I knew that long before you admitted it to yourself."

"Was, please?"

"Well, to begin at the very beginning, you thought I was nice on board the Sirdar. Now, didn't you?"

And Iris, very safely embarked on a conversation of no interest to any other person in the wide world, but which provided them with the most delightful topic imaginable.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from one Hour to Another, but Cured By Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dew of Appomattox, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her a dose of it and kept her to live from one hour to another," he says "I happened in the store of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before the had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale at the Red Cross Drug Store. 27d

Thus the time sped until the rising moon silhouetted the cliff on the white carpet of coral strewn sand. The black shadow line traveled slowly closer to the base of the cliff, and Jenks, guided also by the stars, told Iris that midnight was at hand.

They knelt on the parapet of the ledge, alert to catch any unusual sound and watching for any indication of human movement. But Rainbow Island was now still as the grave. The wounded Dyaks had seemingly been removed from hut and beach. The dead lay where they had fallen. The sea sang a lullaby to the reef, and the fresh breeze whispered among the palm fronds—that was all.

Iris paid no heed to it; but Jenks, who knew there was not a reptile of the snake variety on the island, leaned over the ledge and emitted a tolerably good imitation. The native was beneath.

"Sahib, there is a worse thing to tell," said Mir Jan.

"Say on, then."

"Before they place the ladders against the cliff they will build a fire of green wood so that the smoke will be blown by the wind into your eyes. This will help to blind your aim. Otherwise you never miss."

"That will assuredly be awkward, Mir Jan."

"It will, sahib. Soul of my father, if we had but half a troop with us"—

But they had not, and they were both so intent on the conversation that they were momentarily off their guard. Iris was more watchful. She fancied there was a light rustling amid the undergrowth beneath the trees on the right. And she could hiss, too, if that were the correct thing to do.

So she hissed.

Jenks swarmed halfway up the ladder.

"Yes, Iris," he said.

"I am not sure, but I imagine something moved among the bushes behind the house."

"All right, dear. I will keep a sharp lookout. Can you hear us talking?"

"Hardly. Will you be long?"

"Another minute."

He descended and told Mir Jan what the fine sahib said. The native was about to make a search when Jenks stopped him.

"Here"—he handed the man his revolver—"I suppose you can use this?"

Mir Jan took it without a word, and Jenks felt that the incident atoned for previous unworthy doubts of his friend's honesty. The Mohammedan cautiously examined the back of the house, the neighboring shrubs and the open beach. After a brief absence he reported all safe, yet no man has ever been nearer death and escaped it than he during that reconnoissance. He, too, forgot that the Dyaks were fiends, and foxes can lie close when hounds are a trifle stale.

Boys' Clothing.

It's with manufacturing tailors pretty much as it is with cooks. You give two cooks the same flour, salt, baking powder and other ingredients for making bread. One cook bakes in delicious, flaky bread; the other's—well you eat it as it would be a sin to throw it away! That's the difference.

Some clothing makers are the prize cooks of the business—their boy's clothing is of good materials, it is well made, it fits, it is full of style, and boys like to wear it. That's the kind we handle.

Of Special Moment—is the fact that we have a lot of boys' suits at present that are from one-third to one-half under price. It will pay you to see them.

AN AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL.

Government May Establish One at Napanee.

Wednesday's Globe.

A deputation waited upon the Premier and Hon. Mr. Monteith at noon Tuesday, and asked that an experimental farm and agricultural school be established at or near Napanee. The usual consideration was promised. It is quite likely, however, that the request will be complied with at a comparatively early date, as the establishment of agricultural schools throughout the Province has long been part of the platform of the Ontario Conservative party. The request of yesterday's deputation was voiced by Mayor Geary. Messrs. J. W. Robinson, Chairman of the Board of Trade, G. P. Graham, Secretary of the Conservative Association, Ald. Spafford, W. J. Hanley, M.P.P. for Addington; Warden Martin, Warden of the united counties of Lennox and Addington, and T. Casselman, M.P.P. for Lennox.

MILSAP.

The lawn party given by kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Milsap at their grounds, for the benefit of St. Luke's church, Camden East, Wednesday evening, was voted by the large crowd present to be a tremendous success. The programme was as follows:—Mr. Geo. E. S. Radcliffe, congratulated Mr. and Mrs. S. Milsap and family, all who took part in the programme, and all who helped to make the lawn social the great success it was. Proceeds, about $30.00, will be used to repair the driving shed near the church at Camden East.

A SUCCESSFUL HORSEMAN.

Never allows his horse to suffer pain. He always uses Nerviline, which is noted for curing stiffness, rheumatism, sprains and lameness. Nerviline is just as good inside as outside. For colic and diarrhoea it's the best. It's a perfect marvel. In the good racing stables Nerviline is always used—because it makes better horses and smaller veterinary bills. Twenty-five cents buys a large bottle of Nerviline; try it.

Tennis, croquet, foot-ball, baseball and sports of various kinds were indulged in. A gramophone and camera were also on the grounds, and several snap shots were taken. All present seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves.

ONE DOLLAR SAVED REPRESENTS TEN DOLLARS EARNED.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. GOD'S PITY FOR A MAN

WITHOUT A COUNTRY INVOKED BY DR. TALMAGE.

THE GLORY OF PATRIOTISM

Twists the Usual Fourth of July Oration Theme Around and Shows How "the British Empire Has Conquered America," Until England Stands "Not a Conquered Rival, But a Conquering Friend."

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Marion Gunn, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 2.—In this sermon a new aspect is given to the patriotic holiday. The text is III John 14, "Our friends salute thee."

God pity the man without a country! God pity such a man as Philip Nolan, whom Edward Everett Hale pictures in his famous story, who, on account of his own sins, has lost the confidence and the respect of the people among whom he was born and who on account of those sins is excluded from the land of his birth. God pity the man who does not glory in the sacrifices and triumphs of his nation's heroes and heroines, who does not live in his country's hopes and who does not feel a thrill of honest pride when he mentions his birthplace and knows, as did Paul, "I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city." God pity, I say again, the man who does not feel in every part of his body, mind and soul that the land of his nativity is the best place in all the world in which to be born, that his people are the best people in all the world with whom to associate, does not hope that the place of his cradle will be the place of his sepulcher!

But as I began to think over my sermon which was to precede our national holiday, I said to myself, "Have we truly triumphed over England? Are we truly independent of our mother land? Has not the British nation conquered us in truth and in fact? Has she not and does she not annually send over great invading armies and annually by demand that we pay her not only gold, but things more precious than gold? Yes, yes," I said to myself, "England is not a conquered rival, but a conquering friend." And so I preached a patriotic sermon to show how the American nation has triumphed over the British Empire. I will call my theme around. I would tell how the British Empire has conquered America. And when I have got that fact and that fact impress upon us, so we in turn through them are helping to put our impress upon the whole world for civilization and for Christ."

The British Empire, in the first place, has conquered America by the power of the tongue. The first words that we learned to lisp at our mother's knee, the words that we shouted on the playground and spoke before the school desk, the words which we read in the morning newspaper and in library book and hear from our lecture platform and news stand are English words. The language of the American people is the language of England's rose and of Scotland's thistle and of Ireland's shamrock. The same tongue we speak was spoken for centuries in the British Isles. Therefore, though a new nation was born on July 4, 1776, it was not a new race. It was simply the Goddess of Liberty as a bride leaving the old English homestead and setting up in housekeeping for herself. She still belonged to the old English family. She still spoke the mother tongue. More than that, she was dominated by her mother's accustomed ways of thinking and doing things. And this tie of language which binds the American people to their British kindred can not be found binding us to any other nation on earth.

When two nations like the British people and the American people speak the same language they must inevitably be one in feeling. It does not make much difference whether we speak the English throne or who is in America's Presidential chair, the two nations are one. They are one because they have the same teachers. They are one because they have the same legends. They are one because they usually think alike, whether they will or no. This fact was beautifully illustrated some years ago when John Hay, then American Ambassador to London, spoke at the unveiling of the bust of Sir Walter Scott in Westminster Abbey.

"The books a boy reads," said Mr. Hay, "are then most ardently admired and longest remembered, and America revered in Scott when the country was young. I have heard from the lips of a pioneer in Kentucky, that in the early days of this century men would saddle their horses and ride twenty miles to the nearest village to get a new book. Every town of their region was a new book by the author of "Waverley" was expected. Through all the important formative days of the republic Scott was the favorite author of the Americans, and, while his writings may not be said to have had any direct influence in our material and political development, yet their influence was enormous upon the taste and the sentiments of a people peculiarly sensitive to such influences from the very circumstances of their environment. What John Hay said in reference to the influence of the pen of the Wizard of Abbotsford upon America can be said to a greater or a less extent of all the leaders of English and Scottish and Irish thought.

British thought cannot be divorced from American thinking. To the American mind a map of the British Isles is not a mere collection of city or town names. Each spot has a hallowed history on account of the men who have lived there and whose deeds of influence were transatlantic as well as cisatlantic. Some years ago I rode through Scotland and England on the coaches from Glasgow I went to Ayr. There I found that my youthful idol, Burns, once lived. From Ayr I went to Dumbarton and Stirling Castle. There I found that Bunker Hill was only an echo of Stirling Castle. Those self-sacrificing chiefs inspired America's independence. From Bannockburn I went to Edinburgh. There I stood by the graves of Guthrie and Chalmers and went into John Knox's old house and recognized these men as world builders. From Edinburgh I went down to the lake region and there found its poets, my poets. There I reverently walked in the roadside while a nurse led John Ruskin past me. There I visited him with his mind a Melrose abbey in ruins, but John Ruskin still—who wrote the books that are to be the inspiration of from there I went up to London. Almost every place I stopped I could go and find the grave of one of America's benefactors.

England has conquered America by the power of the tongue because the same linguistic doors are opened to both people the two nations are one in sympathy and one in life. Every year by all foreign lands are we separated by the sea that is "known as Babel, the towers of unknown tongues." Around these or over these but few of us have linguistic ambitions to go or to scale. But though between us and England rolls the Atlantic ocean 2,000 miles wide, the bridge of a common language spans it. Over that bridge every day walk the British statesmen, the British reformers, the British authors, the British preachers, the British leaders of thought. They come to us saying: "American, we are one." Every American, follow our customs. Americans, follow our ways of doing things." Take us to your hearts. We will be true to you. Our language is one. We need Washington and Lincoln. We have room for each other. We both sit at the feet of the same Gamaliels and Hillels. The Anglo-Saxon race must think and live alike." America is still held to England by the anchorage of the English tongue, the English book, English grammar and the English spelling book.

The British Empire has conquered us by the tongue, but not by that alone. Every year she sends over a great invading army. The army of invaders are stout of muscle and clear of eye and strong of limb. They have the bravery to cross the seas. And as soon as they can get a foothold here they they will send for their kith and kin and mothers and brothers and sisters to come and live with them in their new homes which they have built in the new land and which they are already beginning to rule. And have they not well fulfilled their business?

We find in America the English and the Scotch and the Irish families everywhere. Supposing I should ask all those whom I address to arise and say who were born in the British Isles and who are sons and daughters and grandchildren of ancestors who were born there, how many do you suppose would stand up? A twentieth? A tenth? A fourth? Yes, I think a fourth or even a third is not overstating the numbers. When the original thirteen colonies won their national independence we had all told in this country between three and four millions of people. We then had a smaller population than has the present city of New York. In a little over a hundred years we have nearly 80,000,000 inhabitants. Whence did these people come? From the cradle, can cradle? Yes. The American stork has delivered over here down the chimneys of many homes. But the American stork from 4,000,000 parents could not produce 80,000,000 sons and daughters in a little over a hundred years. The vast numbers of the American inhabitants to-day came over in ships sailing from Europe or their fathers or grandfathers came thus. And by far the largest proportion of these emigrants came as an invading army from the shores of England and Scotland and Ireland.

But, though the British Empire has won many successes in conquering as well as on sea with small armies and navies, she has not won her American victory by a small number of emigrants. From Glasgow and Liverpool and London during the last hundred years she has sent forth her sons and daughters by the hundreds of thousands and by the millions. Still that invading army is calling across the Atlantic for more re-enforcements. "Send me my brother and sister," calls back the Irish servant girl to her parents on Killarney lakes. "Let them come to me, and I will pay their way." "Send me the girl I once courted among the highlands or wooed under the heather on Scotland's hills," read to her, the tragic story of beautiful Queen Mary, who was born among yonder hills," writes the young American Scotchman who is winning a fortune in the new world. "Send me my sisters and I will pay their steerage fogs," writes the young Englishman who is running a Texas ranch. Have you as a national man ever stopped to consider how many American loan industries have been fostered and built up by British capital? How many Irish workmen have come here by millions and settled in our land and taken out naturalization papers. But the British capitalists, although many of them have come over here, have sent their moneys here and invested them here by the millions and millions of pounds. The British capitalists are saying to our miners, "You run my money" to our railroad men, "You run my railroads"; to our street railway car line presidents, "You run my street railways." Yes, the British capitalists have their moneys invested in our country by the millions of dollars. If all British capital were to be withdrawn from the manufactories and railroad stock and mining industries this country would hear the most awful financial crash the world has felt since man began to buy and sell for barter and gain. And, furthermore, one of the surest guarantees that England will never go to war against America is that, as a financial nation, she cannot afford to do so. She owns not only be fighting her own sons and daughters, but she would be destroying her own pocketbook. The British immigrant is here. The British millions are invested in American coal as well as in Sheffield cutlery and in factor factory or Belfast linen or Glasgow cotton.

If the British Empire dominates us in a linguistic and social and industrial way, how much more does she influence us in a religious way? Supposing our churches had been the outgrowth of the Spanish cathedral instead of the Scottish kirk. What would have happened? Supposing the men who laid the religious foundations of our theological seminaries had come from another class than the Puritans, the Covenanted by the spirit of Rev. John Robinson. Supposing the men who taught us our ideas of morality and right had not been inspired by the teachings of a John Knox. Would we still be the nation whose God is Lord, as we are to-day? Thank God that the gospel fires which are to-day burning upon American hearths were once started by the live coals of the old Puritans and the old covenanters.

As I believe the British Empire, under God, has religiously made this nation what it is, so I hope that the British Empire and the American people side by side, are going to dominate the world everywhere for Christ. It is all folly for any one to state that the American Government and the British Government are not working hand in hand. When war was about to be declared against Spain in order to liberate down-trodden Cuba, some one said to Mr. McKinley, "How is England? Will England uphold you in this war?" And the President replied: "England is all right. England is America's friend." Aye, yes, the British Government is our friend. She will always be our friend. Side by side the two English speaking nations shall ye settle the Asiatic troubles. Side by side they will yet settle the African and the Turkish troubles. As their christian missionaries in foreign lands are now working for a common Christian church, so ultimately their Christian soldiers shall yet work side by side to right all civil wrongs and to make war in the future an impossibility, for then public opinion and public policy will never be allowed to be aroused.

Why am I to-day preaching this sermon? Because I feel that it is about time for some one to lift a voice and rebuke the prevalent idea that England is our enemy, and that England, or, rather, the British Empire is jealous of us, or that we are jealous of England. I denounce the idea that, at the first chance, England and America, the maddened tigers, will leap at each other's throat. The second reason why I preach this sermon is that I want to turn our thoughts in love toward England and thereby hasten the work which the two nations, hand in hand, are bound to do for the salvation of the whole world for Christ. "But," says some one, "how can you claim that England is our friend? We have had three great foreign wars. Two of them were with England. During the civil war we almost had another bloody conflict with her. Can England be our friend?"

Oh, of course we have had a little trouble with England. We have had two or three big family rows. When you were growing up in your father's home all the children were not always at peace. Your mother every little while had to come to the rescue and pour oil upon the troubled waters. But those domestic troubles did not prove that the children were not true brothers and sisters love sisters. We have had a few domestic quarrels with the brothers and sisters across the seas. Our relatives living there are not saints. Perhaps some of the sinners are on this side of the Atlantic as well as on the other side. But, though we have had our national differences, they are only domestic differences. The two nations have the one great purpose for the civilization of the world for Christ. So let us one and all speak more about the good the British people have done us and the good they are doing us. Then by speaking about the good which our British brothers and sisters have done and are doing we will be drawn closer and closer together and as two nations be more able speedily to accomplish the work which God has given the English speaking race to do.

In closing this sermon I would end it with the sentiment with which Cyrus W. Field closed his speech at the Chamber of Commerce banquet of 1866. I would with this sentiment propose the toast: "England and America clasping hands across the sea. May this firm grasp unite the open door between the two nations which all peoples shall enter into and kneel in the great temple, where they will worship the universal fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man through Jesus Christ our Lord." Hallelujah! Then shall the sword be turned into the plowshare and the spear into the pruning hook. Then man shall never learn battle any more, and men shall not learn war any more. Amen and amen!

Noble Through Baptism.

Nobility is usually a heritage, but in the case of the Duke of Manchester the man the title was gained through baptism, and not through birth.

The circus business is hereditary abroad, and, appreciating the advantages secured to him as an unsaid cognomen, the son of a circus proprietor was baptized "Lord George Sanger." Since this menagerie has several times shown before Royalty, there are thousands who firmly believe that "Lord" George gained his title as did Sir Henry Irving and other titled actors.

As a trade mark the name has been worth hundreds of dollars to the exhibitor, and was responsible in a large measure for his early success—a success which continued until he was induced to form his circus into a stock company, on the Barnum & Bailey plan, when the interference of the directors prevented his unique methods of self-exploitation.

Gunmaking Depressed.

English gunmakers are suffering from the cessation of the South African peace, and all Enfield employes who have been doing so for some time are being discharged, the order affecting some 600 men. A case like this rathers deserve the sympathies. Of course it is too bad to have 600 men out of work, and perhaps 1,000 children in consequence going hungry. But would not the case be even worse if the factories were working overtime and guns being hurried to the front to make widows and orphans? A boom in gunmaking is not a thing to be desired. Whenever you see it you may be certain that preparations for killing people are afoot. The capital sunk in the business of warlike armaments is one of the most formidable obstacles to the reign of peace.

Insurance For Horses.

A London (Eng.) insurance company has established an agency in St. Louis to insure horses against all fatal curable horses. Any horse may be insured if he can pass an examination as to his quality and good health by a veterinary surgeon. The policies range from $250 to $10,000 and the rate is 6 per cent. under $5,000 and 5-12 per cent. above $5,000.

The new blood they actually make gives new strength and vigor to every organ in the body, and enables it to fight whatever disease attacks it. That is why they are the best medicine in the world for girls in their teens—or women in middle life— and to all those whose blood is weak, watery or impure.

Miss Mary E. Pratt, Blyth, Ont., gives strong testimony to the value of these pills She said, "I was a sufferer for many years from anaemia. I was completely run down, had frequent headaches, spells of dizziness and palpitation of the heart. I doctored all summer and was no better than when I began. I finally decided to give all hope of finding a cure when my brother advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got four boxes and when I had taken them I felt so much better that I got six boxes more, and before I had taken all these I was completely cured. I am more thankful than I can say for what the pills have done for me, as but for them I would not be enjoying good health to-day. I strongly urge all weak girls to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial."

Miss Pratt's experience proves the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to every weak and ailing person. These pills can be had from any medicine dealer or by mail from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50.

REX VS. COUNTY OF LENNOX AND ADDINGTON.

This case came on before His Honor Judge Price on the 27th inst., at the adjourned General Sessions of the Peace. The indictment herein was preferred against the County of Richmond against the County for the non repair of the Richmond and Sherfield Road, which the Township claimed was the County's property, the County disputing ownership. On the 14th inst. the Grand Jury brought in a true bill and the Court was adjourned until the 27th inst., when Mr. Wilson, acting as Counsel for the County, moved to have a bench warrant entered, having obtained through the Crown Attorney's office the consent of the Attorney General thereto. The Crown was represented by H. M. Deroche, C.C.A., of Belleville, Counsel for Richmond by S. Herrington and the County by W. Wilson. After argumente made the presiding Judge decided to grant the motion, whereupon the case terminated as a quasi Criminal. Case against our County Solicitor, Mr. Wilson, proceeded under the charge, and we understand the corporation of the Township of Richmond have come to an amicable arrangement as to roads in the Township to be assumed as County Roads.

CROYDON.

For last week.

The remains of Mrs. J. Richardson were interred in the cemetery adjoining the Presbyterian Church, Reidville, on Tuesday, June 27th, at 4 p.m. The services was preached by Rev. J. K. Henry, of Tamworth, the organist and choir rendered the musical portions of the service well. There was a large congregation present to show their respect and esteem for the deceased and her family, who are highly respected. Her husband predeceased her some years. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. J. Galbraith, surviving her. Her illness was a very long one as she had been in bed for a year. She was aged eighty-three years.

Our school teacher, Miss May Hall, intends leaving on a summer vacation. We are very sorry to think we have to part with Miss Hall, but may our loss be others' gain.

Mrs. Adam Campbell left a week ago Sunday to visit her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Campbell, Rochester, N.Y.

Miss Hall has five pupils going up to Tamworth for Entrance examination, viz., Ida Gertrude Close, Irvine Dowling and Messrs. Earl Galbraith, Stanley Teskey and Harold Galbraith.

Messrs. Carscallen & Wagar started a branch store in our town a short time ago, but owing to such a rushing business in Tamworth, they intend leaving us.

A very pretty event transpired at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. McKown, Croydon, on Thursday, June 1st, in the evening, when their only daughter, Miss Edna, became the bride of Mr. Peter Teskey. The bridegroom's present to the bride was a charming gold watch and chain. The bride was dressed in a handsome suit of cream figured basket cloth and a black chiffon hat. The next morning they left on the train for Toronto, Niagara Falls and other places

Misses Gertrude Close and A. M. Frizzell spent Sunday at Mildred Campbell's.

Mr. Percy Galbraith and sister, Miss Laura, of Brockville, are now visiting with their uncle, Mr. W. Galbraith.

Rumor says that an automobile will travel daily between Bath and Kingston for the purpose of carrying passengers and freight. I think Mr. Editor, that Morven people and vicinity should be favored with the same accommodation.

Sickly Children.

More children die during the hot weather months than at any other season of the year. Their vitality is then at its lowest ebb, and an attack of diarrhœa, cholera infantum or stomach trouble may prove fatal in a few hours. For this reason no home in which there are young children should be without a box of Baby's Own Tablets, which promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles. If the Tablets are given to a child they will prevent these ailments and keep the little one well and strong. Mrs. Joseph T. Pigeon, Ferguson, Que., says: "My little one was attacked with colic and diarrhœa, and I found Baby's Own Tablets so satisfactory that I would not now be without them in the house." These Tablets not only cure summer troubles, but all the minor ailments that affect infants and young children. They contain no opiate or harmful drug, and may be given with equal safety to the new born baby or well grown child. There are imitations of this medicine and mothers should see that the words, "Baby's Own Tablets" and the four-leaf clover with the child's head on each leaf is found on the wrapper around each box. As you value your child's health do not be persuaded to take a substitute for Baby's Own Tablets—the one medicine that makes children well or keeps them well. Sold by all druggists, or you can get them by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

One of the most successful events of the season was the social held at Mount Pleasant church, under the auspices of the Sunday School of that place, on Tuesday evening, June 27th. Ice cream and cake were served on the grounds and a programme was rendered. Mr. R. B. Allen, organist, as chairman, and also gave a solo which was highly applauded, and which he responded to with an encore. Songs and recitations were well rendered by local talent; also an instrumental duet by Miss Grace Rikely and Master Roy Grooms, and a dialogue by Miss Zellah Grooms and Miss Edith Woodcock being a pleasing part of the programme. Rev. R. Duke and Mr. Allen Oliver gave smart addresses. The most important part of the programme was a patromine drill, set to the music of the sacred song, "Nearer My God to Thee," rendered by nine young ladies, with Miss E. Woodcock as soloist and Mr. F. Oliver as organist. After a chorus of young people sing ing "The Land of the Maple", the social was brought to a close with a benediction by Rev. R. Duke. Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for

They are the prescription of a specialist.

This is an age of specialists,—men who give all their time, study, and practice to some particular branch of medicine. There are specialists of the eye, specialists in diseases of the lungs, specialists in diseases of women. It costs something to get a prescription from a specialist, but it is worth all it costs, when you get it.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women are the prescription of Dr. Hugo, of Paris, a specialist of forty years' experience in diseases of women.

It embraces the latest medical discoveries of the other skilled physicians in Paris, and should be called a compound prescription of the world's best specialists.

No ordinary physician can prescribe such a remedy. The better the physician, the nearer will be his prescription to that of Dr. Hugo.

Thousands of women in Europe have paid $50 for a consultation with Dr. Hugo and got the same remedy. Thousands more, if they received from it, it was worth $50, but it costs women now only 50c. for six dozen tablets—enough for an extended treatment.

It is a compound remedy containing all the tonics and alteratives that any woman can need, no matter what her condition. For women run down, or broken down condition, or any weakness peculiar to her sex, it is now acknowledged to be beyond doubt or question the best remedy available to-day. It makes healthy women.

A child who is old enough to study is old enough to wear glasses. Do not chance marring the life of the child by neglecting the sight. Eyestrain always renders study difficult and ultimately injures both body and mind. Glasses are not expensive.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

An old bachelor farmer in Grey County was being married to a young girl, and the preacher said:

"Jacob, you take this woman to be your wedded wife, to love and to cherish, in sickness and health, for better, and worse, for rich or poor, until death do you part?"

The groom seemed very much agitated, by these formal words, and looked helplessly around. At last he spoke:

"Here ain't no use makin' the old look for this wedd n' so darn gloomy," he burst out.

Nearly all infants are more or less subject to diarrhœa and such complaints while teething and as it is a fact of which there is no doubt, critical mothers should not be without a bottle of Mr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. This medicine is a specific for such complaints and is highly prized by those who have used it. The prospective claim it will cure any case of cholera or summer complaint.

"Oh, George, dear," she whispered, when he slipped the engagement ring on her tapering finger, "how sorry you to remember just the sort of ring I prefer. None of the boys were ever so thoughtful."

George was staggered for but a moment. Then he ram back with: "No! at all, dear, I'm generally so. This is the one I've always used."

She was inconsistent enough to cry about it.

In Fields Far Off.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is known and used in South and Central America as well as in Canada and the United States, and its consumption increases each year. It has made its own way, and is entitled to be done in keeping its name before the public. Everyone knows that it is to be had at any store, for all merchants keep it.

Kind Lady—Poor man! Wouldn't you like a nice chop?

The Hobo, suspiciously—What kind uv a chop, lady—lamb or woodshed?

Sure Regulators.—Mandrake and Dandelion are known to exert a powerful influence on the liver and kidneys, performing them to healthful action. Inducing a regular flow of the secretions imparting to the organs complete power to perform their functions. These valuable ingredients enter into the composition of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, and serve to render them the agreeable and salutary medicine they are. These are few pills so effective as they in their act on.

"George, dear," said the bride of six months, "the minister made me think that you gave him a $20 gold piece for marrying us."

"Well," replied George, "I don't mind his having bunkoed me out of the money, but he might have considered enough to refrain from boasting of it."

They Wake the Torpid Energies.—Machinery not properly cared for, and left to run itself, very soon shows fault in its working. It is the same with the digestive organs. Unregulated from time to time they are likely to become torpid and throw the whole system out of gear. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills were made to meet such cases. They restore to the full the flagging faculties, and bring into order all parts of the mechanism.

Mamma—Of course you said, "Oh, this is so sudden!" when Tom finally proposed.

Daughter—No; I fully intended to, but I was so excited I forgot and exclaimed, "At last!"

Help your children to grow strong and robust by counteracting anything that causes decay. Dr. Low's Tonic cures of disease in children is worms. Remove them with Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Other tablets.

"Phut's this?" exclaimed Michael, reading the legend on a new invention, "Phit, applied for?" "Faith, and while there's inny worrule to be done poor Pat is always applied for, bad luck to 'em."

Hostess—Shill I help you to the cake Tommy?

Tommy—No'm. Let me help myself first. Miss Gold me eat to help myself more'n once. You can help me all you please afterwards.

"Quick lunch" is one of the commonest of city signs. The sign doesn't say "healthful lunch" or "good food"—the character of the food apparently is not considered. It's just a quick lunch,—eat and get away. Is it any wonder that the stomach is abused? Food is thrown at it, sloppy, indigestible and insufficient food, very often, and the stomach has to do the best it can. Normally there should be no need for medical assistance for the stomach. But the strenuous modern life is abnormal and while the continues there will always be a demand for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is the one medicine which can be relied on to cure diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It is not a cureall. It is a medicine designed for the stomach and to cure through the stomach remote diseases which have their cause in the derangement of the stomach and digestive and nutritive system. It cures when all else fails.

WATERTOWN WEDDING

A very happy event took place on July 3rd, when Miss Maud Loucks second daughter of Mr. Michael Loucks, Wilson's Crossing, was united in matrimony to Mr. Joseph Byers of Carthage, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by Father Joy, Watertown, in the presence of friends. The bride was prettily dressed in a blue and white checked lansdown dress trimmed with cream silk lace, wore a picturesque hat of white lace, and carried a bunch of white roses. The bride is a popular young lady and has won many friends in this city. The happy couple took the six o'clock train for their home in Carthage, and showers of rice and good wishes from a host of friends who gathered at the station.

MORVEN'S FESTIVAL.

The ice cream and strawberry festival held in the White Church, Morven, on Tuesday, June 27th, was a decided success. A larger crowd than usual was out on the occasion. The strawberries and ice cream and other refreshments were everything that could be desired, and the committee and ladies who made provision for the evening reflected great credit upon themselves. The proceeds amounted to over $68.00. The entertainment consisted of speeches by the chairman, Principal Dean, B.A., of Newburgh, and Rev. J. F. Mears, of the same place. Both these gentlemen gave interesting addresses. Mrs. Rev. A. F. Stanley, of Echo Bay, delighted the audience with a recitation and two solos. Percy Joyce gave an instrumental selection, being accompanied by his mother, while the choir gave the opening and closing choruses. During the time occupied by the programme a very pleasing event occurred, when Rev. W. G. Boyce and his wife were made the recipients of two handsome quarter cut oak rocking chairs and a purse of money, toward which the congregations of the church, the White and the Lutheran churches contributed most heartily. These together with a suitable address, were presented by Mr. John Aylsworth Bell, Superintendent of the Morven Sunday School. Thus the old pastor and his wife were hidden God speed in their work upon their new field to which the Conference had appointed them. The pastor gratefully acknowledged the presents made, receiving them in the spirit in which they were given. The congregation joined in singing "God be with you till we meet again," and were dismissed.

FAMOUS PEOPLE

RALPH CONNOR

Copyright, Fleming H. Revell Co.

The Story of the Man and His Books

In the Highlands of Glengarry, in the district of a Canadian forest, Rev. Charles W. Gordon, better known to the reading world as Ralph Connor, was born in 1860. In his career, the markings of heredity and environment are more manifest than in most men, as some bands show the veins more strongly than others.

To the virility, intenseness, individuality and friend-making genius of his father, Rev. Daniel Gordon, a Scotch preacher and leader of stirring times in the woods through which he went to school, and where his early childhood days were spent, he grew into that close reverent love and communion with Nature which has become part of his very life, and pulsates through all his pages. At eleven, the removal of his family to another section gave him better school advantages, and prepared him for his course at Toronto University, from which he graduated in 1884 with high distinction; he was not a hard student, but passed his examinations seemingly by instinct. After a three years' course at Knox College, where prizes and scholarships dropped into his hands when he was not looking, he spent a year in Edinburgh and on the Continent to gain back his fleeting health.

On his return he went to Banff, the National Park of Canada, inhaling the pure, clear air of the mountains and the spiritual atmosphere that seemed nearer to God because nearer to unspoiled Nature. On Sundays he preached in the little Presbyterian Church to an audience of villagers and tourists, and it was such a home missionary in the Northwest that he grew discouraged over the small appropriation made for the work among the miners. His friend, the editor of "The Westminster" of Toronto, invited him to write his warm fire for funds through the pages of his paper, and, in accepting, Mr. Gordon decided that a strongly human story might win him its way to the hearts and purses of the people.

The story was "Black Rock," that virile, crisp series of pictures of life in the mining camps, that made their author famous. Then came "The Sky Pilot," "The Man From Glengarry," "Beyond the Marshes" and "The Prospector," all dealing with vitality—stories tender, humorous, picturesque, pathetic, strenuous in action and simple in thought.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by W. C. Black, at the Department of Agriculture.

GREAT SCOTT PICNIC.

The annual Scott picnic, held last Friday, on the "Hog's Back," on Mr. S. E. Scott's beautiful grove, proved to be a huge success.

The weather was perfect, warm and clear, and long before the noon hour the grove was alive with the merry throngs, friends and immediate relatives.

The amusements began at once and were only stopped by the welcome call of "dinner." Soon the great family was "rounded up" to a table one hundred feet in length, laden with the choicest nuts and fruits and delicacies of the season. So abundantly had all prepared that like Port Arthur, they were prepared for a great siege. While the table was surrounded Mr. E. W. Scott began his annual task of census-taking. In a few minutes the job was completed and one hundred and nine had responded. A number were missing who attended last year, while a few others appeared this year for the first time. After a very pleasant dinner hour, sports were again resumed and continued until the rain descended and the feasters came. After remaining under cover about half an hour, sunshine and smiles appeared again and along with them gallons of Mr. S. E. Scott's best made ice cream. Orders were soon given and all assembled on the table. Mr. Irvine Dyer, who had adjusted his camera and said "look pretty and be natural," and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Scott, the lad of an eye Fred, had the whole crowd on a smile. Gordon Dafoe, Mrs. Ida Dafoe, Mrs. Jack, the veteran picnicer, soon called the hosts to order, and after a few remarks moved a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Scott, who had spared no pains to welcome and entertain everyone. The motion was most heartily and unanimously supported. Mr. Sills announced that two foreigners were present, and called up on them for addresses. Rev. P. A. Scott, of Wheatland, N.D., and Mr. J. H. Scott, of Wallace, Idaho, briefly responded.

With hearty hand shakes and good-byes the crowd began to disperse, hoping to meet again next year.

The gramophone kindly furnished by Mr. Myles Hawley was in constant use. After rennin was very much enjoyed.

Misses Frank Dean and Garfield Sills appeared on the ground as Mr. and Mrs. Clown and created considerable merriment.

It was announced with gratitude that the death messenger had passed by every home during the year with only one exception, that of Mrs. Tracy Walbridge, who was called to her home on Saturday last week.

The following is a list of those present:

Mrs. Malinda Jackson, and Mrs. I. B. Sills, Mr. and Mrs. Irvine Dyer, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Sills, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Scott, Mr. and Mrs. A. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. At the late meeting of the Medical Council held in Toronto, Dr. T. S. Thornton, of Napanee, declared this incident, as coming under his personal observation, showing the contagious nature of consumption. A young girl from the village of Cressco had gone to visit relatives in Toronto. While there she has kissed a person afflicted with tuberculosis, and in this way contracted the malady. On her return to Cressco she was at once isolated by several friends in the village, and the disease there became affected with the disease and three deaths resulted. The matter he regarded as contagious as small-pox, and in order to stamp out, or at least prevent the spread, provision should be made so that consumption could be isolated and at the same time given the treatment necessary to their recovery."

GREAT NAPANEE!

Besides being one of the best business towns in Canada, and the finest residential spot in Central Ontario, Napanee has in the past sent forth lads that have been a credit to her in whatever sphere they were placed, and stand high on the Canadian honor roll. A despatch from Ottawa on Monday announces the promotion of two Napanee old boys, who are steadily climbing to the top of the ladder, as follows:

It is understood that Mr. W. J. Butler will succeed Mr. Schreiber as Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals. Mr. Butler's fitness for the office will be universally admitted. He has been identified with the construction of several large railway enterprises. As assistant engineer to the Transcontinental Commission he gave evidence of possessing the very qualities which are indispensable to success in the new position upon which he is about to enter. He has an intimate knowledge of railway construction, and, combined with it, possesses keen business insight, systematic methods of work, and all the firmness of a disciplinarian. His youth and physique lend ample scope on the transcontinental Railway for the exercise of new improvements in public interest will always be welcome.

BALFOUR-DAVIS.

A very pretty wedding ceremony took place Wednesday morning, June 14th, at 11 o'clock, at the farm residence of Samuel Balfour, west of Hannah, when Miss Maud Balfour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Balfour, was united in marriage to Mr. Fred. R. Davis, eldest son of the late M. W. Davis, of Adolphustown. The ceremony was conducted by Rev Mr. Irwine, of Oshabrook. The parlor, where the ceremony took place, was profusely decorated with lilacs and potted plants and made an impressive setting as the young couple took the solemn vow. After the ceremony a veritable wedding banquet was partaken of, the guests present being the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The estimable young bride needs no introduction as she has resided in the vicinity since girlhood, and is beloved by all for her kind disposition and rare womanly qualities. The groom is well and favorably known as an industrious and progressive young man and has the esteem of all. Many and valuable were the gifts as a popularity of the bride and groom. They left via the Great Northern for a sojourn at Winnipeg and Toronto, they will be at home on their farm near the new end town. The the day was cloudy we noticed that each cloud had its silver lining, and with the ample supply of rice distributed at the depot, we feel safe in predicting for their matrimonial bark, so auspiciously launched, a safe and storm-free voyage. Congratulations. —Hannah, North Dakota, Press.

WATER IN YOUR BLOOD?

Lots of people have this watery woe—they eat plenty but don't digest. When digestion is poor, food is not converted into blood-nourishment—in consequence the body rapidly loses strength. To positively renew health, nothing equals Ferrozone. It excites sturdy appetite—makes the stomach digest arms like sunshine blood. Abundant strength is sure to follow. If you crave more vitality, more energy, better nerves—then use Ferrozone the medical triumph of this age. Fifty cents buys a box of fifty chocolate coated Ferrozone tablets.

"Royal Household" Flour

Gives Stomach Less Work and Body More Strength.

No flour in the world is so nourishing, so vitalizing, so rich in all the elements of body, bone and brain building as pure, well-balanced, white flour.

Bran in bread is just so much wood fibre—so much extra work for the stomach—there is no nourishment in it for man. Cattle digest it and get nourishment from it because nature has given them a fermenting plant and double chewing facilities.

But man masticates once and digests once. For that reason he gets nothing whatever out of anything but the gluten portion of wheat—the inside of the grain—the part which yields protein. And he gets more out of Royal Household Flour because more of the branny and waste portions are removed in making it than from any other flour.

The Royal Household Mills eliminate more bran and snorts than any other mill—therefore Royal Household Flour is the most nourishing flour in the world.

MR. PECK'S INDUCTION.

Rev. W. W. Peck, M.A., LL.B. was inducted into his new charge, St. Andrew's Church, Arnprior, June 20th last with the usual ritual and ceremonies of the Presbyterian Church. It was the third such event in the history of the congregation, and the first since 1871. It was therefore created universal interest in the town and congregation. The beautiful church was crowded, and the ceremony most impressive. In the evening a public reception was given to the new pastor. Mr. Peck's many friends in Napanee and vicinity wish him and his wife every success and happiness in their new home and sphere of labor.

A WOMAN WHO SUCCEEDED

Writing of "American Women in Business" in the New Idea Woman's Magazine for August, Miss Elizabeth Howard, of Westwood, says "If you talk to the heads of business concerns which employ large numbers of women, they will tell you stories which tax your credulity. One of Chicago's biggest department stores has as the buyer of its jewelry a woman who started in as messenger girl twelve years ago. Her parents were the poorest Russian immigrants She was kept in school only until she was of working age. From the first she showed unusual intelligence and industry, and has risen rapidly from step to step until she now draws a salary of $5,000 a year, and makes nearly as much again on her commissions. She has passed many men in her race and won out entirely on the grounds of her industrial efficiency. This is, of course, a case so unusual that it seems almost to belong to the class of miraculous occurrences. But it has proved that, given the ability, sex is no obstacle."

W. D. MACE IN A NEW ROLE.

Speaking of Mr. Mace's visit, the Wetaskiwin Post says: "Mr. Day drove out with Mr. Ellis and Mr. W. D. Mace, of Winnipeg, who is engaged in the manufacture of carriages in that city, on a tour of inspection over the company's land. The result of the trip has been that one of the most important sales made this season has been put through. Mr. Day disposing of ten sections of the lands to these gentlemen—five sections to Mr. Ellis and five to Mr. Mace, the latter gentleman will at once go into action on five more sections for a few days. The Post had the pleasure of a little chat with Messrs. Mace and Ellis on Wednesday morning and both gentlemen are delighted with Alberta and this district. The great fact of each of them purchasing five sections of land is an indication that they know what they are about. Mr. Mace, who is a well-known authority in these matters, in conversation with us, stated that he had never, in all his travels in Western Canada, seen such an immense quantity of land in one block, the entire acreage being suitable and fit for farming. He did not think that Mr. Day's land could be duplicated anywhere.

THE WINGS OF THE MORNING

BY LOUIS TRACY.

Mir Jan returned the revolver.

"Sahib," he said, with another salaam, "I am a disgraced man, but if you will take me up there with you I will fight by your side until both my arms are hacked off. I am weary of these thieves. Ill chance threw me into their company. I will have no more of them. If you will not have me on the rock, give me a gun. I will hide among the trees, and I promise that some of them shall die tonight before they find me. For the honor of the regiment, sahib, do not refuse this thing. All I ask is if your honor escapes that you will write to Kurnal Lalpenge-sahib and tell him the last act of Mir Jan, corporal in B troop."

Jenks was profoundly moved. He reflected how best to utilize the services of this willing murderer without exposing him to certain death in the manner suggested. The native misinterpreted his silence.

"I am not a rascal, sahib," he exclaimed proudly. "I only killed a man because"—

"Listen, Mir Jan. You cannot well mend what you have said. The Dyaks, you are sure, will not come before morning?"

"They have carried the wounded to the boats and are making the lad in the boat, and the man pulling stroke smashed a stout oar with the next wrench.

And so they met at last, and the sailors left them alone to crowd round Anstruther, and ply him with a hundred questions. Although he fell in with their humor and gradually pieced together the stirring story which was supplemented each instant by the arrival of disconsolate Dyaks and the comments of the men who returned from cave and beach, his soul was filled with the sight of Iris and her father and the happy, inconsequent demands with which each sought to ascertain and relieve the extent of the other's anxiety.

Then Iris called to him:

"Robert, I want you."

The use of his Christian name created something akin to a sensation. Sir Arthur Deane was startled, even in his immeasurable delight at finding his child uninjured, the picture of rude health and happiness.

Anstruther advanced.

"This is my father," she cried, shrill with joy. "And, father darling, this is Captain Robert Anstruther to whom alone, under God's will, I owe my life many, many times since the moment the Sirdar was lost."

And so they met at last.

It was no time for questioning. Sir Arthur Deane took off his hat and held out his hand.

"Captain Anstruther," he said, "as I owe you my daughter's life I owe you that which I can never repay. And I owe you my own life too, for I could not have survived the knowledge that she was dead."

Robert took the proffered hand.

"I think, Sir Arthur, that of the two I am the more deeply indebted. There are some privileges whose value cannot be measured, and among them the privilege of restoring your daughter to your arms takes the highest place."

Then he turned to Iris.

"I think," he said, "that your father should take you on board the Orient, Iris. There you may perhaps find some suitable clothing, eat something and recover from the exciting events of the morning. Afterward you must bring Sir Arthur ashore again, and we will guide him over the island. I am sure you will find much to tell him meanwhile."

The baronet could not fail to note the manner in which these two addressed each other, the fearless love which leaped from eye to eye, the calm acceptance of a relationship not to be questioned or gainsaid. Neither had Iris, without spoken word on the subject, had tactily agreed to avoid the slightest semblance of subterfuge as unworthy alike of their achievements and their love.

"Your suggestion is admirable," cried Sir Arthur. "The ship's stores may provide Iris with some sort of rig-out, and an old friend of hers is on board at this moment, little expecting her presence. Lieutenant Ventnor has accompanied me in my search. He will, of course,

Do you remember the little things that gave us so much pleasure when we were young? With what zest did we sit down to the table after our play was over and eat the mush and milk our mother put before us. But as we got older it takes more to give us pleasure. Mush and milk no longer tastes good to us, and our digestion may be impaired. The best advice we can give to such a person is to tone up the stomach with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is nature's most valuable and health-giving agent—made without the use of alcohol. It contains roots, herbs and barks, and is the concentration of nature's medicines as found in the fields and woods. This remedy has a history of 35 years as well for it because it was given to the public by Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., nearly forty years ago, and has since been sold by druggists in ever increasing quantities. Some medicines, tonics or compounds, enjoy a large sale for a few years, then disappear from the public attention, but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proved such a reliable blood remedy and tonic that it often enjoys the confidence of several generations in a family, and is increased sales year by year coming from the recommendations of those who have tried it, prove its lasting merit, so that every bottle bears the stamp of public approval. Every other blood-maker and tonic for the stomach that we know of is daily advised, but Dr. Pierce guarantees that no alcohol is contained in his "Medical Discovery."

Anstruther flushed a deep bronze, but Iris broke in:

"Father, why did he come with you?"

Sir Arthur, driven into this sudden squall of explanation, became dignified.

"Well, you see, my dear, under the circumstances he felt an anxiety almost commensurate with my own."

"But why, why?"

Iris was quite calm. With Robert near, she was courageous. Even the perturbed baronet experienced a new sensation as his troubled glance fell before her searching eyes. His daughter had left him a mere child, a spoiled girl. He found her a woman, strong, self reliant, purposeful. Yet he kept on, choosing the most straightforward means as the only possible way of clearing a course so beset with unsuspected obstacles.

"It is only reasonable, Iris, that your affianced husband should suffer an agony of apprehension on your account and do all that was possible to effect your rescue."

"My—affianced—husband?"

"Well, my dear girl, perhaps that is hardly the correct phrase from your point of view. Yet you cannot fail to remember that Lord Ventnor"—

"Father, dear," said Iris solemnly, but in a voice free from all uncertainty, "my affianced husband stands here. We plighted our troth at the very gate of death. It was ratified in the presence of God and has been blessed by him. I have made no compact with Lord Ventnor. He is a base and unworthy man. Did you but know the truth concerning him you would not mention his name in the same breath with mine. Would he, Robert?"

"Be advised by me, Sir Arthur, and you, too, Iris," he said. "This is no hour for explanations. Leave me to deal with Lord Ventnor. I am content to trust the ultimate verdict to you, Sir Arthur. You will learn in due course all that has happened. Go on board, Iris. Meet Lord Ventnor as you would meet any other friend. You will not marry him, I know. I can trust you."

"I am very much obliged to you," murmured the baronet, who, notwithstanding his worry, was far too experienced a man of the world not to acknowledge the good sense of this advice, no matter how ruffling might be the guise of the strange person who gave it.

"That is settled, then," said Robert, laughing good naturedly, for he well knew what a weird spectacle he must present to the bewildered old gentleman.

"Even Sir Arthur Deane was fascinated by the ragged and hairy giant who carried himself so masterfully and helped everybody over the stile at the right moment. He tried to develop the change in the conversation.

"By the way," he said, "how came you to be on the Sirdar? I have a list of all the passengers and crew, and your name does not appear therein."

"Oh, that is easily accounted for. I shipped as a steward in the name of Robert Jenks."

"Robert Jenks! A steward!"

"Yes. That forms some part of the promised explanation."

Iris rapidly gathered the drift of her lover's wishes.

"Come, father," she cried merrily. "I am aching to see what the ship's stores, which you and Robert pin your faith to, can do for me in the shape of garments. I have the utmost belief in the British navy, and even a skeptic should be convinced of its infallibility if H. M. S. Orient is able to provide a lady's outfit."

Sir Arthur Deane gladly availed himself of the proffered compromise. He assisted Iris into the boat, though that active young person was far better able to support him, and a word to the officer in command sent the gig flying back to the ship. Anstruther during a momentary delay made a small request on his own account. Lieutenant Playdon, nearly as big a man as Robert, dispatched a note to his servant, and the gig speedily returned with a complete assortment of clothing and linen. The man also brought a dressing case, with the result that a dip in the bath and ten minutes in the hands of an expert valet made Anstruther a new man.

Acting under his advice, the bodies of the dead were thrown into the lagoon, the wounded were collected in the hut, to be attended to by the ship's surgeon, and the prisoners were paraded in front of Mir Jan, who identified every man and confirmed by counting heads that none was missing.

Robert did not forget to write out a formal notice and fasten it to the rock. This proceeding further mystified the officers of the Orient, who had gradually formed a connected idea of the great fight made by the shipwrecked party, though Anstruther squirmed inwardly when he thought of the manner in which Iris would picture the scene. As it was, he had the first misgivings, and he did not fail to use the opportunity, in the few terse words which the militant Briton best understands he described the girl's fortitude, her unflagging cheerfulness, her uncomplaining readiness, to do and dare.

When he ended, the first lieutenant, who commanded the boats sent in pursuit of the flying Dyaks—the Orient rank both sampans as soon as they were launched—summed up the general verdict:

"You do not need our admiration, Captain Anstruther. Each man of us envies you from the bottom of his soul."

"There is no error about my rank," he said. "I did once hold a commission in the Indian army, but I was court martialed and cashiered in Hongkong six months ago. I was unjustly convicted on a grave charge, and I hope before long to clear myself. Meanwhile I am a mere civilian. It was only Miss Deane's generous sympathy which led her to mention my former rank, Mr. Playdon."

Had another of the Orient's twelve pounder shells suddenly burst in the midst of the group of officers it would have created less dismay than this unexpected avowal. Court martialed! Cashiered! None but a service man can grasp the awful significance of those words to the commissioned ranks of the army and navy.

Anstruther well knew what he was doing. Somehow he found nothing hard in the performance of these penances now. Of course the ugly truth might be revealed the moment Lord Ventnor heard his name. It was not fair to the good fellows crowding around him and offering every attention that the frank hospitality of the British sailor could suggest to permit them to adopt the tone of friendly equality which rigid discipline if nothing else would not allow them to maintain.

The first lieutenant by reason of his rank was compelled to say something.

"That is a devilish bad job, Mr. Anstruther," he blurted out.

"Well, you know I had to tell you."

He smiled unaffectedly at the wondering circle. He, too, was an officer and appreciated their sentiments. They were unfeignedly sorry for him, a man so brave and modest was a splendid type of the soldier and gentleman, yet by their common law an outcast. Nor could they wholly understand his demeanor. There was a noble dignity in his candor, a conscious innocence that disdained to shield itself under a partial truth.

The first lieutenant again phrased the thoughts of his juniors.

"I and every other man in the ship cannot help but wonder what is behind it. But whatever may be your record—if you were an escaped convict, Mr. Anstruther—no one could withhold from you the praise deserved for your magnificent stand against overwhelming odds. Our duty is plain. We will bring you to Singapore, where the others will no doubt wish to go immediately. I will tell the captain what you have been good enough to acquaint us with. Meanwhile we will give you every assistance and—er—attention in our power."

A murmur of approbation ran through the little circle. Robert's face paled somewhat. What first rate chaps they were, to be sure!

"I can only thank you," he said unsteadily. "Your kindness is more trying than adversity."

A rustle of silk, the intrusion into the intent knot of men of a young lady in a Paris gown, a Paris hat, carrying a Trouville parasol and shod in exquisitely gloved and booted, made every one gasp.

"Oh, Robert, dear, how could you? I actually didn't know you!"

Thus Iris, bewitchingly attired, was gazing now with provoking admiration at Robert, who certainly offered almost as great a contrast to his former state as did the girl herself. He returned her look with interest.

"Would any man believe," he laughed, "that clothes would do so much for a woman?"

"What a left handed compliment! But come, dearest. Captain Fitzroy and Lord Ventnor have come ashore with father and me. They want us to show them everything! You will excuse him, won't you?" she added, with a seraphic smile to the others.

They walked off together.

"Jimmy?" gasped a fat midshipman to a lanky youth. "She's got on your togs!"

Meaning that Iris had ransacked the Orient's theatrical wardrobe and pounced on the swell outfit of the principal female impersonator in the ship's company.

CHAPTER XVI.

LORD VENTNOR was no fool. While Iris was transforming herself from a semi-savage condition into a creature of an ultra chic Parisienne, Sir Arthur Deane told the earl something of the state of affairs on the island.

His lordship, a handsome, saturnine man, cool, insolently polite, counseled patience, toleration, even silent recognition of Anstruther's undoubted claims for services rendered.

"She is an enthusiastic, high spirited girl," he urged upon his surprised hearer, who expected a very different expression of opinion. "This fellow Anstruther is a plausible sort of rascal, a good man in a tight place, too—just the sort of fire eating blackguard who would fill the heroic bill where a fight is concerned. Hang him, he licked me twice!"

Further amusement for the shipowner.

"Yes, it's quite true. I interfered with his little games, and he gave me the usual reward of the devil's apothecary. Leave Iris alone. At present she is strung up to an intense pitch of gratitude, having barely escaped a terrible fate. Let her come back to the normal. Anstruther's shady record must gradually leak out. That will disgust her. He is hard up—cut off by his people and that sort of thing. There you probably have the measure of his scheming. He knows quite well that he can never marry your daughter. It is all a matter of price."

Sir Arthur willingly allowed himself to be persuaded. At the back of his head there was an uneasy consciousness that it was not "all a matter of price." If it were he would never trust a man's face again. But Ventnor's well balanced argument swayed him. The course indicated was the only decent one. It was humanly impossible for a man to chide his daughter and flout her rescuer within an hour of finding them.

Lord Ventnor played his cards with a deeper design. He bowed to the inevitable. Iris said she loved his rival. Very well. To attempt to dissuade her was to throw her more closely into that rival's arms. The right course was to appear resigned, saddened, compelled against his will to reveal the distressing truth. Further, he counted on Anstruther's quick temper as an active agent. Such a man would be the first to rebel against an assumption of pitying tolerance. He would bring bitter charges of conspiracy, of unbelievable compact to secure his ruin. All this must recoil on his own head when the facts were laid bare. Not even the hero of the island could prevail against the terrible indictment of a court martial. Finally, at Singapore, three days distant, Colonel Costobeli and his wife were staying. Lord Ventnor, alone of those on board, knew this. Indeed, he accompanied Sir Arthur Deane largely in order to break off a somewhat trying entanglement. He smiled complacently as he thought of the effect on Iris of Mrs. Costobeli's indignant remonstrances when the baronet asked that injured lady to tell the girl all that had happened at Hongkong.

However, Lord Ventnor was most profoundly annoyed, and he cursed Anstruther from the depths of his heart. But he could see a way out.

He came ashore with Iris and her father. The captain of the Orient also joined the party. The three men watched Robert and the girl walking toward them from the group of officers.

"Anstruther is a smart looking fellow," commented Captain Fitzroy. "Who is he?"

Truth to tell, the gallant commander of the Orient was secretly amazed by the metamorphosis effected in Robert's appearance since he scrutinized him through his glasses.

Poor Sir Arthur said not a word, but his lordship was quite at ease.

"From his name and from what Deane tells me I believe he is an ex-officer of the Indian army."

"Ah! He has left the service?"

"Yes. I met him last in Hongkong."

"Then you know him?"

"Quite well, if he is the man I mean."

"That is really very nice of Ventnor," thought the shipowner. "The last thing I should credit him with would be a forgiving disposition."

Meanwhile Anstruther was reading Iris, a little lecture. "Sweet one," he explained to her, "do not allude to me or my former rank. I am not entitled to it. Some day, please God, it will be restored to me. At present I am a mere civilian, and, by the way, Iris, during the next few days say nothing about our mine."

"Oh, why not?"

"Just a personal whim. It will please me."

"If it pleases you, Robert, I am satisfied."

He pressed her arm by way of answer. They were too near to the waiting trio for other comment.

"Captain Fitzroy," cried Iris, "let me introduce Mr. Anstruther to you. Lord Ventnor, you have met Mr. Anstruther before."

The sailor shook hands. Lord Ventnor smiled affably.

"Your enforced residence on the island seems to have agreed with you," he said.

"Admirably. Life here had its drawbacks, but we fought our enemies in the open. Didn't we, Iris?"

"Yes, dear. The poor Dyaks were not sufficiently modernized to attack us with false testimony."

His lordship's sallow face wrinkled sonlewhat. Iris knew of the court martial, nor was she afraid to proclaim to all the world that this man was her lover." As for Captain Fitzroy, his bushy eyebrows disappeared into his peaked cap when he heard the manner of their speech.

Nevertheless Ventnor smiled again.

"Even the Dyaks respected Miss Deane," he said.

But Anstruther, sorry for the manifest uneasiness of the shipowner, repressed the retort on his lips and forthwith suggested that they should walk to the north beach in the first instance, that being the scene of the wreck.

During the next hour he became author rather than narrator. It was Iris who told of his wild fight against wind and waves; Iris who showed them where he fought with the devilfish; Iris who expatiated on the long days of ceaseless toil, his dauntless courage in the face of every difficulty, the way in which he rescued her from the clutch of the savages, the skill of his preparations against the anticipated attack and the great achievement crowning all, when time after time he foiled the Dyaks' best laid plans and flung them off, crippled and disheartened, during the many phases of the thirty hours' battle.

There were tears in her eyes when she ended, but they were tears of thankfulness and pride that this woman's love could never be his. The knowledge excited his passion the more. His hatred of Anstruther now became a mania, an inscrutable resolve to mortally stab this meddler who always stood in his path.

Robert hoped that his present ordeal was over. Leave Iris alone. At present she is strung up to an intense pitch of gratitude, having barely escaped a terrible fate. Let her come back to the normal. Anstruther's shady record must gradually leak out. That will disgust her. He is hard up—cut off by his people and that sort of thing. There you probably have the measure of his scheming. ADVERTISING NUGGETS.

Bread is the staff of life, and advertising is the staff of success.

You can't eat enough in a week to last a year, and you can't advertise on that plan either.

A thing worth doing is worth doing well. A thing worth advertising is worth advertising well.

The enterprising advertiser proves that he understands how to buy, because in advertising he knows how to sell.

If you can arouse curiosity by an advertisement it is a great point gained. The fair sex don't hold all curiosity in the world.

People who advertise only once in three months forget that most people in business remember anyone longer than about seven days.

A constant dropping will wear a rock. Keep dropping your advertisements on the public, and they will soon melt under it like rock-salt.

Shutting advertising in dull times is like tearing out a dam because the water is low. Either plan will prevent good times from coming.

A man's sign offers a constant invitation to those only who pass his place of business, his circular can only reach those to whom personal attention is given, but his announcement in a newspaper goes into the highways and byways, finding customers and compelling them to consider his arguments.

Secretary Hodgetts reported to the Provincial Board of Health that in the last quarter 500 deaths resulted from tuberculosis in Ontario.

The Toronto License Commissioners declare that the majority of the city hotels are run merely as drinking places. Three licenses are to be cancelled.

Napanee's Greatest ...Store. THE Robinson Co.

Store closes Friday, July 14th, 21st, 28th, and August 4th and 11th at 12 30 sharp.

The business of this store is greater than ever—so much so as to be widely commented on. What's back of it? Why does this store keep on growing? To ensure it is the largest store in Napanee, but that doesn't account for the growth. It is good service. Napanee has not another store so comfortable to deal with, so liberal.

Two Rousing Shirt Bargains for Men

We secured from a New York Wholesale House a case of over twenty dozen Shirts this week. They had more of these lines than they could handle, and therefore we bought them at much less than their value.

The goods are American Percales and Ginghams. They would be cheap at 50c. Your choice while they last at 39c, 2 for 75c, 3 for $1.

SECOND LOT consists of five dozen Blue Grey Chambray Men's Working Shirts and five dozen Black Drill with white stripes working shirts. They are light and cool in weight for summer. The regular value is 50c. Your choice 39c, 2 for 75c, 3 for $1.

Millinery Bargains.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in three expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. WHOLESOME WARNING

SHUN EVIL COMPANIONSHIP AND FOOLHARDY RISKS.

TWO BIG THINGS TO AVOID

Real Courage Does Not Rashly Court Danger, Either Moral or Physical, But Rather Avoids All Picture of Noble, Brave and Self-Reliant Old Age, Farseeing and Inspiring Through Carefulness.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada in the year 1905, by Frederick Dwyer, of Toronto at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 9.—In this sermon the preacher gives wholesome warning against foolhardy risks and evil companionships and shows that real courage does not rashly court danger, either moral or physical, but rather avoids it. The text is "Ecclesiastes xii. 5, "They shall be afraid of that which is high."

What is the Biblical picture of my text? More physical decadence and mental decrepitude? Do we find here, as a dear friend of mine some time ago tried to prove to me, simply a man hale, hearty, toothless, stiff jointed, rheumatic, palsied, helpless old man, being wheeled around in an invalid chair or hobbling about on a crutch or grunting and groaning on a bed of chronic invalidism? Is he a nervous wreck, a white haired, timorous old patriarch afraid of his own shadow? Is he a cowardly person, who, realizing his own physical infirmities with a diseased mind, is conjuring up a lot of imaginative dangers if there are no real dangers at hand? I think not. I believe that the writer is here picturing old age, but it the noble, brave and self reliant old age which your father and mine had when they drew near the end of their earthly career. It is not the pitiable old age of senile cowardliness. It is the farsighted, in spiring old age of caretaking cautiousness which generally comes from the bitter experiences of misfortunes. To be cautious is not necessarily to be cowardly. To be reckless is not necessarily to be brave. The reason some young folks are reckless is because they do not realize the dangers at hand, against which as sensible men and women they should careful.y protect themselves.

Let me illustrate. You call me up on the telephone and say: "Hello! Is that you? Will you take a drive this afternoon? All right. I will be up with the carriage in twenty minutes." When I drive up with the carriage I see that you have a beautiful, high-st pitched, mettlesome thoroughbred. When I enter the runabout I see you hold the reins tight. You speak gently and soothingly to your horse. You tone of your voice and by the way you han dle the lines, I see that you are a good driver, and I feel perfectly safe. But supposing I enter your carriage and see you jerk the lines. Then you let them lie loose; then you holler at the horse or cut him with the whip. What do I do? Why, I simply get out of that carriage and walk home, not because I am a coward, but because I know that you do not know how to drive a mettlesome horse. I know what that means. I have once ridden behind a fractious colt, with just such an inexperienced driver as you are, and I was nearly killed. I have risen from that ride neck and my life than to trust it into such incompetent hands again. When I was a young man I did not care what kind of a horse I rode behind or what kind of a driver had hold of the lines, but from bitter experience now I know about such dangers and give them a very wide berth. Such, I think, is the distinction of my text. We are the old man not cowardly, but cautious; we see him afraid of that which is high because past experience has written over such places "Beware!" "This is a danger sign, "Beware!"

But do we have to wait until old age before we become wisely cautious. Not only is it the duty of all men to be careful and run no needless risks, but it is certainly the duty of young men to learn from others the value of "loving cautiousness." There is as much—aye, so very much—depending on most of us younger folks that we as-sume families of little children who are looking to us for their daily bread. We are also responsible for our useful-ness which can bless all mankind about us. Thus, instead of telling my hearers to be needlessly reckless, I would tell those in youth and those in the prime of strength, middle life to be "lovingly cautious." Be cautious for your own sakes. Especially be cautious for your dear ones and for the good which you may do for Christ and for the great outside world. No man has a right to put even the contagious ward of a hospital, then there you should go. I do not say that you should be a rifle and charge the enemy upon a bloody battlefield for your country's cause unless you have to go there and fight. But, if duty does not command you to endanger your physical life, then you have no right to run any reckless risks.

Useless recklessness is not the sign of a sublime bravery, but of arrogant and insipid stupidity. General William T. Sherman on his famous march from Atlanta to the sea powerfully taught this truth. For days and weeks and weary months Joseph E. Johnston and he had been playing hide and seek behind their opposing breast works. First would come the brilliant flanking movement, then the brave charge, then the quick retreat and the readjustment of the Confederate lines and the building up of new breast works. One day the commander was standing in a dangerous position on a certain fortification. He was telling his engineers how the defenses should be laid out. The bullets in regular battle were flying about him and plowing up the ground on every side. A chaplain of one of the regiments climbed up into the exposed position by Sherman's side. "What are you doing here?" asked Sherman in his blunt, gruff manner. "Have you any message for me?" "No, general," answered the chaplain. "I merely came up to view the enemy's position. If you are willing to face danger here I should be willing to do so." "I am here for duty's sake," answered Sherman. "I am not here for curiosity. You have no right to uselessly risk your life. Go below at once. You are doing no good herein whatever." What General William T. Sherman said to that chaplain I say to you and your children depending upon you, with your store depending upon you, with your church, in our social relations upon you. You have no right to run any useless physical risks.

But, though this truth should be axiomatic, on every hand we find men trying to prove to the world that they are brave merely because they are foolishly reckless. Some time ago I stood in Yosemite Park, looking upon the great Half Dome, rising nearly 5,000 feet from the valley below. There is a trail running up to the summit, which is one hundred feet of the summit. Then the rock ascends almost perpendicularly to the top. As I stood looking at that height a gentleman told me that in 1875 a Scotchman made up his mind he would ascend to the top of the Half Dome. To ascend it would do no one any good. It would only gratify his own life. But ascend it he would. So he went and got a lot of iron pegs. He would drill an iron hole into the side of the Half Dome and then stick a peg into the hole. Then he would crawl up and stand upon that peg and drill another hole and shove in another peg until at last, after days of weary work, he stood upon "Tis-sack-a-rah-ah-ah-ah." I said to myself, "how like the foolish actions of that man are to many in our actions! We risk our physical lives for nothing. Down at the seashore we swim away out beyond the breakers and make people think we are brave. We go fishing in cranky boats. We climb dangerous heights. We ride fractious horses. We run needless risks to bene fit no one." Avoid that which is high. Be wise, and shun foolish and reckless physical dangers. Lovingly cautious should we be in reference to our physical life.

Lovingly cautious, also, should we be in reference to our good names. It is the gilt frame which holds the artistic masterpiece in safety. How much more precious must Gilbert Stuhnburn's "Horse Fair" than the wood which holds the canvas of the great French animal painter? The setting of a jewel is valuable, how much more valuable must be the "Pitt diamond," which flashed from the golden hilt of the court sword which Napoleon I. wore on the day of his coronation? If a man's physical life is valuable how much more valuable is his good name, by means of which that physical life can be made of some practical good to his fellow men as well as to himself. And yet just think how many some are ready to risk their good names as well as their physical existence!

In the first place, for a little social preferment, they are ready to risk their good names by evil associations. Men and women are always judged by the associates they have. You know the fact as well as I know it. You cannot get around it. Remember, on the other day the name of a young lady whom I was very anxious to have join our church was linked with a man which I have said, "Is it not too bad that Miss Bon-ano does not join the church and become a good Christian worker? She seems to be such a nice girl." A church officer replied to me, "Well, I do not know whether she is a nice girl or no, but one thing I do know, she associates with men about this town who are everywhere noted for their immoralities and indecencies—men whom I would not allow to associate with my wife or daughters. That does not speak very well of her Christian character." What could I say? I could answer nothing. Good men and good women, as a rule, do not make companions of bad men and bad women. And yet to-day that is just what some of us are doing for social preferment. Like the Scotchman who risked his physical life by climbing the smooth rocks of a high cliff, so also are like that reckless climber who the other day lost his life when crawling along the edge of El Capitan in old Yosemite, some of us are risking our good names by associating with evil companions and people of unsavory reputation with whom we are seen on the street and in social gatherings.

But the majority risk their social heights on which many men and women foolishly risk their good names are not nearly as many as some suppose or as high as the dizzy and dangerous ledges along which some men are ready to risk their good names in order to win a prize of gold. Where there is one man who is ready to risk his good name for social success there are ten, twenty, fifty—aye, a hundred—men, who are ready to risk their good names for financial success. And those men are often ready to risk their good names on ledges as narrow as their physical life.

Oh, my friends, never allow your good names to be risked for the sake of financial enterprise. Never trifle with your good name by walking along a dangerous ledge on which your feet might slip and you may be precipitated into the abyss of disgrace. My father many years ago impressed this fact upon my mind. He said: "My son, as a minister of the gospel, in all probability you will never be financially wealthy, but on account of your good name, unless you are careful, some scheming men will try to drag you into shady financial enterprises. Then you will be disgraced, as was my dear friend Schuyler Colfax, who met an political death in the Credit Mobilier scandal."

Let me tell you how Schuyler Colfax was politically ruined. He was at heart an honest man. He was a prominent member of the Methodist church. For years his name was the synonym of all that was good and true. My father told me that if a thousand men had come to him and before a column of Bibles a mile high had sworn that Schuyler Colfax was dishonest, he would have denounced every one of them as a perjurer. He had known Schuyler Colfax for years. He knew he might be guilty of an indiscretion, but of an intentional dishonesty—never! What was his indiscretion? Some dishonest men were trying to organize a fraudulent conspiracy under a guise of building the Union Pacific Railroad. The company was capitalized at $1,750,000. In order to induce a gullible public to take stock the promoters of this company came and said to Vice-President Colfax, "We will make you a present of so much stock for the use of your name, which will give us a standing in the community." Schuyler Colfax, being a professional man and not a business man, was innocently caught in the trap. He did not intend to do any wrong. He thought the business enterprise of building a transcontinental railroad a worthy one. He thought the value of his good name worth the price offered. But when the secondary promoters of this company had flicked the money out of the pockets of the American people and decamped the accumulated wrath of the people as a hurrican broke over Schuyler Colfax's head, and he was driven into political oblivion. "Now," said my father to me, "never risk your good name. Never be drawn into any financial enterprise in the outcome of which you cannot as an honest man face the world with clean hands." Then I say to you: Never risk your good name. Never risk it in shady financial transactions the full story of which you are not willing to tell the world. Be cautious. Be cautious for your name for your self. Be lovingly cautious of your good name for your dear ones. Be lovingly cautious of your good name for the good you can do your fellow men. Avoid that which is high. Run no dangerous risks.

But I must not limit our theme here. Be prayerfully cautious about your faith in God and your relationship to God. Be careful that you never do anything to endanger that deep, earnest gospel faith in Jesus Christ which you learned at your Christian mother's knee. Be careful that you never go into those men and women who are accustomed to cast a slur upon the cross or to joke about the divinity of Jesus Christ. Be careful also that you never read a book which will in any way sap your religious vitality. I know some people like to make the foolish boast that they are stronngminded enough not to fear contact with evil associates or evil books. Thomas Jefferson in his old age wrote a beautiful letter to John Adams. It went some thing like this: "I thank you for the book you have just sent. I have made it the rule of my life for the last fifty years never to be afraid to read any kind of book, and I shall study this one with pleasure." But, though that sentence may seem to be a very brave statement, I believe it is a very foolish one to make. There are books—evil books—which you and I should shun. They are infidelitous books which we should fear. You have no more right to run any useless risks about your faith in God and your relationship to Him by associating with blasphemous and sneering infidel companions than you have to risk your physical life or good name by that "which is high."

The Bible says, "Resist the devil, and he will flee away from you." But the same chapter also says, "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you." And one of the easiest ways we can draw nigh to God is to run away from temptation just as fast as we can. Our faith in God is not always like pure gold. It is more often like a clear, beautiful, flawless diamond. Bring your diamond too near the hot flames of the chemist's retort, and you change it into black, lusterless charcoal. It is not like a running stream of water, clear as crystal, which when you plunge your finger beneath the surface and draw it out there is left no hole, but a clear, running, smooth surfaced stream. It is like a beautiful vase which when once shattered will always show the scars. No man ever strengthened his gospel faith by reading a bad book. No man walks closer to Christ because he goes down hand with a dangerous evil companion. Run no useless or dangerous risks in reference to your relationship to Jesus Christ. Avoid that "which is high."

But if we should be very careful that we do not risk our good name, how much more careful should we be that we ourselves by an evil example should not lead our loved ones into dangerous spiritual places! Because you are able to row out in a boat and leap over board and swim back to the shore it does not follow that your son will have the same strength to fight through the breakers. Because we are able in one sense to go through certain temptations unscathed that is no reason why those who are following after us will not fall if we lead them too near the dangerous precipices.

Running into needless temporal and spiritual danger reminds me of a great deal of that beautiful illustration Dr. Wise once gave to depict the evil of dancing. Many years ago the flames of an awful conflagration were wrapping a middle class home. Higher and higher they went. They seemed to mock and laugh at the feeble efforts of men to subdue them. Near by this home was an aviary containing nearly a thousand beautiful canary birds. As the flames crept nearer and nearer the owner, unable to remove them, opened the house and the aviary containing nearly a thousand beautiful canary birds. As the aviary door was opened a thousand With stroke of wing the birds flew out and up. They were free, free as the stars, free as the air. But what was the surprise of the spectators as well as the horror of the owner, instead of seeking the birds flew away to the woods they flew back to the flames. Round and round in the raging flames they went. They hovered about that conflagration, or fluttered over that furnace, until at last, one by one, their wings grew helpless and they dropped into the fire, until every songster was consumed.

When I read that account of the destruction of those hundreds of birds I said, "How like." How like the human race is that story! Christ comes and opens the cages of our sinful lives and says: "Behold, I have flown away to God. Fly away to safety. Fly away to heaven." But after we have begun to sing a little and to test our spiritual strength we answer: "Nay, nay; not now. Not so far away. Let me warm my golden plumage by yonder hot flame of sin." And back we flew to the flame of infamy, the flame of needless temptations, and thus we are destroyed forever.

Oh, my friends, flee temptation as you would flee eternal death. Christ will save you if you cling to him. Christ will save you if you will live deliberately, intentionally and stubborn ly associate with evil companions and seek needless spiritual dangers. By the shortcomings of your past life avoid needless and unreal temptations of the future not only for yourself, but for those dear ones who are by your side.

ANXIOUS MOTHERS.

The summer months are a bad time for little ones and an anxious time for mothers. Sickness and death come quickly during the hot weather, and almost before the mother realizes it baby has passed from its little one may be beyond aid. In every home at this season there should be kept a box of Baby's Own Tablets, and at the first symptom of illness they should be given. They promptly relieve colic, infantile diarrhoea and stomach troubles, and are just the thing another needs at the time of teething. Mrs. Thos. Hall, Mrs. Frank Moore, Brookfield, N.S., says, "I always keep Baby's Own Tablets on hand as a safeguard to my baby. I do not know any other medicine that can equal them for promptly relieving the infantile ailments." This medicine is absolutely safe as it is sold under a guarantee to contain no opiate or harmful drug. You can get the Tablets from your medicine dealer or by mail 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Cavalry Geniem.

Gen. Baden-Powell, the inspector-general of cavalry of the British army, has published a pamphlet on which is so sensible that it deserves attention. Until new cavalry recruits on joining have been put through a course of rough riding in the riding schools, which has not only done much to disabuse them, and thereby retarded their training, but which has quite often broken their spirit. Baden-Powell has broken this mould. He has arranged that the recruit is to be introduced to his horse under comfortable conditions, calculated to inspire confidence, and that his powers as a rider should be developed gradually. Under the new plan the recruit is sent out into the field on a quiet mount, and without a saddle. He is allowed to familiarize himself with the animal before any attempt at riding is made, and thus acquires, not only confidence, but also a liking and interest for his work. Gradually the riding-master takes place in the riding school, but it has been shorn of most of the brutalities and roughness by which it was formerly characterized, and which was generally regarded by the old-fashioned riding masters as indispensable to proper instruction.

The Greatest Doctor.

A story is told of an Englishman who had occasion for a doctor while staying in Paris, and sent for a countryman of England, Post. "Sing Loo, greatest doctor," said his servant; "he saves many men's life, actually!" exclaimed the Englishman. "Yes, me telllie awful," was the reply; "me callee in another doctor. He give me medicine, make me well, velly bad. Me callee in another doctor. He came, and give me more medicine, make me worse. Then I sendee for Sing Loo. He no come. He savee my lifee."

For Dusty Hair.

A preparation said to be excellent as a tonic and restorer for dark hair which is turning gray is as follows: Dried sage leaves, one ounce; powdered green tea, two ounces; bay rum, four ounces; fine salt, one-half ounce.

Put the sage leaves and tea in a covered tea pot. Add the quantity of boiling water and let it simmer until reduced one-third. Remove from the fire and let it remain in the pot for twenty-four hours. Then strain and add bay rum and salt. Shake until salt is dissolved, then bottle for use.

Goldfish in a Globe.

Goldfish are likely to die if all the water in their globe or tank is changed at once. Do not take the goldfish from stale, standing water to fresh is too much for them and gives them cramps which will probably prove fatal. The fish require certain substances, besides goldfish, three specimens of the aquatic plant Vallsperia spora-lis and eight water snails. The plant furnishes food for the snails, which in turn produce young snails, upon which the fish live.

Slow a Club Went Out of Existence.

Some years ago about a dozen men at Oxford formed a sort of "marriage club." It was agreed that when any member was about to be married a dinner should be held which all within reach should attend—the bachelors to pay. Marriage seemed far away then, and the bachelors thought the divided expenses would be inconsiderable. Years passed on now and again the announcement of another marriage was sent around. They met, coming from all quarters—a full-dress, bearded soldier, solicitor, journalist, schoolmaster, man about town and the rest —sang the old songs, dug up the old jokes, until one year it happened that the final bachelor found himself sole host. A year later the difficulty arose, and the final bachelor was given his dinner by the eleven married men. And now the friends meet on the anniversaries of their wedding days and pay each his own score. There is perhaps the ideal club.—London Chronicle.

A Delicate Art.

To transfer an old oil painting to a new canvas is a branch of art that calls for a unison of mechanical skill and talent, there are not many in the business. It is an entirely distinct work from renovating a cracked or mutilated painting. Transferring a painting from an old canvas to a new one requires years of experience to accomplish the simplest part of it. After the picture has been removed from its frame several layers of fine tissue paper are pasted firmly across the surface. When the paper is dry the back of the canvas is made thoroughly wet. Thread by thread it is picked away until nothing remains but the paint, which is fast to the tissue paper. A new canvas is then mounted and glued to the back of the picture. When the glue is dry the tissue paper is moistened and gently removed from the surface. A little cleaning and retouching by a skilled hand make the work complete.

No Bribery.

An amusing episode in politics is vouched for by a minister of religion as having occurred near Gillingham, England. A lady canvasser for one of the local candidates called at a house, found the voter was out and was required of the wife, "You think he will vote for my candidate, do you not?"

"Indeed he won't," replied the woman. "He has been promised a new pair of trousers if he'll votes for the other man."

The lady canvasser scented a petition for bribery, produced a sovereign and said, "I will give you this if you will tell me who made your husband that promise."

"Certainly I will," said the voter's wife as she pocketed the money. "I promised him them myself."

Man and His Keekzie.

"Men's taste in neckties," says a New York haberdasher, "is the most fickle thing imaginable. You can never be sure of it. It often happens that a scarf pattern which has a tremendous run for a season or two is responsible after a few seasons, and no one wants to buy it. On the other hand, a design you could hardly give away this year may become next year.

Why, no one has ever been able to discover. One year men will revel in red scarfs and the next will not touch red but greens or blues or purples. Talk about women's taste in dress being uncertain—man's is more so. Outsiders can only guess at it. Experience avails nothing."

The Proofreader's Peril.

In the first edition of St. Matthew in Micmac for the Indians of Nova Scotia the translator found when he came to the text that in the chapter xxiv, 7, instead of "nation shall rise against nation" he had written "a pair of snowshoes shall rise up against a pair of snowshoes." But there was only one letter misprinted, naooktukumkisijik (a nation) having been displaced by naooktakumkisijik (a snowshoe).—St. James' Gazette.

GUARD AGAINST GERMS.

Keep Well by Strengthening the Stomach In Summer With Mi-o-na.

In time of war the most responsibility rests upon the guard. If he is lacking in vigilance, disaster can easily overtake the army.

With the individual life, the stomach may well represent the "guard" against sickness. If it is strong and vigilant, any disease germ that may be swallowed will be neutralized by the digestive juices, or else driven from the system.

Everyone with weak digestion should use Mi-o-na at this season and so strengthen the stomach that disease germs can have no effect whatever. This remarkable remedy puts the whole digestive system in a healthy, clean and sweet a state that fermentation of the food cannot exist, that any disease germs which may enter the stomach will be destroyed, and food will be so readily assimilated that a rapid and healthy increase in flesh will result.

Nervousness and sleeplessness come more often from a weak stomach than from any other cause; headache, backache, and rheumatic pains are directly caused by an acid condition of the stomach. Mi-o-na corrects all this, prevents the formation of acids, and nervousness, kidney trouble, or rheumatism, is quickly cured.

Ask at the Red Cross Drug Store how you can get a generous sample which they sell Mi-o-na. Price 50 cents. It costs nothing unless it cures.

NINETY-EIGHT PER CENT.

There is a fascination about big profits to a business man. But the conservative man knows that it often refers to have the lesser per cent. of interest and the larger per cent. of safety in his investments. There is no business man who would not consider it a sound proposition to invest in an enterprise in which absolute loss was impossible and in which the majority of eight chances in a hundred of a handsome profit. The statistics and facts effected by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery show that it cures 98 per cent. of cases of "weak lungs" can be absolutely cured. Almost all other forms of physical weakness may be traced to the same source. Consumption is the seventh. The body is just as much starved when it is robbed of its food that cannot nutrition from the food it assimilates as when it is robbed of "weak lungs." Bronchial affections, chronic coughs, call for nourishment, and "Golden Medical Discovery" is nourishment in its most concentrated and assimilable form. It makes "weak lungs" strong, by strengthening the body and enabling it to take up the food which digest and distribute the food, and by increasing the supply of pure blood.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Stern Parent—Young man, didn't I see you sitting on the porch with my finest porch last night?

Young Man—Not guilty. I passed it on to mother.

No one need fear cholera or any summer complaint if they have a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial ready for use. It corrects all looseness of the bowels promptly and causes a healthy and natural action. This is a medicine adapted for the young and old, rich and poor and rapidly becoming the most popular medicine for cholera, dysentery, etc., in the land.

Blunker—I suppose you have no family away out here, farmer?

Farmer—Gee whiz-zaks, no; we kin give ye plain meat an' 'taters an' a bed ye kin trim-mick up but them fancy things is has to be looked for in town.

A good medicine requires little advertising. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is the good medicine and has gained for itself a large advertising. But in the great army of its friends pains and ailments of the most dreaded nature are relieved by the use of it. Wherever it has gone, and it is prized all the world over, with as a home. Dose small, effect sure.

The way to dispose the Dandy is to order them a course of farm-work—a "Dundalf" story by Mr. Albert Hickman, who has certainly found a splendid mine in the delightful character he has so typical of the Scotch-Canadian of the Maritime provinces. Mr. Fred Varley's illustrations are exceptionally fine and do credit to Canadian art. So does the drawing by Fergus Kyle in this, the first of to-day. Mr. Coburn preached from the text, "Prove all things hold fast that which is good." The Scripturalness of Protestantism and Romanism were treated in a masterly way, and though the address was one hour and fifteen minutes long, few complaints are heard of its length, notwithstanding the evening was very warm.

Sunshine Furnace

Don't Shovel Ashes

Not one make of furnace in twenty is supplied with an ash-pan.

Without an ash-pan the ashes must be shovelled into a pail or some other receptacle for removal—means dust in the eyes, ruined clothes, extra work; a dirty disagreeable job—the meanest part of furnace tending.

The Sunshine Furnace has an ash-pan which catches all the ashes, and slides in and out easily. Has two handles for carrying. No shovelling, sweeping or dirt.

This is only one of a dozen good features possessed by the Sunshine Furnace, none of which are found on any other furnace.

CAMDEN EAST.

A letter received by Mr. Radcliffe from L.O.L. No. 368.

July 10th, 1905

To the Rev. C. E. S. Radcliffe:

The officers and members of L.O.L. No. 368 wish to thank you their sincere thanks for your kind invitation to attend Divine service with them, and for the helpful thoughts and good advice given us by you in your sermon on Sunday, July 9th.

We also extend our thanks to the organist and choir for their choice selection of hymns so suitable for the occasion. Hoping that we all may be benefited by your helpful words. We remain, Yours sincerely,

By order of the Lodge,
James Huff, W.M.
Wm. Higgs, Rec.-Secty.

The Guild of St. Luke's Church and members of the Women's Auxiliary met at the Rectory, Camden East, Monday evening, and after Miss Saunders had read a very kindly worded address to Miss Burgoyne, as president, presented her with a handsome silver cut glass fruit spoon, containing six hundred and twenty-five degrees Celsius. Mr. Radcliffe thanked the President and members of the Guild for the address and gift, certifying as it did to the good feeling existing between the workers and congregation. Refreshments were served by the Guild and a pleasant social time spent at the Rectory. We were glad to welcome present Messrs. A. T. Love, Charles Quinn and Willie Quinn. Mr. Roy Smith was unavoidably absent.

Mr. Love, Bishop's College, Lennoxville, will take charge of the Parish next Sunday, July 16th.

Kathleen—It's allittle ye love me, or ye'ud niver stay away from me as ye did last evening, jist because av a wee bit o' rain.

Pat—Faix, Mike, it was a pourin' down floods, I assoorure, but it wor not th' rain that kep' me away from th' likes av ye. It was a bit frinky av Kathleen—An' wot wor it?

Pat—Mike—It wor th' lack av an umbrella.

Smith, who has just had a tooth extracted—Say, doc, let me take that tooth home with me.

Dentist—Why so?

Smith—I want to pour molasses on it and see it ache.

Her Father—What are you and young Spriggins talking about in such an earnest manner?

His Daughter—Well, if you must know, papa, go look in the mirror.

They had been engaged all of ten minutes.

"Horseless carriages and wireless telegraphy are all right in their way," she said, "but—"

"But what?" he stammered, anxiously.

"I don't think much of kissless courtships," she continued.

And it didn't.

A lady who complained to her milkman of the quality of milk he sold her received the following explanation:

"You see, mum, they don't get enough milk and the single good. Mr. Love read the Prayers and Lessons very feelingly and Rector preached from the origin and rise of orange'ism to a very large and attentive congregation from Deut. IV., verse 7.

There are thousands of sickly school girls dragging their way through school who might be enjoying the full vigor of their youth by taking Scott's Emulsion. 27b

SABBATH SCHOOL CONVENTIONS.

At an Executive meeting of County S. S. Association on Saturday last, it was proposed that a series of local S. S. conventions be held in the following places and on their respective dates: Odessa, Sept. 12th; Verker, 13th; Tamworth, 14th; Roblin, 19th; Anderson's, 20th, and some point in Adolphustown 21st. It is hoped the ministers and S. S. workers in these different localities will work together to make these conventions a success. It is expected that the Provincial Secretary, J. A. Jackson, or E. A. Hardy, B.A., the Field Secretary of teachers' training, work, will be in attendance.

A SPLENDID COMPANY.

The Kennedy Players held the boards at the Bijou Opera House here on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings with a Wednesday matinee. Their repertoire of plays is well selected and are certainly made the most of by this capable company. Special mention of Monday evening's production, "The Midnight Express," would not be amiss. Mr. Kennedy as "Hot Backers," and Neille Kennedy as "Tess" were the stars, although several others did exceptionally well, especially A. F. Hamilton as "David Bell." Specialties were introduced between the acts by Little Dot A. Ben Lewis, Rosie Machan, Winnifred Grantham and Jno. J. Kennedy. The specialties were well received, especially the dancing and singing by Little Dot and Rosie Machan. The Kennedy Players are the best company that have appeared here for years, and a return engagement at a cooler season of the year would mean bumper houses for this meritorious company.

BOY DROWNED.

The first drowning accident of the season in Napanee occurred about 2 o'clock on Thursday afternoon. Clarence, the little seven year old son of Mr. Benjamin Davy, Water-st., fell out of a boat below the cable bridge near Herring's foundry, and when rescued life was extinct, the body lying at the bottom of the river for over an hour. Workmen in Gilsford's factory noticed the little fellow alone in the boat shortly after dinner. Later they saw his hat floating on the surface, but the child no where to be seen. An alarm was at once given, and many boats and willing hands set to work to locate the body. Dr. Ming was the first to notice the child, lying on the bottom about the centre of the river, in seven or eight feet of water. Sam. Smith instantly dove down and brought up the remains, which were still limp, but the vital spark had fled, attempts to resuscitate being found useless. The remains were placed in a skiff and rowed down to the home of the grief stricken parents. This should prove a warning to parents, many of whom let their younger children play about the wharfs and banks with seeming indifference.

—The attention of our readers is called to the advt. on page 7 of the second annual excursion to Montreal, Ottawa and return, via the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Rivers and Rideau Canal System, running all the rapids of the St. Lawrence, and all they trip by daylight. Patrons of this trip last year are enthusiastic in their opinions of the whole route, which is said to be unsurpassed in America. 28c

The Twelfth in Napanee

Wednesday morning was ushered in with bright clear weather, and everything looked favorable for the followers of King William of Orange and their annual celebration at Napanee. By nine o'clock people began to arrive from the surrounding country, and later the G. T. R. and C. O. Ry brought large crowds, the latter over twelve hundred people. Competent judges state that it was by far the largest crowd ever assembled in town. Unfortunately rain set in about 1 o'clock, and the programme in the park had to be cancelled.

About 2 o'clock, the following lodges, headed by the Napanee Citizens' Band, formed in procession on the market square, and marched up John st. to Thomas st., to Adelphi, to Dundas, thence up Dundas to market, where they dispersed. Besides the Napanee band there were splendid bands from Enterprise and Tweed.

NOTES.

We have never seen a more respectable and better behaved crowd in town.

Although it rained almost all afternoon the crowd were good tempered and happy.

Great numbers of young people danced all afternoon and far into the night at the Town Hall and Campbell House.

The hotels and restaurants were able to serve all comfortably.

The appearance of the town was much improved by the beautiful arches and evergreens everywhere.

NEWBURGH.

On Thursday evening the fetuch game of baseball between the Camden East and Newburgh teams, was played on J. S. Youmans's field, the visitors winning by 8-3. The game was called in the sixth innings owing to darkness. During the second innings it was a close and interesting contest. The visitors scored one run in the first. In the second, the first two men up were easy outs. Then the fireworks commenced. The visitors fell on Dunn's offerings for 10 hits which netted them seven runs. While there were a few pieces of rank fielding, yet the hits that scored the runs were of the clean cut slashing variety, either out of the fielders' reach. Dunn steadied down and the visitors did not score again, although they had men on bases in nearly every innings. They hit the ball when hits meant runs, a feat the home boys could not accomplish. The locals' first tally came in the third, when Dunn made two bases on three strikes, went to third on Moore's drive to right and scored on E. Shorey's out at first. In the fourth innings the locals scored two by a batting rally which unfortunately was a short-lived. W. B. Dunn was on the slab for the locals, and barring the second innings, was quite effective. Roy Smith pitched for the visitors and kept the hits well scattered. The features of the game were two catches, one by Sallows on the run, and one by another by Sutton, who by running backward from second, caught a difficult fly in the semi-darkness. A Camden East man started to umpire, but it was such a poor attempt that he was relieved by Timothy Israelite, after he had given Shorts the short end of a doubtful decision. The new man was right on the job and gave perfect satisfaction. The score:

	R.	H.	P.	A.	E.

Mr. William White, Second Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific Railway says that thirty thousand men will be required to move the one hundred million bushel wheat crop of the Northwest.

At Littleton, W. Va., Tilden Bass, twelve years old, was shot and instantly killed by his mother, who mistook him for a burglar. The boy arose in his sleep and wandered about the house.

Archie Bennett, a Russian Jew, passed second in the entrance examinations at Kingston. He has been in Canada two years and a half in this country. When he landed he could not speak a word of English.

A burglar who entered the dwelling of Mrs. Ada Bedford, a colored woman, at Chatham, was driven off by Mrs. Bedford clubbed the intruder over the head with a flat iron. He was trying to shoot him, and raised such an outcry that the man made a rapid exit.

John Hall, a Kingston fireman, while repairing an alarm wire, touched his live wire and was thrown to the ground. He was at the top of a fifty-foot pole, and clung to the cross arm at the top of the pole and called for aid. The hook and ladder company raised him from his perilous position and called medical help.

The members of the Dominion parliament have voted themselves an increase of salary, and in the future receive $2,500 per annum. The premier's allowance is increased to $7,000, and the leader of the opposition is to receive $7,000. The cost of legislation will also receive an increase of $500 a year. The House adjourned Wednesday morning.

The years ago the expenditure of the Dominion Government for the purpose was less than $41,000,000. For the present year the total is $82,000,000. Next year it will be $72,500,000. The increase was $11,000,000, and the decrease $9,500,000, so we have just entered the estimated expenditure nearly $60,000,000—an increase of $45,000,000 over the sum twelve years ago.

A young man named Fredericks met with a very painful accident, while at work in the Canada Cycle and Motor factory, Picton, on Friday night. Frederick's arm became caught in the cog-wheels and wrenched off just below the elbow.

THE TWELFTH OF JULY.

Tune—DeFlury.

A song for the day beaming o'er us,
An anthem of Orangemen's joy,
A rapturous, heart-stirring chorus,
For this is the Twelfth of July;
Yes, this is the Twelfth of July;
The glorious Twelfth of July,
Then send up a heart-stirring chorus,
For this is the Twelfth of July.

Long since, on this day of defiat,
Our fathers fought Ruth and King James,
Their children, if put to the trial,
Would fight that same battle again;
Would fight that same battle again;
Yes, yes, we would fight it again,
Their children, if put to the trial,
Would fight that same battle again.

The Protestant bands were assembled,
The tyrants of earth to defy,
And truths have ever since trembled,
To hear of the Twelfth of July;
To hear of the Twelfth of July,
The glorious Twelfth of July,
And tyrants have ever since trembled,
To hear of our Twelfth of July.

They wish that Old Time would absorb it,
And let it unnumbered go by,
But True rolls around in its orbit,
And brings a new Twelfth of July;
And brings a new Twelfth of July,
Each year a new Twelfth of July,
Old Time, as he rolls in his orbit,
Still brings a new Twelfth of July.

With very benevolent reasons,
God spreads out the bright summer sky,
He put in the midst of the seasons,
He sends in the Twelfth of July;
He sends in the Twelfth of July,
The glorious Twelfth of July,
In the midst of the bright summer seasons,
In the midst of the Twelfth of July.

Our fathers in warlike employment,
Determined to conquer or die,
But ours in the peaceful enjoyment,
The fruits of their Twelfth of July;
The fruits of their Twelfth of July,
Their soul-stirring Twelfth of July,
We flourish in peaceful enjoyment,
The fruits of their Twelfth of July.

Our Order in fraternal communion,
All traitors and foes shall defy,
So long as we cling to the union,
And honor the Twelfth of July;
And honor the Twelfth of July,
The glorious Twelfth of July,
So long as we cling to the union,
And honor the Twelfth of July.

Be withered the hand that would sever,
Our hallow'd Canadian ties,
Our Order be cherished forever,
And honored our Twelfth of July;
And honored our Twelfth of July,
Our glorious Twelfth of July,
Our Order be cherished forever,
And honored our Twelfth of July.

Then up with the voice of thanksgiving,
To God, the Great Giver, on High,
And while in the land of the living,
We'll honor the Twelfth of July;
Yes, honor the Twelfth of July,
The glorious Twelfth of July,
The name of King William forever,
Be honored the Twelfth of July.

What is the Meaning of "Well Balanced" Flour.
A perfectly "balanced" flour is one which contains the greatest amount of nutriment in its most easily digestible form. No single variety of wheat will produce "well balanced" flour. It requires the careful selection of different kinds.
The makers of ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR have more than a hundred elevators, scattered throughout the greatest wheat growing country in the world, which enables them to secure the very pick of the wheat that will yield perfectly balanced flour—
—The kind of flour that produces the best, the largest and the strongest loaf—
—The loaf which contains the greatest amount of bone, muscle and brain-making protein and the lowest percentage of waste.
ROYAL HOUSEHOLD makes bread which reduces the labor of digestion—and gives greatest nutrition for least stomach effort.
It's the "balance" in flour that makes bread easier to digest and gives it many other qualities which are usually attributed to other causes.

Camping Joys Are For the Elect Only.

"Camp life is not for every one. Years of experience have taught me," remarks a writer in an exchange, "that camping joys are only for the elect. There are people who should never try it. In a record of camp hints, collected from many of my own camping experiences, I find the following list of people who should never be invited to join such a party:

"Those who are afraid of 'bugs.' The term 'bugs' by the nervous always includes many animals never put there by scientists.

"People who lean on some one else in every emergency.

"People who cannot be happy without all the conveniences of life.

"People who are always afraid of taking cold. As a fact, no one ever thinks of taking cold camping.

"Above all, leave at home the people who do not want to camp, the ones who think there is no fun in it. I have camped with representatives of all the above named classes, and the last have been the most trying of all. As you value your own pleasure, never urge any one to go who does not want to go."

Household Brevities.

Nuts are said to make a great improvement in chicken salad. A cup of English walnut meats to a cup of celery cubed and one of chicken also cut in cubes is the proper proportion.

Preserving pans should be rubbed over thoroughly with olive oil of the best quality, then well rubbed off before starting to make marmalade, jam or jelly. This will prevent many a scorched or burned kettle of fruit.

A hardwood floor should never be washed. Mix equal parts crude oil and turpentine and rub the floor well with a cloth dipped in the mixture.

Hemmed squares of cheesecloth make the most desirable dusters, as they can be easily made and laundered, and the dust adheres to them.

Milk rinses off bottles and glasses easily if these are dipped in water as soon as emptied. They are not clean, but they will be clean all the easier when the time comes.

A liberal use of butter is said to be the remedy for mishaps with sticky fly paper.

A tablespoonful of lemon juice added to three cups of water in which one cup of rice is boiled will aid in making the rice whiter and keeping each grain separate.

THE WINGS OF THE MORNING

BY LOUIS TRACY.

"Will they not miss you?"

"They will miss the goatskin, sahib. It was the last full one."

"Mir Jan, do as I bid and you shall see Delhi again. Have you ever used a Lee-Metford?"

"I have seen them, sahib, but I better understand the Mahtini."

"I will give you a rifle, with plenty of ammunition. Do you go inside the cave, there, and"—

Mir Jan was startled.

"Where the ghost is, sahib?" he said.

"Ghost! That is a tale for children. There is no ghost, only a few bones of a man murdered by these scoundrels long ago. Have you any food?"

"Some rice, sahib; sufficient for a day or two at a pinch."

"Good! We will get water from the well. When the fighting begins at dawn fire at every man you see from the back of the cave. On no account come out. Then they can never reach you if you keep a full magazine. Wait here."

"I thought you were never coming," protested Iris when Jenks reached the ledge. "I have been quite creepy. I am sure there is some one down there. And, please, may I have another drink?"

The sailor had left the crowbar beneath. He secured a rifle, a spare clip and a dozen packets of cartridges, meanwhile briefly explaining to Iris the turn taken by events so far as Mir Jan was concerned. She was naturally delighted and forgot her fears in the excitement caused by the appearance of so useful an ally. She drank his health in a brimming beaker of water.

She heard her lover rejoin Mir Jan, and saw the two step out into the moonlight, while Jenks explained the action of the rifle. Fortunately Iris was now much recovered from the fatigue and privation of the earlier hours. Her senses were sharpened to a pitch little dreamed of by stay-at-home young ladies of her age, and she deemed it her province to act as sentry while the two men conferred. Hence she was the first to detect, or, rather, to become conscious of, the stealthy crawl of several Dyaks along the bottom of the cliff from Turtle beach.

"Robert!" she screamed. "The Dyaks! On your left!"

But Iris was rapidly gaining some knowledge of strategy. Before she shrieked her warning she grasped a rifle. Holding it at the "ready"—about the level of her waist—and depressing the muzzle sufficiently, she began firing down the side of the rock as fast as she could handle lever and trigger. Two of the nickel bullets struck a projection and splashed the leading savages with molten metal.

Unfortunately Jenks' rifle beneath was unloaded, being in Mir Jan's possession for purposes of instruction. Jenks whipped out his revolver.

"To the cave!" he roared, and Mir Jan's unwillingness to face a goblin could not withstand the combined impetus of the sahib's order and the onward rush of the enemy. He darted headlong for the entrance.

Jenks, shooting blindly as he, too, ran for the ladder, emptied the revolver just as his left hand clutched a rung. Three Dyaks were so close that it would be folly to attempt to climb. He threw the weapon into the face of the foremost man, effectually stopping his onward progress.

The sailor turned to dive into the cave and secure the rifle from Mir Jan, when his shin caught the heavy crowbar resting against the rock. The pain of the blow lent emphasis to the swing with which the implement descended upon some portion of a Dyak anatomy. Jenks never knew where he hit the second assailant, but the place cracked like an eggshell.

He had not time to recover the bar for another blow, so he drove the point in the gullet of a gentleman who was about to make a vicious sweep at him with a parang. The downfall of this worthy caused his immediate successor to stumble, and Jenks saw his opportunity. With the agility of a cat he jumped up the ladder and reached the ledge without injury.

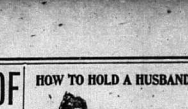
HOW TO HOLD A HUSBAND.



The best known guide to married happiness is to hold the husband as you won the lover—by cheerfulness of disposition, patience and keeping your youthful looks. Of course a great many women are handicapped by those ills to which women are heir. The constantly recurring troubles which afflict her are apt to cause a sour disposition, nervousness and a beclouded mind.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, the specialist in woman's diseases, of Buffalo, N. Y., after a long experience in treating such diseases, found that certain roots and herbs made into a liquid extract, would help the majority of cases. This he called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Thousands of women have testified to its merits, and it is put up in shape to be easily procured and is sold by all medicine dealers. This is a potent tonic for the womanly system. So much faith has Dr. Pierce in its merits that he offers $500 reward for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, which he cannot cure. All he asks is a fair and reasonable trial of his means of cure.

Mrs. T. Dolan, of Madrid, Perkins Co., Nebr., writes: "I was cured of painful periods by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and his Compound Extract of Smart-Weed. I think Dr. Pierce's medicines the best in the world."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay customs and mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper-covered book, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

These things happened with the speed of thought. Within forty seconds of Iris' shrill cry the sailor was breast high with the ledge and calling to her:

"All right, old girl! Keep it up!"

But here he was close to her, unhurt and calmly jubilant, as was his way when a stiff fight went well. He was by her side now, firing and aiming, too, for the Dyaks broke cover recklessly in running for shelter, and one may do fair work by moonlight.

She had strength enough left to place the rifle out of harm's way before she broke down and sobbed not tearfully, but in a paroxysm of reaction. Soon all was quiet beneath save for the labored efforts of some wounded men to get far away from that accursed rock. Jenks was able to turn to Iris. He endeavored to allay her agitation and succeeded somewhat, for tears came, and she clung to him. It was useless to reproach him. The whole incident was unforeseen. She was herself a party to it. But what an escape!

"You have been a very good little girl and have earned your supper," he said.

"Oh, how can you talk so callously after such an awful experience?" she expostulated reproachfully.

"It is a small thing to trouble about, sweetheart," she explained. "You spotted the enemy so promptly and blazed away with such promptitude that they never got within yards of me."

"Are you sure?"

"I vow and declare that after we have eaten something and sampled our remaining bottle of wine I will tell you exactly what happened."

"Why not now?"

"Because I must first see to Mir Jan. I bundled him neck and toe into the cave. I hope I did not hurt him."

"You are, not going down there again?"

"No need, I trust."

He went to the side of the ledge, recovered the ladder which he had hastily hauled out of the Dyaks' reach after his climb, and cried:

"Mir Jack to his hole in the rock, lest a mongoose seize him by the head."

"Mir Jan!"

"I am prepared. Let that snake perish, sahib, with a loud clatter."

"This does not seem to be so very serious. It reminds me of my efforts to cook."

"There is more to follow, I fear, dear one. But the Dyaks are fools. They should have waited until night fell before venturing on so risky an enterprise. They coughed incessantly and nearly choked, for the Dyaks had thrown wet seaweed on top of their burning pile of dry wood. Mir Jan, born in inferior Delhi, knew little about the sea or its products, and when the savages talked of seaweed he thought they meant green wood. Fortunately for him, the ascending clouds of smoke missed the cave or infallibly he must have been stifled.

"Fire!" A volume of murky vapor arose that nearly suffocated them by the first whiff of its noisome fumes. It curled like a black pall over the face of the rock and blotted out sea and sky. Mir Jan, born in inferior Delhi, knew little about the sea or its products, and when the savages talked of seaweed he thought they meant green wood. "Lie flat on the rock!" gasped Jenks. Careless of waste, he poured water over a coat and made Iris bury her mouth and nose in the wet cloth. This gave her immediate relief, and she showed her woman's wit by tying the sleeves of the garment behind her neck. Jenks nodded comprehension and followed her example, for by this means their hands were left free.

The black cloud grew more dense each few seconds. Nevertheless, owing to the slope of the ledge and the tendency of the smoke to rise, the south side was far more tenable than the north. Quick to note this favorable circumstance, the sailor deduced a further fact from it. A barrier erected on the extreme right of the ledge would be a material gain. He sprang up, dragged the huge tarpaulin from its former location and propped it on the handle of the pickax, driven by one mighty stroke deep into a crevice of the rock.

It was no mean feat of strength that he performed. He swung the heavy and cumbrous canvas into position as if it were a dust cloth. He emerged from the gloom of the driven cloud red eyed, but triumphant. Instantly the vapor on the ledge lessened, and they could breathe, even talk. Overhead and in front the smoke swept in ever increasing density. Not once again the sailor had outwitted the Dyaks' maneuvers.

"We have won the first rubber," he whispered to Iris.

Above, beneath, beyond, they could see nothing. The air they breathed was hot and fetid. It was like being immured in a foul tunnel, and almost as dark. Jenks looked over the parapet. He thought he could distinguish some vague figures on the sands, so he fired at them. A volley of answering bullets crashed into the rock on all sides. The Dyaks had laid their plans well this time. A firing squad stationed beyond the smoke area and supplied with all the available guns commenced and kept up a smart fusillade in the direction of the ledge in order to cover the operations of the scaling party.

Jenks realized that to expose himself was to court a serious wound and achieve no useful purpose. He fell back out of range, laid down his rifle and grabbed the crowbar. At brief intervals a deep hollow boom came up from the valley. At first it puzzled them until the sailor hit upon an explanation. Mir Jan was busy.

The end of a strong, roughly made ladder swung through the smoke and banged against the ledge. Before Jenks could reach it those hoisting it into position hastily retreated. They were standing in front of the cave, and the Mohammedan made play on them with a rifle at thirty feet.

Jenks, using his crowbar as a lever, toppled the ladder clean over. It fell outward and disconcerted a section of the musketeers.

"Well done!" cried Iris.

The sailor, astounded by her tone, gave her a fleeting glance. She was very pale now, but not with fear. Her eyes were slightly contracted, her nostrils quivering, her lips set tight and her chin dimpled. Resting on one knee, with a revolver in each hand, she seemed no puling mate for the gallant man who fought for her.

There was no time for further speech. Three ladders were reared against the rock. They were so poised and held below that Jenks could not force them backward. A fourth appeared, its coarse shafts looming into sight like the horns of some gigantic animal. The four covered practically the whole front of the ledge save where Mir Jan cleared a little space on the level.

Now both crowbar and revolver were needed.

The sailor was standing now, with the crowbar clinched in both hands. The firing in the valley slackened and died away. A Dyak face, grinning like a Japanese demon, appeared at the top of the ladder nearest to Iris.

"Don't fire!" shouted Jenks. And the iron bar descended on his head. Two others pitched themselves half on to the ledge. Now both crowbar and revolver were needed. Three ladders were thus cumbered somewhat for those beneath, and Jenks sprang toward the fourth and most distant. Men were crowding it like ants. Close to his feet lay an empty water flask. It was a crude weapon, but effective when well pitched, and the sailor had never made a better shot for a goal in the midst of a hard fought scrimmage than he made with that tub for the head of the uppermost pirate.

Another man came from the sands. A bullet plowed through his hair and sent his sou'wester flying. Again the besieged were driven back. One way or the other they must succeed. A man and a woman—even such a man and such a woman—could not keep at bay an infuriated horde of fifty savages fighting at close quarters and under these grievous conditions.

Jenks knew what would happen. He would be shot while wrestling the scaling party. And Iris! Dear heart! She was thinking of him.

"Keep back! They can never gain the ledge!" she shrieked.

And then, above the din of the fusillade, the yells of the assailants and the bursting of the wounded, there came through the air a screaming, tearing, ripping sound which drowned all others. It traveled with incredible speed, and before the sailor could believe his ears—for he well knew what it meant—a shrapnel shell burst in front of the Dyaks and drenched the valley with flying lead.

Jenks was just able to drag Iris flat against the rock ere the time fuse operated and the bullets flew. He could form no theory, hazard no conjecture. All he knew was that a twelve pounder shell had been lobbed through empty space, scattering red ruin among the amazed scoundrels beneath. Instantly he rose again, lest perchance any of the Dyaks should have gained a foothold on the ledge.

The ladders were empty. He could hear a good deal of groaning, the footsteps of running men and some distant shouting.

"Sahib!" yelled Mir Jan, drawn from his retreat by the explosion without.

"Yes," shouted Jenks.

The native, in a voice cracked with excitement, told him something. The sailor made a trumpet of his hands to make quite sure that Mir Jan was not mistaken.

Then he threw his arms round Iris, drew her close and whispered:

"My darling, we are saved! A warship has anchored just beyond the mouth reef. Boats filled with armed sailors are now pulling ashore."

THE drifting smoke was still so dense that not even the floor of the valley could be discerned. Jenks dared not leave Iris at such a moment.

He called to Mir Jan:

"Take off your turban and hold it above your head if you think they can see you from the warship."

"It is all right, sahib," came the cheering answer. "One boat is close inshore. I think, from the uniforms, they are English sahibs, such as I have seen at Garden Reach. The Dyaks have all gone."

Nevertheless Jenks waited. There was nothing to gain by being too precipitate. A false step now might undo the achievements of many weeks.

Mir Jan was dancing about beneath in a state of wild excitement.

"They have seen the Dyaks running to their sampans, sahib," he yelled, "and the second boat is being pulled in that direction! Yet another has just left the ship."

A translation made Iris excited, eager to go down and see these wonders.

The boom of a cannon came from the sea. Instinctively the girl shrank for safety, though her companion smiled at her fears, for the shell would have long preceded the report had it travelled their way.

"One of the remaining sampans has got under way," he explained, "and the warship is firing at her."

"Poor wretches!" murmured Iris. "Cannot the survivors be allowed to escape?"

"Well, we are unable to interfere. Those caught on the island will probably be taken to the mainland and hanged for their crimes, so the manner of their end is not of much consequence."

To the girl's manifest relief, there was no more firing, and Mir Jan announced that a number of sailors were actually on shore. Then her thoughts turned to a matter of concern to the feminine mind even in the gravest moments of existence. She laved her face with water and sought her discarded skirt.

Soon the steady tramp of boot clad feet advancing at the double was heard on the sands, and an officer's voice, speaking the crude Hindoostanee of the engine room and forecastle, shouted to Mir Jan:

"Hi, you black fellow! Are there any white people here?"

Jenks sang out:

"Yes, two of us! Perched on the rock over your heads. We are coming down."

He cast loose the rope ladder. Iris was limp and trembling.

"Steady, sweetheart," he whispered. "Don't forget the slip between the cup and the lip. Hold tight, but have no fear. I will be just beneath."

It was well he took this precaution. She was now so unnerved that an unguarded movement might have led to an accident. But the knowledge that her lover was near, the touch of his hand guiding her feet on to the rungs of the ladder, sustained her. They had almost reached the level when a loud exclamation and the crash of a heavy blow caused Jenks to halt and look downward.

A Dyak, lying at the foot of one of the scaling ladders and severely wounded by a shell splinter, witnessed their descent. In his left hand he grasped a parang; his right arm was bandaged. Though unable to rise, the vengeful pirate mustered his remaining strength to crawl toward the swaying ladder. It was Tuang S'All, inspired with the hate and venom of the dying snake. Even yet he hoped to deal a mortal stroke at the man who had defeated him and all his quitthroat band. He might have succeeded, as Jenks was so taken up with Iris, were it not for the watchful eyes of Mir Jan. The Mohammedan sprang at him, with an oath, and gave him such a murderous whack with the butt of a rifle that the Dyak chief collapsed and breathed out his fierce spirit in a groan.

At the first glance Jenks did not recognize Tuang S'All owing to his change of costume. Through the thinner smoke he could see several sailors running up.

But, with the passing of the chief, their last peril had gone. The next instant they were standing on the firm ground, and a British naval lieutenant was saying eagerly:

"We seem to have turned up in the nick of time. Do you, by any chance, belong to the Sirdar?"

"We are the sole survivors," answered the sailor.

"You two only?"

"Yes. She struck on the northwest reef of this island during a typhoon. This lady, Miss Iris Deane, and I were flung ashore"—

"Miss Deane! Can it be possible? Let me congratulate you most heartily. Sir Arthur Deane is on board the Orient at this moment."

"The Orient!"

Iris was dazed. It was all too wonderful to be quite understood yet. She turned to Robert:

"Do you hear? They say my father is not far away. Take me to him."

"No need for that, miss," interrupted a warrant officer. "Here he is coming ashore. He wanted to come with us, but the captain would not permit it, as there seemed to be some trouble ahead."

Sure enough, even the girl's swimming eyes could distinguish the gray bearded civilian seated beside an officer in the stern sheets of a small gig now thundering a path through the broken reef beyond Turtle beach. In five minutes father and daughter would meet.

Meanwhile the officer, intent on duty, addressed Jenks again.

"May I ask who you are?"

"My name is Anstruther—Robert Anstruther."

Iris, clinging to his arm, heard the reply.

So he had abandoned all pretense. He was ready to face the world at her side. She stole a loving glance at him as she cried:

"Yes; Captain Anstruther of the Indian staff corps. If he will not tell you all that he has done, how he has saved my life twenty times, how he has fought single handed against eighty men, ask me!"

"Captain Anstruther does not appear to have left much for us to do, Miss Deane," the officer said. "Indeed," turning to Robert, "is there any way in which my men will be useful?"

"I would recommend that they drag the green stuff off that fire and stop the smoke. Then a detachment should go round the south side of the island and drive the remaining Dyaks into the hands of the party you have landed, as I understand, at the farther end of the south beach. Mir Jan, the Mohammedan here, who has been a most faithful ally during part of our siege, will act as guide."

The other man cast a comprehensive glance over the rock, with its scaling ladders and dangling rope ladder, the cave, the little groups of dead or unconscious pirates—for every wounded man who could move a limb had crawled away after the first shell burst —and drew a deep breath.

"How long were you up there?" he asked.

"Over thirty hours."

"It was a great fight!"

"Somewhat worse than it looks," said Anstruther. "This is only the end of a struggle we have had to wage for nearly twoscore of the poor devils."

Robert looked toward the approaching boat. She would not land yet for a couple of minutes.

"By the way," he said, "will you tell me your name?"

"Playdon—Lieutenant Philip H. Playdon."

"Do you know to what nation this island belongs?"

"Not any man's land, I think. It is marked 'uninhabited' on the chart."

"Then," said Anstruther, "I call upon you, Lieutenant Playdon, and all others here present to witness that I, Robert Anstruther, late of the Indian army, acting on behalf of myself and Miss Iris Deane, declare that we have taken possession of this island in the name of his Britannic majesty the king of England, that we are the joint occupiers and owners thereof and claim all property rights vested therein."

Always Remember the Full Name
Laxative Bromo Quinine
Cures a Cold in One Day, Grip in Two.
E. W. Grove on Box. 25c.

These formal phrases, coming at such a moment, amazed his hearers. Iris alone had an inkling of the underlying motive.

"I don't suppose any one will dispute your title," said the naval officer gravely. He unquestionably imagined that suffering and exposure had slightly disturbed the other man's senses.

"Thank you," replied Robert with equal composure, though he felt inclined to laugh at Playdon's mystification. "I only wished to secure a sufficient number of witnesses for a verbal declaration."

"When I have a few minutes to spare I will affix a legal notice on the wall in front of our cave."

Playdon bowed silently. There was something in the speaker's manner that puzzled him. He detailed a small guard to accompany Robert and Iris, who now walked toward the beach, and asked Mir Jan to pilot him as suggested by Anstruther.

The boat was yet many yards from shore when Iris ran forward and stretched out her arms to the man who was staring at her with wistful despair.

"Father! Father!" she cried. "Don't you know me?"

Sir Arthur Deane was looking at the two strange figures on the strand, and each moment his heart sank lower. This island held his final hope. During many weary weeks, since the day when a kindly admiral placed the cruiser Orient at his disposal, he had scoured the China sea, the coasts of Borneo and Java for some tidings of the ill fated Sirdar.

Madrastitch—What Is It?

Madrastitch is the newest and most exclusive effect yet produced in a shirting material.

Madrastitch designs are all originated and the effects executed on the cloths by The Crescent Mfg. Co.'s own artists in their own factory, and are controlled and manufactured by them. The Crescent Label on a shirt is a sure sign of merit. The Shirts made by them are the best fitting, most roomy and best made shirts to be found in Canada. Every line shown by us has some special feature. We have the largest assortment of patterns for you to choose from that we have ever shown. Give us a trial when next you purchase shirts.

Men's Everelastic Suspenders.

In England they are becoming so particular about suspenders that they are now advocating fitting suspenders. They must have different suspenders there from what we have, that is sure, for men's braces in this country will fit anyone. The best Suspenders in the market to-day are the "President" and the "Everelastic". We carry both lines in stock, but we are satisfied the "Everelastic" is the better. Our trade for this article is increasing very rapidly and our customers unite in saying "it's the best yet." Let our clerks demonstrate its good points to you when next you are in. Patterns are pretty and the price is only 50c. Other braces at 10c and up.

Fire visited our town on Wednesday. It started in the Hornerite church, which was completely destroyed; also Capt. Montgomery's house and barn, which were occupied by W. H. Walker, and Reuben Curl's new house. It is high time that steps should be taken for some fire protection for our village.

A later report says that B. S. O'Loughlin's new residence, and Mrs. Babcock's residence were on fire, but were promptly extinguished. But the worst was to come; for away across the river, far from the scene of the fire, sparks ignited the barn of Henry Walker. It was soon a mass of flames; the danger to the schoolhouse being past, all ran to the new scene of action, when the furniture from H. Walker's and R. Curl's residences was hurriedly carried out, for they too were a prey to the flames. By dint of hard work the homes of William Carroll and Jeremiah Gilligan were saved, also Orsy Lee's barn. R. Curl had no insurance, and there was no insurance on the church. The house where H. Walker lived was owned by Capt. Montgomery, Kingston. R. Curl's residence was built last year.

Mrs. Geo. Lucas returned home Wednesday after a week's visit with her husband in Quebec.

A baseball match on Saturday last between Yarker and Kingston was played here, score, 26-5, in favor of our home team.

ONE DOLLAR SAVED REPRESENTS TEN DOLLARS EARNED.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. THE LIGHTNING'S FLASH

TYPIFIES SUDDENNESS OF THE COMING OF CHRIST.

IT IS A GLORIOUS SPECTACLE

Not As a Babe in a Manger Will the Master's Next Coming Be, But He Shall Come in All the Splendour of the Kings of Old—The First and the Second Comings of Christ Vividly Contrasted.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dixey, at Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 16.—In these midsummer days of frequent electrical display the preacher finds a lesson in the lightning's flash, which he likens to the suddenness of Christ's promised reappearance on earth. The text is Matthew xxiv, 27, "As the lightning cometh out of the east."

The misfortune of being terrorized by the lightnings has never come to me. Some of the bravest and noblest men and women tremble like an aspen leaf shaken in the rough grasp of the wind whenever the lightnings flash and the thunders growl; because years ago they lived through some awful horror of an electric storm. They can never come out from under the shadow of that danger. Like Paul on the road to Damascus, blinded and dazed they were flung into the dirt by an electric thunderbolt, or by it they had their homes shattered and burned, or they had a dear loved one killed by their side. To be frightened by a storm under such circumstances is not necessarily to be cowardly.

The raging of a thunderstorm has always impressed me a good deal as it did my only brother. A few weeks before his death there was a terrific electric storm in Brooklyn. Crash, crash, crash, crash, went the thunder. It seemed then as though all parts of the heavens became at times great prairie conflagrations, great rivers of fire, cataracts of fire and shooting javelins of fire. Father and mother became nervous about the storm. They wanted their children all about them. So father went upstairs to my brother's study to bring him down. The storm was growing. He began to call: "De Witt! De Witt! Where are you?" After awhile, amid a lull in the storm, he heard a voice calling: "Here, father! What do you want?" Then my father went up into the cupola, which stood upon the top of our house. There he found my brother. "What are you doing here?" said father. "Come right down with the rest of the family. You might get struck here." "Oh," answered my brother, "there is no danger. Let us stay up here and watch the storm. Is it not wonderful? Is it not a glorious play of lightning glorious?" Yes, the lightning is glorious if you have rocks of fire given you by the touch of its fingers of fire. It has always been to me a glorious spectacle. I am thrilled by the grandeur as I draw for you the symbol of "the coming Christ" in the "lightning which cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west." May God help me in this sermon to impress upon you the ever present nearness of our Saviour and our divine King.

Christ's second advent. In the first place, shall be a glorious spectacle. He shall come not as a babe to be born in a stable and cradled in a stone crib; he shall come not as a fugitive in his mother's arms upon the back of a humble beast of burden, fleeing into Egypt; he shall come not as a carpenter, with the soiled garments of toil; he shall come not as an outcast, condemned culprit, staggering toward Calvery's heights under the oppressive weight of the cross upon which he has to be crucified. But he shall come in all the splendor of the kings of old. The glittering spears shall be by his side. The burnished helmets and the flashing shields and the waving swords shall be reflecting the lights of his millennial approach. The white steeds of victory then shall be champing their bits and stamping their golden hoofs. The rumbling wheels of myriads of chariots. The resounding cheers of the charioteers and horsemen shall be making the welkin ring with their hallelujahs to Him who comes riding in the chariots. The white horse of victory shall be his brightly caparisoned charger. "King of kings and Lords of lords." The sublime panorama of the flashing lightnings of any text symbolize it.

Could we find a more resplendent pageantry for the second coming of Christ than in the chariots of clouds, with the flashlights of dazzling lightnings? "Gird the sword upon thy thigh, O most mighty, with thy glory and thy majesty!" cries the psalmist. Yes, we have seen Christ in symbol girding on his sword and clothing himself in the glory and in the majesty of the storm.

Some years ago we took a long drive of some fifty miles over the Michigan hills. Before we got back to our summer cottage an awful storm came upon us. The night settled in. The black clouds eclipsed for us the light of every star. It was a black as the plague of darkness in Egypt. From an adjacent farmhouse we borrowed a lantern. The way became so black that even the horses could not see the road. The little children in the stage crept close to their mothers in fear. The silence became as still as the famous half hour of silence in heaven when the celestial hosts, horror-struck, could not utter a whisper immediately after the dying agony of Calvary's tragedy was ended. Then came the rushing of mighty winds. It seemed as though all the spirits demoniac as well as celestial were sweeping past me and meeting in mighty conflict. Then the whole heavens became sheets of fire. North, east, south and west, everywhere the heavens were ablaze. The lightnings seemed to mount higher and higher, as though they were climbing up a thousand story building. Then it seemed as though the clouds with their mighty Niagaras rushed toward them and drowned out those blazing furnaces of Nebuchadnezzar, seven times as hot as only times heated. Then the lightnings alongside the road would bend and groan like shuddering Laocoon in death grip of huge monsters. Most of the time I walked with the lantern to show the way. Now I could see the stage following after me. Now after the thunders had rolled and swelled and died away, I could hear the faint cry of a child or the pitiful tones of a mother trying to quiet her baby, she, the mother, just as frightened as the child. Then suddenly every tree, every rock, every hillside would come out as clear to me as at noon during the day. Then midnoon in an instant would be changed into midnight. Power, power, everywhere in infinite power! Do you wonder that the glory and the majesty of the coming Christ was symbolized by Jesus Himself in the sublime scenic effects of "the lightnings coming out of the east and shining even unto the west?"

I fear that our artists and poets and religious teachers have too often dwelt upon the humanity and the humility and the helplessness of Christ and have not emphasized enough the glory and the majesty and the power as symbolized in the lightnings and the chariot clouds of his second coming. I am afraid that we should impress upon our hearers and scholars the helplessness of Christ incarnate by the form of a little child. The master artists drew a true lesson for us when he made Mary and the divine infant sleep between the great paws of the old Egyptian statue. There was the moon hovering over the infant, silent, calm, the omniscient eye of God the Father watching his only begotten Son. There was Joseph, the omnipotent arm and silent as a sentinel, keeping guard. There in the background was the huge sphinx, half beast, half beast, chiseled and anchored to its foundations thousands of years before Christ was born and still there watching, watching, waiting, waiting thousands of years after Christ is dead. Christ, the helpless Christ there, became helpless in sympathy with us. But oldge than the oldest rocks of the pyramids is the same life of that divine Christ. Longer than those rocks shall ever exist shall the eternal existence of Christ endure. Greater than the power of Herod, who made Bethlehem a slaughter house of innocents, shall be greater than the splendors of Rameses II., whose palace grounds were once lapped by the waters of the river Nile and whose workmen made the desert blossom as the rose, are the strength and the power and splendor of that sleeping child. Christ's second advent shall reveal him as the enfolded in a stone crib; he shall come not as a fugitive in his mother's arms upon the back of a humble beast of burden, fleeing into Egypt; he shall come not as a carpenter, with the soiled garments of toil; he shall come not as an outcast, condemned culprit, staggering toward Calvery's heights under the oppressive weight of the cross upon which he has to be crucified. ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?

Let your morning urine stand for 24 hours in a glass or vessel, and then if it is milky or cloudy, or contains a reddish brick-dust sediment, or if particles or germs float about in it, your kidneys are diseased and your whole system is affected. If they filter just so much blood, but if they are sick or weak from any cause, they leave the poison in the blood, and this poison affects the entire system.

It is natural to pass urine three times a day, but many who regard themselves as healthy are obliged to pass water six to ten times daily and are obliged to get up frequently during the night. They have sick kidneys and bladder and don't know it. Smith's Buchu Lithia Pills cures Rheumatism and all Kidney and Bladder diseases, and make your rich blood.

We will send you a generous sample post paid Free, together with our large book on the above diseases. Address, W. F. Smith Co., 185 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.

AN ENGLISH PEERESS.

Praises Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

From the London (Eng.) Star.

Though sharing with many of our old nobility their traditional reluctance to emerge from ar stocratic privacy and come before the public as the subject of a newspaper article, the Right Hon. Lady Haldon has expressly permitted the publication of a statement recently made to a representative of the Star regarding her wonderful cure by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Recognizing that the words of a title lady in her position must needs have great weight with the public; realizing that in respect to the ailments of the body princes and peasant, lord and laborer are alike; earnestly desiring that the benefits she had derived from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be publicly acknowledged, in the hope that other sufferers might be influenced by her testimony, Lady Haldon waived all personal reluctance and told a story which cannot but impress every reader who considers for a moment the serious reasons which must have prompted a member of the British peerage to come forward in this way.

Lady Haldon's opening words emphasize the lofty motive with which she granted the interview.

"For the sake of all sufferers," said her ladyship, "I want to tell you what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People did for me when I had given up all hope, even though, as you are aware, I am in position, I had the best available professional treatment.

LADY HALDON.

"I have been a great traveller. For years ago, when I was resident in Australia, my heart became seriously affected. Symptoms of advanced anaemia showed themselves. One of the results was the most acute indigestion you can imagine. I suffered severely in the small of my back, under the shoulder blades; but there were present in an aggravated form all the usual symptoms of indigestion, including an especially severe oppression of the chest. I was most carefull in my choice of food, but dieting brought no relief. Even after a glass of water my discomfort was intense and lasting. Tired of any kind caused me such misery that I grew to have a strong aversion to it. I ate less and less, till I was practically starving myself. I could hardly get about, for I attempted to walk even the shortest distance the dreadful palpitations of the heart would make me feel as though I were suffocating.

"As the anaemia developed, I grew ill more alarmingly ill. I could get no sleep at night. My whole system was deranged. My nerves broke down; my head ached constantly until I could not read by the aid of glasses.

"Such suffering must have interfered with your enjoyment of life, Lady Haldon?"

"It did, indeed, and it also took all the pleasure out of travel. When I was in Russia I really thought I was dying. I was ready to do anything or go anywhere to seek relief and release from anxiety. I had the advantage of the treatment of many leading physicians. My illness seemed so deeply rooted that I determined to go to Switzerland for a course of treatment at the Cliniques de la Caroline, where I was, for a time, assiduously attended by physicians of European reputation.

"To attempt to enumerate the medical men who have prescribed for me at various times, unfortunately without any lasting success, would indeed be a tiresome task. Suffice it to say that about June, 1903, after my return from Australia, I was nearly prostrate with one of my attacks. I was reading Pink Pills for Pale People, I became so interested in some cures mentioned therein that I determined to give a trial to the medicine which appeared to have effected such miracles.

"What arrested my attention was the straightforward simplicity of the stories. We are all human—all liable to the same complaints—and I found my sufferings were exactly like those of other women who had been cured. I read the simple facts of their experience, I became convinced, procured a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and commenced taking them as directed.

"Within a few weeks I was astonished at the change that had already taken place, and the great improvement resulted in so short a time. I procured further boxes of pills, and very soon I was delighted to find that all traces of my complaint had practically vanished.

"I could now walk moderate and even long distances with an entire freedom from pain. My appetite had returned with a heartiness and vigor that astonished me, and my general health was such as I had not enjoyed for many years.

"Since that time I have made it a rule never to be without Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and both at home and abroad I find them to be my truest and best friends. Through their aid I have, at various times, in distant and out-of-the-way parts of the world, been able to give relief to sufferers, and somehow when I was in Roustoff, South Russia, I met at the Hotel Continental, a poor, travel-stained lady whose sufferings were terrible. I advised her to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and gave her some from the supply which I always carry with me. To her great surprise and delight the pills speedily cured her, and she was so grateful to me that she gave me a beautiful shaky rug as a keepsake. I treasure that rug," said Lady Haldon, impressively, "for I, too, know how to be grateful for relief from pain."

(Have I your permission, Lady Haldon," inquired the interviewer, "to publish these facts without reservation?"

"I shall be delighted if you will," her ladyship replied. "It gives me the greatest pleasure to testify as to the undoubted efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and you have my full permission to publish my tribute to their worth."

Previous to his withdrawal, the journalist was entrusted with a portrait of the beautiful Lady Haldon, bearing her autograph, which he was desired to present to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company. A portrait sketch from the photograph was published with this interview by her ladyship's express permission.

SUMMER FURNISHINGS.

Cool Looking and Comfortable Arrangements for Summer Days.

A large degree of comfort in warm weather depends upon the piazza space that is available for fitting up as a sitting room. When the weather opens free a living room the interior furnishings may be used in either place, with a few extra pieces added for one or the other. The most desirable rug for the floor is one that is neutral in color, without regard to its material, whether cotton, jute, cocoa matting, wood fiber or wool.

A window seat is a fine accessory for shutting out too intense sunlight from the porch. They may contribute also to the decoration if selected to harmonize with the color scheme of the interior of the house. The bright, varnished yellow of the Japanese screens may be easily altered with two coats of dull or flat paint to accord with the house colors.

Furniture for the porch is made in many different designs in willow, reed, rattan, bamboo, matting, rustic work and hickory. Only a few of these, however, can safely be left to the unsettled weather, and the sitting living room to present a comfortable appearance during the warm weather should be relieved of all window drapery except a thin lace or muslin that will screen the occupants of the room and soften the glare of light. If these curtains are arranged to slip easily across the pole or rod they may when necessary be swung entirely away from the sash.

Upholstered furniture that must be used during the warm weather should have slip covers of cretonne, art ticking or linen which suffer little discomfort from a more pleasing covering than the old time plain and striped linens.

The furniture for the summer living room should correspond to that of the porch, with the addition of lamps, an open fireplace, a writing desk and lounge. Among the lighter makes of furniture there are many representations of a more artistic variety of designs. A new style of tea table is shown in the illustration, an object of interest in this natural color. Its lightness makes it convenient for carrying from the house to the porch or outside upon the lawn.

During the summer an informal arrangement of pictures may take the place of those regularly framed and hung. A collection of photographs, a number of hunting scenes or the English posters can be easily transposed to the country home and grouped against the wall, as suggested by the illustration.—Delineator.

Dangerous Germs in Summer

STRENGTHEN THE STOMACH WITH MI-O-NA AND KEEP WELL.

A wealthy philanthropist in New York spends thousands of dollars every summer providing milk for the babies, with the result that the mortality is greatly decreased. He appreciates the fact that disease germs are common in the summer and that the stomach must be kept healthy to resist their attacks.

Older people do not live on a milk diet to insure health, but they can so strengthen the stomach and digestive organs by the use of Mi-o-na that they too, will be free from sickness in the summer season.

Take a Mi-o-na tablet before each meal, and it will soothe and heal any inflammation that may be present in the lining of the stomach, give tone and strength to the whole digestive system, and aid you in naturally and easily digesting the food. It is the only remedy known that cures indigestion and stomach troubles by strengthening the digestive system. It is guaranteed to—make a complete and permanent cure in all diseases of the stomach except stomach cancer.

Mi-o-na restores complete health to the whole system and cures headache, backache, sleeplessness, pains and distress after eating, vertigo, heart burn, and the general debility that does not obtain if they have a good stomach and imperfect digestion.

A guarantee to refund the money if Mi-o-na does not show help, is given with every 50 cent box. Ask T. B. Wallace to show you the guarantee.

TWO DROWNED AT GLEN ISLAND.

A sad drowning accident occurred about 6 p.m. on Wednesday near Glen Island, when two young people from Deseronto lost their lives. An excursion, under the auspices of the Deseronto Methodist Sabbath School, stopped at Glen Island and among those leaving the boat were Messrs. Jos. Pilgrim and Joseph McKoy and Misses Dora Bowen and Flossie Roberts, all of Deseronto. They found a small boat on the east end of the Island and started out for a row. The boat was constructed with a centre board box, and the sea being very high the craft shipped considerable water through the box. When about twenty yards from shore the craft started to fill and finally upset, throwing the occupants into the water. Only one of the party could swim, Mr. Pilgrim, and the other three clung to him in their fright and took him under. In order to save himself he had to break their hold, otherwise they would have all shared the same fate. Mr. Pilgrim managed to swim to the upturned boat with Miss Bowen, both being rescued by the yacht from Camp Le Nid, which fortunately came around the Island at that time. Search was made for the bodies of Miss Roberts and Mr. McKoy, who were not seen again after they first went down.

OBITUARY.

BRUCE WILLIAMS.

No sadder death has occurred in our midst in some time than that of Bruce, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Williams, which occurred on Wednesday afternoon, 19th July. Bruce was very ill for some weeks with a severe attack of bronchitis, but recovered, and was able to be about town again, with every prospect of speedy recovery to permanent good health. A week ago he was taken down with an attack of acute indigestion, which in his delicate state of health and with other complications, proved too great a strain for his already undermined constitution. Bruce was twenty-one years of age, the pride of his loving parents and beloved by all who had admired him from a child, for his bright sunny disposition and kindly goodfellowship. Deceased was a popular athlete, a fine football and hockey player, honorable in play, and the life of his fellows, his genial manner endearing many to all, young and old. The funeral will take place from his father's residence, East st., this afternoon at 2.30, service at the house, and thence to the Eastern cemetery. The grief stricken parents and brothers and sisters have universal sympathy in their sad hour of trial.

CAPT. ROBERT JOHNSTON.—

A worthy resident of North Fredericksburgh, died at his home, Selby River Road, on Tuesday, in his eighty-seventh year. Deceased was a native of Sweden, and left home when sixteen years of age to follow the calling of a sailor. About fifty years ago he quit his seafaring life, having circled the globe three times, and came to reside in Napanee, at the time of the building of the G. T. Ry. For some years after he sailed on our own great lakes, finally settled on a farm which he managed successfully until his occupation. There is not much to say of Robert Johnston, he was one of God's kindly gentlemen, kind in his family and a favorite with all who learned to know his genuine worth. He was a member of the English church and the last services were held in St. Mary Magdalene church on Thursday afternoon, the remains being placed in the Eastern cemetery. His wife predeceased him about four years ago. He leaves six children, W. Benj. and George Alexander Johnston, and Misses Nellie Maggie, Ida, Edith Johnston, all at home.

ASK YOUR DOCTOR.

He will tell you that Scott's Emulsion cures poverty of the blood and debility of the nerves. He will say that it is the best remedy in the world for delicate children. 29b

BARONESS MACDONALD OF EARNSCLIFFE
The Widow of Canada's Great Statesman

The study of the lives of great men reveals in countless instances that their inspiration, stimulus, and constant source of new strength, was the wise and companionship of a devoted woman. The debt of helpfulness that the late Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's great Premier and statesman, owed to Lady Macdonald, his second wife, cannot be overestimated, according to the testimony of those who knew them both. "All that Lady Macdonald was to the Conservative Premier of England," says one, "Lady Macdonald was to the Conservative Premier of Canada. Their understanding of each other was complete."

On the island of Jamaica, the birthplace of two other brilliant women—the Empress Josephine and the third Lady Holland—Lady Macdonald, daughter of Hon. T. J. Bernard, a member of the Privy Council, was born in 1836. The death of her father, while she was still a child, made it necessary to take her to England for her education. When she was eighteen, she came to Canada with her mother for a visit, her two brothers, Richard and Hewitt Bernard, having entered the legal profession at Ottawa and there she met Sir John Macdonald. Thirteen years later, in 1867, they were married in London. It was a red-letter year in the calendar of their lives and the history of Canada, for it was the year in which the British North American Provinces were united into a federation. Sir John becoming Premier and governor of the New Dominion through its trying first years.

Lady Macdonald accompanied her husband to Washington, and was with him during the long deliberations of the Joint High Commission which resulted in the Treaty of Washington in 1871. She was with him, too, on that great trip over the new Canadian Pacific Railway, whose very existence was so largely due to him, and the steel rails of which bound and united Canada into one great dominion as no bonds of law could ever do.

Lady Macdonald recognizing his splendid services to the Empire, and the zealous devotion of his widow to all the public interests, Queen Victoria graciously pleased to raise her to the peerage by making her a Baroness in her own right—the only Colonial thus honored in the Sovereign's realm. Lady Macdonald has written frequently for the magazines on Canadian topics dear to her heart. Since 1896, when she disposed of Earnscliffe, her beautiful home in Ottawa, she has resided in England.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by W. G. Hunt, at the Department of Agriculture.

DEATH OF DR. MEACHAM.

Mr. Urlah Wilson, M.P., received a telegram on Saturday, announcing the death of Dr. Meacham, at Orillia, Ont., that morning. His sudden death will be a surprise to his many friends and admirers in Napanee and surrounding country, who were unaware of his illness.

Walter William Meacham, M.D., was born at Colborne, Ont., Sept. 22d, 1840. He studied medicine at Dr. Ralphs Medical School, Toronto, and graduated in 1869. In 1870 he married Maggie, only daughter of Geo. Campbell, of Chaffey, and later practised his profession at Odessa. He was first sent to the Legislative Assembly at the general elections of 1890 and 1894, as the Conservative candidate. About a year ago the Dr. removed to Warsaw, where he practised his profession.

Dr. Meacham's grandfather was Dr. Seth Meacham, native of the New England States, and came to Canada about the beginning of last century. He practised medicine in Belleville for many years.

Dr. Meacham was a man of sterling qualities and of high honor, and was able to redeem the old County of Lennox for the Conservatives when it was deemed impossible by many hopelessly lost. He was a leader in his opponents, and unlike most politicians, had no enemies. He was ever heard of. Men of the Dr's high standing are none too plentiful, and his removal by death will be a loss to the community in which he had located so recently. The bereaved widow and children will have the sympathy of their many friends here.

DEATH OF FORMER NAPANEEAN.

JAMES F. FERGUSON.
Kingston Whig.

Few, if any, were prepared for the shocking news which was given out, Friday morning, 21st July, of the death of James F. Ferguson, of the Kingston Cordage company. Mr. Ferguson had not previously the most robust health for some months, being a sufferer from a painful kidney trouble, though one never heard him complain. He was able to be around almost to the day his cheery voice became stilled forever, and news of his sudden summons came as an unwelcome surprise.

The deceased was a native of Kingston, having been born here sixty years ago. He was a son of the late William Ferguson, at one time Kingston's leading dry-goods merchant. In early life he located in Napanee, where he entered into partnership with his brother, the late W. B. Ferguson, and together they carried on a prosperous hardware business for twenty-three years. Ten years ago the two brothers came to Kingston and established the Kingston cordage works. In 1903 the senior partner, W. B. Ferguson, died, and since then the younger brother had charge of the business.

The late James F. Ferguson was loyal to reform principles, and an attendant at Chalmers Presbyterian church. He was the last of the family, and never married. Of a quiet, retiring nature, he lived largely to himself and did not seek to encourage a wide friendship, but those who knew him intimately learned to love the strong personality, the sincere nature, the grand principles and high ideals which he cherished and maintained.

The funeral took place from the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. W. B Ferguson, 376 Alfred street, where death occurred.

SOLILOQUY OF AN AGED FARMER.

My, how the times have changed
From when I was a boy till to-day!
Everything now is done
In a new-fangled, different way;
The fancy, new-fashioned dishes
That are put on the tables to eat,
Would not have tempted the palate,
But now they are thought a treat.

And 'tis said they are better for health,
Better for muscle and bone,
Better for growing children
Into the right kind of tone;
But whenever I look around
At the wonderful progress of the land,
And recall the sturdy lads of the past,
I'm something I can't understand.

Fancy them out in the fields
With scythes and cradles to-day,
Cutting the wheat and the rye,
Also the barley and hay;
Then garner it into the barns,
All by "the sweat of the brow"—
That's how we did when I was a lad,
But nobody does it now.

And I don't think they could wield an axe
On such cookery—light as foam;
It would not give strength and muscle
To hew themselves a home;
They may talk of the dainty dishes
That are passed around to-day,
But I cannot think they are better
Than those of the old fashioned way.

And we hear lots of talk, to-day,
About germs that bring us disease,
Microbes that float in the air,
Always around with the breeze;
But I never heard tell of the like
When I was a boy, you know;
There was not a microbe scare,
And I don't think there was one to show.

The young of to-day are so anxious
To get older to win,
That they have not the patience to work,
But will shirk things every day;
They begin at the top of the ladder,
With everything to their hand,
And don't have to get many a tumble
Before they can understand.

And when I was a slip of a lad—
To-day I am seventy and ten—
It was not the fashion for boys
To set up their opinions with men;
And it was not the fashion for men
To show disrespect for old age,
For people were more reverenced
When they reached that venerable stage.

My, but the times are changed
Since I was a slip of a lad!
In some ways they are changed for the better,
But some of the changes are bad;
They may talk of the wonders improvements
In their manners and customs to-day—
But I long to be living again
In the old-fashioned masterly way.

A FRIGHTFUL DISASTER.

A Main Boiler of U. S. Gunboat Bennington Explodes.

San Diego, Cal., July 22d.—One of the most frightful disasters in the peace history of the American navy, coming the sinking of the Maine in Havana harbor, occurred in San Diego Bay shortly after 10:30 a.m. yesterday, on board the United States gunboat Bennington.

At a moment when the warship, lying at anchor, was the object of interest to hundreds of observing people on the piers and pleasure boats, a column of steam suddenly burst from a joint just forward of the smokestack, out of which the spectators were horrified to see bodies and human fragments hurled high in the air and scattered over the surrounding water.

ROAR AS OF THUNDER.

The outburst was accompanied by a roar as of thunder and a concussion that rocked vessels nearby. The air was filled with shrieks of pain from the wounded, which could be heard ashore and with flying fragments of human beings and pieces of the ship's superstructure. The next moment bleeding sailors were fighting, crippled, in the water against death in a less sudden form than that from which they had escaped, while rowboats, sailboats, launches and tugs were flying to the rescue. A ferryboat hastened to render assistance, her own deck crowded with frightened men and women.

FRIGHTFUL SCENES.

In the water men with blackened faces were struggling, handicapped by injuries. Others on deck were covered with blood, some dead, some wounded frightfully, others working to rescue comrades who were yet below. The small boats turned their attention to those in the water, taking them to the wharves. Ambulances were also phoned for, every express wagon and driver who could be reached by telephone was summoned, physicians were notified and hospitals informed. With in half an hour carriages, buggies, automobiles and street cars were bearing burdens of victims toward the hospitals.

BLOOD EVERYWHERE.

In the meantime a more awful sight awaited those who had hastened to the ill-fated ship, from which steam continued to pour in great clouds. Everywhere was blood, and in all directions were bodies. The after cabin was smeared with blood and the walls, ceiling and floor splashed with red. In the depths below, from which heat and steam rolled in volumes, too great to face, came the groans and wails of dying and the shrieks of the wounded. Tugs and launches soon were headed for the shore, bearing those whose injuries permitted removal, and bodies of the dead.

BODIES BLOWN 200 FEET.

The force of the explosion was terrific beyond conception. Human bodies were hurled into the air to a height probably not less than 200 feet. Sections of the upper deck were carried away from stem to stern, and after a hole was blown in the side of the warship, into which the water rushed, causing the rapid listing of the vessel.

Most of the men on board were assembled between decks, above the boilers, when the explosion occurred, and where the most frightful slaughter occurred. No one living has been able to describe what happened there, but vivid witnesses exist in the bloodsmeared walls.

BOILERS WERE NOT THE BEST.

Washington, July 22d.—The Bennington was a three-masted steamer. Her engines were twin screw horizontal triple expansion and had four cylindrical straightaway boilers, commonly called locomotive gunboat boilers. Each boiler was 17 feet 10 inches long and 9 feet 9 inches in diameter. They were originally designed to carry 160 pounds of steam, but the last log received at the department shows that the safety valves were set for 145 pounds and that she carried 135 to 140 pounds of steam in cruising. The boilers were fifteen years old.

40 DEAD; 100 HURT.

One officer and thirty-nine members of the crew were killed and nearly one hundred sailors injured.

There were more than 250 men aboard when the accident occurred, and many were hurled or forced to jump into the sea by the terrific explosion, which lifted part of the deck, and compelled the beaching of the ship.

Kansas City Journal.

A man who was too economical to subscribe for his home paper sent his little boy to borrow the copy used by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a $4 stand of bees, and in ten minutes looked like a swollen summer squash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance, and failing to notice a barbed wire fence, ran into it, breaking it down, tearing a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining $5 pair of pants. The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence, and got into the corn field and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket the wife ran, upset a four-gallon churn of rich cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole flock. In her hurry she dropped a $20 set of false teeth. The dog left alone, crawled through the spilled cream and into the parlor, ruining a $20 carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up the setting hens, and the calves got out and chewed the tails off four fine shirts.

The maiden was busily knittin';
Said he, who was calmly sittin';
"With me will thou flit?"
She answered me, NIL."
Alas, she was knittin' a mitten!

CURE FOR IVY POISONING.

This is the season when the person who takes wood rambles is very likely to suffer for days therefrom with swollen wrists and itching hands, sometimes suffering real agony, from ivy poison, says Field and Stream. Poison oak and ivy are much like the poisonous sumach in that they all contain a poisonous principle which can only be prevented by washing frequently with hot water; its cure by little boy to borrow the copy used by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a $4 stand of bees, and in ten minutes looked like a swollen summer squash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance, failing to notice a barbed wire fence, ran into it, breaking it down, tearing a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining $5 pair of pants. CURE FOR IVY POISONING.

This is the season when the person who takes wood rambles is very likely to suffer for days therefrom with swollen wrists and itching hands, sometimes suffering real agony, from ivy poison, says Field and Stream. Poison oak and ivy are much like the poisonous sumach in that they all contain a poisonous principle which can only be prevented by washing frequently with hot water; its cure by little boy to borrow the copy used by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a $4 stand of bees, and in ten minutes looked like a swollen summer squash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance, failing to notice a barbed wire fence, ran into it, breaking it down, tearing a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining $5 pair of pants. The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence, and got into the corn field and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket the wife ran, upset a four-gallon churn of rich cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole flock. In her hurry she dropped a $20 set of false teeth. The dog left alone, crawled through the spilled cream and into the parlor, ruining a $20 carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up the setting hens, and the calves got out and chewed the tails off four fine shirts.

THE WINGS OF THE MORNING

BY LOUIS TRACY.

"Robert," said the girl devoutly, "God has been very good to us. Do you remember this hour yesterday?" she murmured. "How we suffered from thirst! how the Dyaks began their second attack from the ridge; how you climbed down the ladder and I followed you? Oh, father, darling," she went on impulsively, tightening her grasp, "you will never know how brave he was; how enduring; how he risked all for me and cheered me to the end."

"I think I am beginning to understand now," answered the shipowner, averting his eyes lest Iris should see the tears in them. The ordeal was over, ended, they thought. Was it for him to lead them again through the sorrowful way? It was a heartrending task that lay before him, to ask from which his soul revolted. He refused even to attempt it.

The explanation of the shipowner's position was painfully simple. Being a daring yet shrewd financier, he perceived in the troubled condition of the far east a magnificent opportunity to consolidate the trading influence of his company. He negotiated two big loans, one of a semipriviate nature to equip docks and railways in the fertile island province of China, the other of a more public character with the government of Japan. All was going successfully, together with those of his principal directors and shareholders, were devoted to these objects. Contemporaneously he determined to stop paying the heavy insurance premiums on his fleet and make it self supporting on the well known mutual principle.

His vessels were well equipped, well manned, replete with every modern improvement and manaaged with great commercial skill. In three or four years, given ordinary trading luck, he must have doubled his own fortune.

No sooner were all his arrangements completed than three of his best ships went down, saddling his company with an absolute loss of nearly £600,000 and seriously undermining his financial credit. A fellow director, wealthy and influential, resigned his seat on the board and headed a clique of disappointed stockholders. At once the fair sky became overcast.

Sir Arthur Deane's energy and financial skill might have enabled him to weather this unexpected gale were it not for the apparent loss of his beloved daughter with the crack ship of his line. Half frenzied with grief, he bade his enemies do their worst and allowed his affairs to get into hopeless confusion while he devoted himself wholly to the search for Iris and her companions. At this critical juncture Lord Ventnor again reached his side. His lordship possessed a large private fortune and extensive estates. He was prudent withal and knew how admirably the shipowner's plans would develop if given the necessary time. He offered the use of his name and money. He more than filled the gap created by the hostile ex-director. People argued that such a clever man, just returning from the far east after accomplishing a public mission of some importance, must be a reliable guide. The unparalleled intelligence of his intention to join the board restored confidence and credit.

But there was a bargain. If Iris lived she must become the Countess of Ventnor. His lordship was, weary of perpetuate lovemaking; it was high time he settled down in life, took an interest in the legislature and achieved a position in the world of affairs. He had a chance now. The certain success of his friend's project, the fortunate completion of his own diplomatic undertaking, marriage with a beautiful and charming woman—these items would consolidate his career. His heart was set on Iris.

He seized the first opportunity that presented itself to make Sir Arthur Deane acquainted with a decision already dreaded by the unfortunate shipowner. Iris must either abandon her infatuation for Anstruther or bring about the ruin of her father. There was no mean.

"If she declines to become Countess of Ventnor she can marry whom she likes, as you will all be peepers together," was the earl's caustic summing up.

This brutal argument rather overshot the mark. The shipowner's face flushed with anger, and Lord Ventnor hastened to retrieve a false step.

"I didn't exactly mean to put it that way, Deane, but my temper is a little short these days. My position on board this ship is intolerable. As a matter of fair dealing to me you should put a stop to your daughter's attitude toward Anstruther on the ground that her engagement is neither approved of by you nor desirable under any consideration."

It may be assumed from this remark that even the earl's sardonic temper was ruffled by the girl's outrageous behavior. Nor was it exactly pleasant to him to note how steadily Anstruther advanced in the favor of every officer on the ship. By tacit consent the court martial was tabooed, at any rate until the Orient reached Singapore, but every one knew that the quarrel lay between Robert and Ventnor, and it is not to be wondered at if Iris' influence alone were sufficient to turn the scale in favor of her lover.

The shipowner refused point blank to interfere in any way during the voyage.

"You promised your co-operation in business even if we found that the Sirdar had gone down with all hands," he retorted bitterly. "Do you wish me to make my daughter believe she has been rescued from the only to bring me irretrievable ruin?"

"That appears to be the result, no matter how you may endeavor to disbelieve it."

"I thought the days were gone when a man would wish to marry a woman against her will."

"Nonsense! What does she know about it? The glamor of this island romance will soon wear off. It would be different if Anstruther were able to maintain her even in comfort. He is an absolute beggar, I tell you. Didn't he ship on your vessel as a steward? Take my tip, Deane. Tell him how matters stand with you, and he will cool off."

CHAPTER XVII.

SIR ARTHUR DEANE was sitting in his cabin in a state of deep dejection when he was aroused by a knock, and Robert entered.

"Can you give me half an hour?" he asked. "I have something to say to you before we land."

The shipowner silently motioned him to a seat.

"It concerns Iris and myself," continued Anstruther. "I gathered from your words a few days ago that you knew that both you and Lord Ventnor regarded Iris as his lordship's promised bride. From your point of view such a arrangement was perhaps natural and equitable, but since your daughter left Hongkong it happens that she and I have fallen in love with each other. No; please listen to me. I am not here to urge my claims on you. I won her fairly and intend to keep her were the whole house of peers opposed to me. At this moment I want to tell you, her father, why she could never, even under other circumstances, marry Lord Ventnor."

Then he proceeded to place before the astounded baronet a detailed history of his recent love affair, save her sordid story of woman's perfidy twice told. It carried conviction in every sentence.

At the conclusion Sir Arthur bowed his head between his hands.

"I cannot choose but believe you," he admitted humbly. "Yet how could you to be so unjustly convicted by a tribunal composed of your brother officers?"

"They could not help themselves. To acquit me meant that they discredited the sworn testimony not only of my colonel's wife, but of the civil head of an important government mission, not to mention some bought Chinese evidence."

"But you are powerless now. You can hardly hope to have your case revised. What chance is there that your name will ever be cleared?"

"Mrs. Costobell can do it if she will. The vagaries of such a woman are not to be depended on. If Lord Ventnor has cast her off her hatred may prove stronger than her passion. Anyhow, I should be the last man to despair of God's providence. Believe the condition of Iris and myself today with our plight on the ledge!"

The shipowner sighed heavily.

"I hope your faith will be justified. If it is not—the more likely thing to happen—do I understand that my daughter and you intend to get married whether I give or withhold my sanction?"

Anstruther rose and opened the door. "I have returned to ask you," he said, "why she should not marry Lord Ventnor. When I come to you and ask you for her, which I pray may be soon, it will be time enough to consider that question should you then decide to put it."

It must be remembered that Robert knew nothing whatever of the older man's predicament, while the baronet, full of his own troubles, was in no mood to take a reasonable view of Anstruther's position.

Thus, for a little while, these two were driven apart, and Anstruther disdained to explain. In that same weeks would elapse before he would be a richer man than his rival. The chief sufferer was Sir Arthur Deane. Had Iris guessed how her father was tormented she would not have remained on the bridge, radiant and mirthful, while the gray haired baronet gazed with stony eyed despair at some memoranda which he extracted from his papers.

"Ten thousand pounds!" he muttered. "Not a great sum for the millionaire financier, Sir Arthur Deane, to raise on his note of hand. A few months ago I was offered me on similar terms the amount on no better security. And now to think that a set of jabbering fools in London should so destroy my credit and their own; that not a bank will discount our paper unless they are assured Lord Ventnor has joined the board! Fancy me, of all men, being willing to barter my child for a few pieces of gold!"

The thought was maddening. For a little while he yielded to utter despondency. It was quite true that a comparatively small amount of money would restore the stability of his firm. Even without it were his credit unimpaired, he could easily tide over the period of depression until the first fruits of his enterprise were garnered. Then all men would hail him as a genius.

Wearily turning over his papers, he suddenly came across the last letter written to him by Iris' mother. How she doted on their only child! He recalled one night shortly before his wife died when the little Iris was brought into her room to kiss her and lisp her infantile prayers. She had devised a formula of her own:

"God bless father! God bless mother! God bless me, their little girl!"

And what was it she cried to him from the beach?

"Your own little girl given back to you!"

Given back to him! For what—to marry that black hearted scoundrel whose pastime was the degradation of women and the defaming of honest men? That settled it. Instantly the cloud was lifted from his soul. A great peace came upon him. The ruin of his business he might not be able to avert, but he would save from the wreck that which he prized more than all else, his daughter's love.

The engines dropped to half speed. They were entering the harbor of Singapore. In a few hours the worst would be over. If Ventnor telegraphed to London his withdrawal from the board nothing short of a cabled draft for £10,000 would prevent certain creditors from filing a bankruptcy petition. In the local banks the baronet had about a thousand to his credit. Surely among the rich merchants of the port, men who knew the potentialities of his scheme, he would be able to raise the money needed. He would try hard. Already he felt braver. The old fire had returned to his blood. The very belief that he was acting in the way best calculated to further his daughter's happiness stimulated and encouraged him.

He went on deck, to meet Iris skipping down the hatchway.

"Oh, there you are!" she cried. "I was just coming to find out why you were mooning in your cabin. You are missing the most beautiful view—all greens and blues and browns! Run, quick! I want you to see every inch of it."

She held out her hand and pulled him gleefully up the steps. Leaning against the taffrail, some distance apart from each other, were Anstruther and Lord Ventnor. Need it be said to whom Iris drew her father?

"Here he is, Robert," she laughed. "I do believe he was sulking because Captain Fitzroy was so very attentive to me. Yet you didn't mind it a bit!"

The two men looked into each other's eyes. They smiled. How could they resist the contagion of her sunny nature?

"I have been thinking over what you said to me just now, Anstruther," said the shipowner slowly.

"Oh!" cried Iris. "Have you two been talking secrets behind my back?"

"It is no secret to you, my little girl"—Her father's voice lingered on the phrase. "When we are alone, Robert, I will explain matters to you more fully. Just now I wish only to tell you that where you have given her heart, I will not refuse her hand."

She took his face between her hands and kissed him. Lord Ventnor, wondering at this effusiveness, strolled forward.

"What has happened, Miss Deane?" he inquired. "Have you just discovered what an excellent parent you possess?"

The baronet laughed almost hysterically. "You my lord," he cried, "you could not have hit upon a happier explanation."

His lordship was not quite satisfied. "I suppose you will take Iris to Smith's hotel?" he said, with cool impudence.

Iris answered him.

"Yes. My father has just asked Robert to come with us—by inference, that is. Where are you going?"

The adroit use of her lover's Christian name goaded his lordship to sudden heat.

"Indeed!" he snarled. "Sir Arthur Deane has evidently decided a good many things during the last hour."

"Yes," was the shipowner's quiet retort. "I have decided that my daughter's happiness should be the chief consideration of my remaining years. All else must give way to it."

The earl's swarthy face grew sallow with fury. His eyes blazed, and there was a tense vibrate in his voice as he said:

"Then I must congratulate you, Miss Deane. You are fated to endure adventures. Having escaped from the melodramatic perils at Rainbow Island you are destined to experience another variety of shipwreck here."

He left them. Not a word had Robert spoken throughout the unexpected scene. His heart was trobbing with a tremendous joy, and his lordship's sneers were lost on him. But he could not fail to note the malignant purpose of the parting sentence.

In his quietly masterful way he placed his hand on the baronet's shoulder.

"What did Lord Ventnor mean?" he asked.

Sir Arthur Deane answered, with a calm smile: "It is difficult to talk quietly at this moment. Wait until we reach the hotel."

The news flew fast through the settlement that her majesty's ship Orient had returned from her long search for the Sirdar. The warship occupied her usual anchorage, and a boat was lowered to take off the passengers.

The boat swung off into the tideway. Her progress shoreward was watched by a small knot of people, mostly loungers and coolies. Among them, however, were two persons who had driven rapidly to the landing place when the arrival of the Orient was reported. One bore all the distinguishing marks of the army officer of high rank, but the other was unmistakably a globe trotter. The older gentleman made no pretense that he could "hear the east a-callin'." He swore imparially at the climate, the place and its inhabitants. At this instant he was in a state of wild excitement. He was very tall, very stout, exceedingly red faced.

Producing a tremendous telescope he vainly endeavored to balance it on the shoulder of a native servant.

"Can't you stand still, you blithering idiot," he shouted, after futile attempts to focus the advancing boat, "or shall I steady you with a clout over the ear?"

His companion, the army man, was looking through a pair of field glasses. "By Jove," he cried, "can see Sir Arthur Deane and a girl who looks like his daughter! There's that infernal Anstruther, too."

The big man brushed the servant out of his way and brandished the telescope as though it were a bludgeon.

"Let dirty beggar!" he swore and laid to misery and death, yet he has come back safe and sound. Wait till I meet him. I'll"—

"Now, Anstruther! Remember your promise. I will deal with Lord Ventnor. My vengeance has first claim. What! By the Jumping Moses, I do believe— Yes., It is. Anstruther! Your nephew is sitting next to the girl!"

The telescope fell on the stones with a crash. The giant's rubicund face suddenly blanched. He leaned on his friend for support.

"You are not mistaken?" he almost whimpered. "Look again, for God's sake, man! Make sure before you speak. Tell me! Tell me!"

"Calm yourself, Anstruther. It is Robert, as sure as I'm alive. Don't you think I know him, my poor disgraced friend, whom I, like the rest, cast off in his hour of trouble? But I had some excuse. There! There! I didn't mean that, old fellow. Robert himself will be the last man to blame either of us. Who could have suspected that two people—one of them, God help me, my wife—would concoct such a hellish plot!"

The boat glided gracefully alongside the steps of the quay, and Playdon sprang gracefully ashore to help Iris to alight. What happened immediately afterward can best be told in his own words, as he retold the story to an appreciative audience in the wardroom.

"We had just landed," he said, "and some of the crew were pushing the coolies out of the way when two men jumped down the steps, and a most fiendish row sprang up—that is, there was no dispute or wrangling, but one chap, who, it turned out, was Colonel Costobell, grabbed Ventnor by the shirt front and threatened to smash his face in if he didn't listen then and there to what he had to say. I really thought I should interfere until I heard Colonel Costobell's opening words. After that I would gladly have seen the beggar checked into the harbor. We never liked him, did we?"

"Ask no questions, Pompey, but go ahead with the yarn," growled the first lieutenant.

"Well, it seems that Mrs. Costobell is dead. She got enteric a week after the Orient sailed and was a goner in four days. Before she died she owned up."

He paused, with a base eye to effect. Not a man moved a muscle.

"All right," he cried. "I will make no more false starts. Mrs. Costobell begged her husband's forgiveness for her treatment of him and confessed that she and Lord Ventnor planned the affair for which Anstruther was tried by court martial. It must have been a beastly business, for Costobell was sweating with rage, though his words were icy enough. And you ought to have seen Ventnor's face when he heard of the depositions, sworn to and signed by Mrs. Costobell and by several Chinese servants whom he bribed to give false evidence. He promised to marry Mrs. Costobell if her husband died, or, in any event, to bring about a divorce when the Hongkong affair had blown over. Then she learned that he was after Miss Iris, and there is no doubt she would have helped on the fever. Costobell said that, for his wife's sake, he would have kept the wretched thing secret, but he was compelled to clear Anstruther's name, especially as he came across the other old Johnnie"—

"Pompey, you are incoherent with excitement. Who is the other old Johnnie?" asked the first luff severely.

"Didn't I tell you? Why, Anstruther's uncle, of course, a heavy old swell with just a touch of Yorkshire in his tongue. I gathered that he disinherited his nephew when the news of the court martial reached him. Then he relented and cabled to him. Getting no news, he came east to look for him. He met Costobell the day after the lady died, and the two vowed to be revenged on Ventnor and to clear Anstruther's character, living or dead. Poor old chap! He looks like a lamb when he asked the youngster to forgive him. It was quite touching.

"Well, Costobell shook Ventnor off at last, with the result observed—that Anstruther's court martial has been quashed. The next batch of general orders will reinstate him in his rank, pay, and it rests with him to decide whether or not a criminal warrant shall be issued against his lordship for conspiracy."

"What did Miss Deane do?"

"Clung to Anstruther like a weeping angel and kissed everybody all round when Ventnor got away. Well—hands off. I mean her father, Anstruther and the stout uncle. Unfortunately I was not on in that scene. But for some reason they all seemed wrung my arm off, and the men were so excited that they gave the party a rousing cheer as their lordship was put off in a bunch."

The next commotion arose in the hotel when Sir Arthur Deane seized the first opportunity to explain the predicament in which his son-in-law-elect was placed and the blow which Lord Ventnor yet had it in his power to deal.

Mr. William Anstruther was an interested auditor. Robert would have spoken, but his uncle restrained him.

"Leave this to me, lad," he exclaimed. "When I was coming here in the Sirdar Deane was a bit of talk about Sir Arthur's scheme, and there should not be much difficulty in raising all the brass required if half what I heard be true. Sit you down, Sir Arthur, and tell us all about it."

The shipowner required no second bidding. With the skill for which he was noted he described his operations in detail, telling how every farthing of the first instalments of the two great loans had been spent, how the remainder of his fleet would quickly overtake the deficit in capital value caused by the loss of the three ships and how in six months' time the Iris Line would rank with those of London, Paris and Berlin would be offering him more money than he would need.

To a shrewd man of business the project could not fail to commend itself, and the Yorkshire squire, though he muttered "Brave, brave," he cried, "I can see the similarly clear headed in other respects. He brought his great fist down on the table with a whack.

"Deane, I cable to your company, Sir Arthur," he cried, "and tell them that your prospective son-in-law will provide the £10,000 you require. I will see that his daughter is honored. You can add, if you like, that another ten will be ready if wanted when this lot is burned. I did my lad one deuced bad turn in my life. This time, I think, I am doing him a good one."

"You are, indeed," said Iris' father enthusiastically. "The smallest capital he is taking up will be worth four times its face value in two years."

Until the more reason to make his holding twenty-four of ten," roared the Yorkshireman. "But, look here. You talk about dropping proceedings against that precious earl whom I saw today. Why not tell him not to try any funny tricks until Robert's money is safely lodged to your account? We have him in our power. Dash it all, let us use him a bit."

Even Iris laughed at this naive suggestion. It was delightful to think that the baronet's visionary was actually helping the baronet's affairs at that very moment and would continue to do so until he was flung aside as being of no further value. Although Ventnor himself had carefully avoided any formal commitment, the cablegrams which passed between Singapore showed that confidence had already been restored by the uncontradicted story of his lordship's name.

Robert at last obtained a hearing.

"You two are quietly assuming the attitude of the financial magnates of the gathering," he said. "I must admit that you have managed things very well between you, and I do not propose for one moment to interfere with your arrangements. Nevertheless, Iris and I are really the chief moneyed persons present. You spoke of financial backing in England and on the continent backing in England and on the continent backing for the next few months hence, Sir Arthur. You need not go to them. We will be your backers."

The baronet laughed with a whole hearted gayety that revealed whence Iris got some part at least of her light heartedness.

"Will you sell your island, Robert?" he cried. "I am afraid that not even Iris could wheedle any one into buying it."

"But, father, dear," interrupted the girl earnestly, "what Robert says is true. We have a gold mine there. It is worth so much that you will hardly believe it until there can no longer be any doubt in your mind. I suppose that is why Robert asked me not to mention his discovery to you earlier."

"No, Iris, that was not the reason," said her lover, and the elder men felt that more than idle fancy inspired the astounding intelligence that they had just heard. "Your love was more to me than all the gold in the world. I had won you. I meant to keep you, but I refused to buy you."

He turned to her father. His pentup emotion mastered him, and he spoke as one who could no longer restrain his feelings.

"I have had no chance to thank you for the words you uttered at the moment we quitted the ship. Yet I will treasure them while life lasts. You gave Iris to me when I was poor, disgraced, an outcast from my family and my profession. And I know why you did the thing. It was because you valued her happiness more than riches or reputation. I am sorry now, Sir Arthur, that I was not quite candid. I would have saved you much needless suffering. But the sorrow has sped like an evil dream, and you will perhaps forgive me for your action today binds me to you with hoops of steel. And you, too, uncle. You travelled thousands of miles to help and comfort me in my anguish. Were I as bad as I was painted your kind old heart still pitied me. You were prepared to plumb me from the depths of despair and degradation. Why should I hate Lord Ventnor? What man could have served me as he did? He has given me Iris. He gained for me at her father's hands a concession such as mortal has seldom wrested from black browed fate. He brought my uncle to my side in the hour of my adversity. Hate him! I would have his statue carved in marble and set on high to tell all who passed how good may spring out of evil—how God's wisdom can manifest itself by putting even the creeping and crawling things of the earth to some useful purpose."

"Dash it all, lad," vociferated the elder Anstruther, "what ails thee? I never heard you talk like this before?"

The old gentleman's amusement was so comical that further tension was out of the question.

Robert, in calmer mood, informed them of the manner in which he hit upon the mine. The story sounded like wildest romance—this finding of a volcanic dyke guarded by the bones of "J. S." and the poison filled quarry—but the production of the ore samples changed wonder into certainty.

Next day a government metallurgist estimated the value of the contents of the two oil tins at about £500, yet the specimens brought from the island were not by any means the richest available.

And now there is not much more to tell of Rainbow Island and its castaways. On the day that Captain Robert Anstruther's name appeared in the Gazette, reinstating him to his rank and regiment, Iris and he were married in the English church at Hongkong, for it was his wife's wish that the place which witnessed his ignominy should also witness his triumph.

"Sweetheart," said her husband.

Soon afterward Robert resigned his commission. He regretted the necessity, but the demands of his new sphere in life rendered this step imperative. Mining engineers, laborers, stores, portable houses, machinery, equipment were obtained with all haste, and the whole party sailed on one of Sir Arthur Deane's ships to convoy a small steamer specially hired to attend to the wants of the miners.

At last, one evening early in July, the vessels anchored outside Palm Tree rock, and Mir Jan could be seen running frantically about the shore, for no valid reason save that he could not stand still. The sailor had made good news. The governor of Hongkong felt that any reasonable request made by Anstruther should be granted if possible. He had written such a strong representation of the Mohammedan's case to the government of India that these latter, when the returning mail would convey an official notification that Mir Jan had been granted a free pardon.

The mining experts verified Robert's most sanguine views after a very brief examination of the deposit. Hardly any preliminary work was needed. In twenty-four hours a small concentrating plant was erected and a ditch made to drain off the carbonic anhydride in the valley. After dusk a party of coolies cleared the quarry of its former occupants. Toward the close of the following day, when the great steamer once more slowly turned her head to the northwest, Iris could hear the steady thud of an engine at work on the first consignment of ore.

Robert had been busy up to the last moment. There was so much to be done in a short space of time. The vessel carried a large number of passengers, and he did not wish to detain them too long, though they' one and all expressed their willingness to suit his convenience in this respect.

Now his share of the necessary preparations was completed. His wife, Sir Arthur and his uncle were gathered in a corner of the promenade deck when he approached and told them that his last instruction above was for a light to be fixed on Summit rock as soon as the dynamo was in working order.

"When we all come back in the cold weather," he explained gleefully, "we will not imitate the Sirdar by running on to the reef should we arrive by night."

Iris answered not. Her blue eyes were fixed on the fast receding cliffs.

"Sweetheart," said her husband, "why are you so silent?"

She turned to him. The light of the setting sun illumined her face with its golden radiance.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women

Are the Up-to-Date Remedy.

Medicines, like clothes, are made from different materials now than they were twenty-five years ago. Some of the materials used in making Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women had not been discovered then. You cannot get these new ingredients in the old time remedies. And yet these ingredients are used now in diseases of women by all the world's greatest physicians.

Progressive women—thinking women keep up-to-date in the matter of medicines as well as clothes. They are buying Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets, that twentieth century preparation for women, and the one now recognized beyond doubt or question as the one best adapted to their special needs.

They make healthy women.

Tinted Woodwork For Bedrooms.

In tinted woodwork for colonial bedrooms pale green and a cream white, flushed with pink, are much liked, while a dull tinted cream and a silver gray that looks almost white are two other favorites. Care should be taken, however, to avoid crude color tones.

Fashion Echoes.

Box and side plaits are charming ways of putting bodice and skirt into harmony.

Ribbons lavishly used furnish the decoration of filmy summer frocks.

Straight foot ruffles from four to six inches in width are a favorite style of trimming for skirts of shirt waist costumes.

Rose pink French chambray makes a fascinating little frock.

The newest belts are nearly all broad in crush girdle effect.

Something entirely new in the way of neglegee is the white silk jacket with basques made of lace entire, the lace dyed in some delicate shade and lined with soft silk or chiffon of matching color.

The only lines in the figure that are defined at all this summer are the waist, throat and shoulders.

The prevailing fancy of the season is the use of laces in the most varieties and colors, with embroidery, all on one gown.

A remarkable feature of new fashions is the invasion of the short skirt into the field of dressy street costumes.

WHAT CAUSES APPENDICITIS.

The commonest cause of appendicitis is constipation. When you neglect to physic don't use cheap drastic pills — get Dr. Hamilton's Pills which strengthen the stomach, regulate the bowels and prevent any tendency to appendicitis. In one day you'll feel the tremendous benefit of Dr. Hamilton's Pills by purifying the blood and cleansing the system they prevent headache, indigestion and drive away weariness. No medicine so pleasant as Dr. Hamilton's Pills, sold everywhere in 25c. boxes with yellow cover; get the genuine.

June, July and August are trying to church treasuries. Salaries and other expenses have to be met, but too often funds are short and obligations are perplexed. A little forethought on the part of contributors at this time would be away for several weeks or months might make it easier for those who remain at home to face the demands upon the treasury. Some churches have a few members who decline to contribute to the financial support of the churches to which they belong during the time they are away, but such people are growing less numerous year by year.

ONE DOLLAR SAVED REPRESENTS TEN DOLLARS EARNED.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. RULE OF NATURAL LAW IN SPIRITUAL WORLD PREVAILS.

MANHOOD AND WOMANHOOD

Best Types Produced If Physical, Mental, Moral and Spiritual Development Proceeds Harmoniously Together—Fine Animals Who Were Great Men In the Other Direction—First Requisite to Good Life.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dixey, of Toronto at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 23.—In this sermon the preacher demonstrates the rule of natural law in the spiritual world, and shows that physical, mental, moral and spiritual development ought to proceed harmoniously together to produce the best type of manhood and womanhood. The text is Psalms 1, 6, "The way of the ungodly shall perish."

Great was the scientific galaxy of the Victorian era. Herbert Spencer and John Tyndall and Thomas Henry Huxley and Michael Faraday and Sir Humphrey Davy and Sir Charles Lyell and Sir William Hooker and John Stevens Henslow and scores of other botanists and physicists and chemists and geologists will make the reign of Victoria famous during the coming centuries, as the contemporary poets of Shakespeare immortalized the Elizabethan reign. Yet among all the naturalists who lived in England during the nineteenth century not one will be more quoted by future generations than Charles Darwin. The son and grandson of two great ancestors he was the greatest of the three. From under the overhanging dome of that great forehead there looked forth penetrating eyes which read the prehistoric geologies of animals and vegetables. As a geologist he read the open leaves of rocks. The past ages were to him as necessary as time. He lived not-in generations or in centuries, but in ages and in millenniums. Though, Galileo, he was excommunicated by the church and looked upon as an enemy of the Cross his researches will be used, and are even now being used, to prove that true science and divine revelation are one.

Of all the books written by Darwin wrote not one has had greater influence upon the scientific world than his "Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection." We do not accept that book in every detail of speculating, but in that book is one sentence which in a narrow sense we do accept. The sentence is the title itself. It is a sentence which will go ringing down the corridors of time. We find the survival of the fittest everywhere. We find the stronger plants crowding out the weaker. We find the stronger species living upon and destroying the weaker species. We find the stronger creatures of the various species trampling upon and destroying the animals and plants of their own kind.

The other day I was sitting on a porch overlooking a beautiful yard filled with roses. Suddenly I heard a great commotion in the rose bushes. With that I saw a big cat gracefully leap over the fence with a little chicken in her mouth. Then, on the distance, I saw that cat run away in terror from a pursuing dog. Then, in imagination I saw that little dog being seized by a hungry wolf. Then I saw the wolf being killed by a mountain lion. Next I saw the lion being slain by the bullet of a man. In imagination, everywhere I saw the stronger preying upon the weaker. As I sat on that porch I said to myself, "Is not Charles Darwin's sentence, 'the survival of the fittest,' not only the law of nature, but also the law of God?" Yes, yes, I said, it is true. God deals with the human race just as he deals with the vegetable and animal kingdoms, as well as with the mineral. It is not for us to vindicate that law. Our interest and our duty lie in recognizing its existence and adapting ourselves to its operation. The penalty of indolence in this world is subjection and finally extinction

Strong physically should we be. Why? Because in this fighting, hustling, pushing, jostling and high pressure age it is almost an impossibility for any man to make a success in life, unless he is broad of chest, stout of limb and clear of eye. Even under the very brightest of conditions the physical strain is awful. With poor physical equipment a successful life is well nigh an impossibility.

Many a man of clear brain, true heart and noblest aspirations has been trampled underfoot merely because he had not the physical vitality to do the work which he was called upon to do. The physical weakling of the human race is almost in the same position as is a sick cow amid a herd of stampeding bulls. If she cannot keep up in the mad race for life, she fails. She is crushed under hoof. Her sisters and brothers pass over her prostrate form and quivering flesh. The physical weakling is in the same position as the sick cow. The stouter tree and the taller reaches up and reaches down. With its broad branches it shoots all the sunlight overhead and makes the stunted tree live under its shadow. With its deeper and stronger roots the tall tree absorbs most of the nutriment out of the soil. Thus, the stronger live to withstand the physical strain and do as much work as his stouter and broader chested brothers. He falls, another takes his place, and the world marches on. The physical weakling inevitably is either trampled underfoot or his other pushes him out of his position in the line of the advancing human army of progress.

If you do not believe in the physical survival of the fittest, examine the faces of some of our successful men. When the great Henry Ward Beecher for the first time entered the arena of life, the stouter tree and the taller reaches up and reaches down. With its broad branches it shoots all the sunlight overhead and makes the stunted tree live under its shadow. With its deeper and stronger roots the tall tree absorbs most of the nutriment out of the soil. Thus, the stronger live to withstand the physical strain and do as much work as his stouter and broader chested brothers. He falls, another takes his place, and the world marches on. The physical weakling inevitably is either trampled underfoot or his other pushes him out of his position in the line of the advancing human army of progress.

If you do not believe in the physical survival of the fittest, examine the faces of some of our successful men. When the great Henry Ward Beecher for the first time entered the arena of life, Orson Fowler, the phrenologist exclaimed to his patients, "Why, what a fine animal!" Mr. Beecher was a fine animal. As you look upon the picture of that magnificent head you are not surprised to hear that young Henry Ward Beecher was the finest football kicker of his class in Amherst College. But as I look upon a long row of pictures of the world's most eminent ministers of the past generation I find that almost without exception they were all good animals. It is almost an impossibility for any man to stand in the front rank of the ministry to-day without being a physical athlete, Rev. Robert Collyer, the great preacher of New York, graduated from the blacksmith's forge. The many ministers who are preaching in our large cities to-day could easily step from the pulpit to the blacksmith's forge and make a herculean blow, so great is their physical as well as mental stamina.

"I enter the law offices of the late Senator William M. Evarts, "Mr. Choate," I say, "why did your partner make the wonderful success of you? For years he stood at the head of the New York bar. Once our late Ambassador to England answers: "Because Mr. Evarts was a good animal. He could sit down at his desk and work ten hours day in and day out for eighteen hours out of every twenty-four. He had mental equipment, and he had superb, limited physical resources." William M. Evarts was able to succeed when others failed because his backbone was as strong as if made of steel. What is true of the lawyer and minister is also true of the physician, the author and the merchant. The reason one class of men fails and the other succeeds is often due not more to great mental strength than to physical stamina.

"The survival of the fittest." Yes, yes, we find it in the law of physical equipment. Young men, young women, in this struggle of life are you willing to allow yourselves to be trampled underfoot merely because you do not look after your physical health? Are you going to let the great opportunities of life slip from your grasp merely because you have not the physical force of physical exercise and food and sleep for your lungs and heart and stomach? Young people, by the law of the survival of the fittest God bids you take care of yourselves physically. That is not truism, but it is a truism the Darwinian teachings, as well as the divine commandments, are trying to bring home to human hearts. I see the broad, stout-chested farmer's boy coming to town with his team and pushing the pale physical weaklings to right and left.

I would also tell you that there is an inexorable law of the survival of the fittest in the mental world. The man who can think the quickest, the man who can supply some long felt want in the community, is the man who is going to be able to pounce upon a fine chicken or a leopard to leap upon the back of a fawn is precisely the same law which makes it possible for the man of brains to climb to his throne over the backs of men who have no brains. Communism says: "That is not right. No one man should have more than his fellows." But communism may talk from now until doomsday. Talking will do no good. There is a universal law of the survival of the fittest in a mental way, and no communism except the communism of Christian love can change it.

How is this law working out—that brains which think trample over brains which do not think? Why, you can see its results on every hand. Thirty or forty years ago every little town had its cobbler. This cobbler not only repaired the shoes and boots, but also made the shoes and boots, but one day there came along a man with brains. He said to himself: "What is the use of all these cobblers making their boots by hand? I will make machinery do the work of flesh and blood." This man of brains went to work and built a large factory. He employed 200 hands. He made these 200 hands, with the use of machinery, do ten times the work which the same number of hands used to do. He also lowered the selling prices. The shoes and boots were sold one-third cheaper than they used to be. The man of brains who drove out the village cobbler was the same kind of man that drove out the village wheelwright.

The fittest survive in the mental realm. There is no doubt about it. Now, my friends, and you young and young friends, what are you going to do about this fact? Are you going to let your brains lie dormant? Because some have been cobblers for twenty years, are you still to be a cobbler now? Are you mentally going to try to do the work of the present century in the way our fathers did their things and not by the present up to date methods? Are you going to resist the advancement of the age, differing in degree, when your bowels do not move at least once a day. You know it soon becomes sluggish and tired, your blood gets bad and you feel mean and sick all over. You should think of the consequences of its lines toward Pittsburg. The railroad officials wanted to run their iron rails through a certain farm, but the farmers rose up in protest. They said: "If we allow this railroad to run here it will do all the hauling. Our farms will be broken up, and our horses will be useless, because there will be nothing left for them to carry to market." These farmers not only protested thus, but in the State Legislature halls at Harrisburg, through their representative, they defeated that railroad from running through their township. The result was that that railroad going into Pittsburg took another course. The old farmers' township is now aldetracked. It is nothing but a simple country town. On the other hand, the valley through which that railroad now runs is prosperous and the population has doubled and trebled in value. There is an inevitable law of the survival of the fittest in the mental realm. How are you grasping your opportunities? Are you trying to make the world travel in stagecoaches and canal boats when the shrieking whistle of the Overland Limited is calling its passengers to abet aboard. If you do not develop your brains, then, by the law of man and the law of God, to the survival of the fittest go. "Survival of the fittest" is the mental demonstration of life. Never let that one truth out of your mind. If you have developed your intellect to its highest possibilities.

But the fittest survive in the moral world as well as in the physical and the mental. The man who is honest and true and noble will always, in the long run, win over the man who is deceitful and dishonest. There is absolutely no doubt about it. All other things being equal, there is a survival of the fittest in the moral realm. Yet to hear some people talk you would suppose that it never pays to be honest or truthful in business life.

The merchant who is successful in the true sense of the word is not the man who cheats his customers, but the man who will give his customers more for their money than any one else will give. A great merchant builds up his business by winning the confidence and the respect of a community, not by selling them shoddy goods. The man who is told that many years ago a new trader went out to live among the Indians. No sooner had he landed and opened his store than the Indian chief came to him and asked for some goods. The chief said, "I pay you to-morrow." The next day the Indian chief returned with many members of his tribe. They commenced to pay the trader for the goods. He gave him one otter skin, then another skin, then another skin and then another skin until he had given to him four skins. The goods were worth just about four skins. Then the chief drew out a beautiful otter skin and offered it also. He offered this fifth skin to test the trader's honesty. "Chief," said the trader, "I do not want that fifth skin. You have paid me enough." The Indian chief said: "No, no. White man, take this skin also." Again and again the white trader refused. "No, chief," said he, "you have paid me enough. I do not want any more." With that the Indian chief gave a grunt of satisfaction. He turned to his warriors and said: "Come," trade with paleface. He honest man." Then, turning to the white trader he said: "Paleface, suppose you take that last skin, Indian no trade with you. Then me know you dishonest white man." Ah, yes, the old Indian trader knew the law of the survival of the fittest in the business world. The way the great merchant builds up his true business success is not by cheating his customers, but by always being honest, always true and always trying to give his customers more for their money than they can get in any other store.

As there is a survival of the fittest in the physical and moral and mental realms, so there is also a survival of the spiritual realm. Charles Darwin was content to apply this sentence to the spiritual world, but God does. God emphatically does this in the words of my text. How does the first Psalm of David read? The godly "shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth its fruit in its season. His leaf also shall not wither, and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. * * * But the way of the ungodly shall perish." Yes, there is the law of the survival of the fittest in the spiritual world. If we are one with Christ we shall grow and keep on growing all through the centuries and bring forth fruit millennium after millennium. If we are not one with Christ, we shall become "like the chaff which the wind driveth away." The whirlwinds of the Judgment day shall sweep us away to our eternal doom.

"But," says one, "how could a man like Charles Darwin grasp a great truth like this of the natural world and yet not grasp it in the spiritual? How could he find God's footprints in nature and yet not find God's footprints on Calvary's rocks?" Ah, my friends, I cannot account for that. I cannot and dare not pass judgment on Charles Darwin's life. I cannot understand how this great student of nature could turn his back upon God any more than I can understand how he who was once such a lover of the beautiful could so warp his mind that the poets like Shakespeare and the musicians like Handel and Beethoven and Wagner could not touch his heart.

But I can only read the following: "I have said that in one respect my mind has changed during the last twenty years. It is not a case of atrophy, or beyond it poetry of many kinds, such as the works of Milton, Gray, Byron, Wordsworth, Coleridge and Shelley, gave me great pleasure, and even as a schoolboy I took intense delight in Shakespeare, especially in the historical plays. I have also said that formerly pictures gave me considerable pleasure and music very great delight. But now, for many years, I cannot endure to read a line of poetry. I have tried lately to read Shakespeare and found it so intolerably dull that I nauseated me. I have also lost my taste for music and pictures. I retain some taste for fine scenery, but it does not cause me the exquisite delight which it formerly did." In other words, Charles Darwin became such a close student in one line of science that his brain has ever since been starved in art and nature and his love for God to become atrophied. Parts of his brain have completely died. Some parts were completely dead.

Let me read on a little further: "My mind seems to have become a kind of machine for grinding general laws out of large collections of facts, but why this should have caused the atrophy of that part of the brain alone on which the higher tastes depend is inconceivable. A man with a mind more highly organized or better constituted than mine would not, I suppose, have thus suffered, and if I had to live my life again I would have made a rule to read some poetry and listen to some music at least once a week, for perhaps the parts of my brain now atrophied would thus have been kept active through use. The loss of these tastes is a loss of happiness and may possibly be injurious to the intellect and more probably to the moral character by enfeebling the emotional part of our nature." Do you wonder that Darwin, who wrote such sentences as these, could let the spiritual part of his life become atrophied as well as the sensitive and the love for the beautiful? And so, young people as well as older people, as you develop along physical lines see that you keep on to develop along the line of the spiritual. I want you to develop in Christ and through Christ, who is the highest model for all spiritual development.

"But," says some one, "I have never tried to develop myself in and through Christ." Then, my brother, is that any reason why you should not start now? Then when an enemy one day labored the great preacher Esprit Fechier became filled with humility and because he had begun life as a tallow chandler, Dr. Fiechier replied, "Yes, my sphere in life used to be very humble, but in all probability had you begun life as I began it, you would have been a candle maker all your life." And should some of us are warped spiritually is that any reason why, in Christ, we cannot become "like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth its fruit in its season"? Oh, my friends, in Christ and through Christ, we are not spiritually scarr anew? Then, by the law of the survival of the fittest with God, you shall prosper and live forever and ever. Will you not, here and now, become one with Christ for the highest of all development?

DRESS AND FASHION.

COSTUMES FOR VARIOUS FASHIONABLE SUMMER FUNCTIONS

Race and Other Fete Gowns—Parasols of Many Degrees of Intactiness. The Latest Paris Innovation in the Figure.

Dress now looks largely toward the many fashionable open air functions. The race gowns gather into one mystifying whole any number of the small details that now abound. Here, for instance, is a rose pink barege or bengaline gown, showing a combination of narrow plaits, vertical tucks and box plaits, together with an old fashioned ruche. The shaped belt is in a deeper tone of moire velvet. Lace frills furnish the huge sleeves, and pretty chuy edging softens the oval opening of the blouse. The yoke is of white muslin embroidered in black. The plate shaped hat is a concoction of pink and silk muslin plaiting, lace and red and white roses.

Midsummer, with its races, coaching parties and various al fresco gatherings, brings the glory of the parasol. It may safely be said there is something for everybody, the choice ranging from the simplest little en tout cas to the confections of the races and garden parties. Of the latter sort is a rose decked affair of white silk trellised over with pink and yellow shaded blooms, the center near the stick softened by a touch of chiffon, the edge similarly tempered with a full doubled frill.

Sleeves as exploited in Paris modes are worn in very different styles—the demi-longues in a puff and the well nigh close fitting mode of some years ago, while the bolero, with pelerine sleeves cut into the back and worn over a linon blouse, still holds away in the vanguard of the season's models.

Simplicity of style, with costliness of embroidery and handsome trimmings, marks the most striking examples in linon gowns. An introduction of colored tulle or linon as a garniture on entire white or cream linon gowns is especially effective.

Floral linon de soie and pompadour mollienes over colored silk transparencies compose many lovely fete gowns, while changeable and supple taffetas appear in some of the latest chic costumes.

As to the figure, a revival of the smaller waist and higher bust line seems to be in progress. Paris has made the long basqued, close fitting, tight sleeved coat the distinct innovation of the day, to be met everywhere and almost at any hour, and always it is the same quiet, effective style of garment, striking a sharp note in contrast to the ruched, frilled and flounced popular feature of the present, and these two opposite elements afford a very entertaining variety in fashion's attractive picture.

That the coat described will be with us in the autumn is as sure as frost, with what variations on its original severity can hardly be foreseen. But it is to be hoped that the slight suggestion of looseness at the waist in front, which prevents the old fashioned, hard, indented line of the figure, will be preserved.

Two Styles of Skirts.

The two styles of skirts adopted by ultra smart gownmakers have in one case a bias seam down the front, with ample fullness spreading out from the sides. GUARD AGAINST GERMS.

Keep Well by Strengthening the Stomach in Summer With Mi-o-na.

In time of war the most responsibility rests upon the guard. If he is lacking in vigilance, disaster can easily overtake the army.

With the individual life, the stomach may well represent the "guard" against sickness. If it is strong and vigilant, any disease germs that may be swallowed will be neutralized by the digestive juices, or else driven from the system.

Everyone with weak digestion should use Mi-o-na at this season and so strengthen the stomach that disease germs can have no effect whatever. This remarkable remedy puts the whole digestive system in so healthy, clean and sweet a state that fermentation of the food cannot exist, that any disease germs which may enter the stomach will be destroyed, and food will be so readily assimilated that a rapid and healthy increase in flesh will result.

Nervousness and sleeplessness come more often from a weak stomach than from any other cause; head ache, back-ache, and rheumatic pains are directly caused by an acid condition of the stomach. Mi-ona corrects all this, prevents the formation of acids, and nervousness, kidney trouble, or rheumatism, is quickly cured.

Ask at the Red Cross Drug Store to show you the guarantee under which they sell Mi-o-na. Price 50 cents. It costs nothing unless it does.

POET WILLIAM MORRIS

APPRECIATION OF THE GREAT CRAFTSMAN AND SOCIALIST.

His Fame in Literature Will Be Aristocratic in Two Distinct Respects—An Anomalous Fact When the Democratic Nature of His Literary Ideals is Considered—His Work in Making Common Things Beautiful.

Nine years have passed since William Morris' death, and it is not perhaps overbold to predict the way in which he will come to be regarded by the new generations which must pass judgment on the old reputations. It is already sufficiently evident that his fame in literature will be aristocratic both as regards the restricted limits of its audience and as regards the assignment of taste which the appreciation of his prose and verse demands. This fact is in itself anomalous, when we consider the democratic nature of Morris' literary ideals. Then as regards art, we must recognize the fact that his significance lay chiefly in the impetus which he gave towards the creation of beautiful things, and towards a healthier conception of the part which beauty should play in the everyday life of the people. He was not, apart from literature, in any high sense a creative artist, but an inspired and zealous craftsman, with strong and often sane convictions, which he had the force enough to impress upon his generation.

What interests one most deeply in Morris is the ease and mastery with which he passed continually from one absorbing occupation to another, and therewithal the unity of purpose and the rugged sincerity which underlay the apparent diversity. We know him first as a boy at Marlborough College whetting his curiosity on the Roman and pre-Gothic remains of that town, and gathering those impressions of natural beauty which pass like a gleaming thread through the prose and verse of his maturer years. Oxford, about whose grey towers something still lingered of the enchantment of the middle ages, stimulated his love of architectural beauty, a love that was deepened until it became a passion by his journeys on foot among the Gothic cathedrals of northern France. Oxford gave him, too, the inspiration of a kindred spirit, his life-long friend and associate in all his labors, Burne-Jones. Then followed the comparatively brief infatuation for Rossetti, who was old enough and impetuous enough to become the master spirit of that early group. At Rossetti's instance and under his inspiring yet erratic guidance Morris for several years strove loyally to gain a mastery over paint. To this end he abandoned his chosen profession of architecture, but for the first and last time in his life he was forced to acknowledge himself beaten. However, with Morris every experience was turned to ultimate advantage, and even this painting venture can scarcely be considered as a false start, for it gave him a securer mastery of detail and a surer sense of color in the decorative work of later years. Already he had given evidence of original power in the exercise of facility in both prose and verse, and it must certainly have been a surprise to friends to know the precise direction that his creative energy would take. For furnishing a house in Queen square to-day at a time when the art of decoration had sunk to its lowest ebb of cheap and pretentious vulgarity presented problems which in their solution gave Morris an impulse towards the most persistent and profitable line of his great labor of his life. For the artistic detail of this house, down to the smallest piece of furniture, Morris and his friends made themselves responsible, and from their co-operation grew first the idea and then the successful establishment of the firm with which Morris' name will always be associated.

"One evening a lot of us were together," says Rossetti, in the account given by Mr. Watts-Dunton, "and we were talking about the way in which artists did all kinds of things in olden times, designed every kind of decoration and furnished most kinds of furniture, and someone suggested—as a joke more than anything else — that we should each put down five pounds and form a company. There were blossoms of a rare growth among us in those days, and I think we swear that the table bristled with five-pound notes. Anyhow the firm was founded, but, of course, there was no capital with anything of that kind. In fact, it was a mere playing at business, and Morris was elected manager, not because we ever dreamed he would turn out a man of business, but because he was the only one among us who had both time and money to spare. We had no idea whatever of commercial ugly in the world. If it were a fabric to be made lovely with long-disused or unfamiliar dyes, we all knew where to go; if it were to be woven, he was at the loom by dawn. In his workman's blouse, and little boy cap, he had a deep and outstanding wildity, he was in the habit of presenting himself cheerfully at the house of his friends, relying on the native dignity to save appearances, or, rather, to make them unnecessary. His prosper herited all danger of the 'smash' that would, he owned, 'be a mighty fine thing for the firm,' and rubbing his hands,' he said, 'to be ruined and get really poor.' It was to the peculiar union of the ideal and the practical in his nature that his success in the fields on which he ventured is due."

In the intervals of this exacting yet joyous labor at various handicrafts, which embraced, apart from the general management of the business, innumerable experiments in dyeing, weaving, embroidery and stained glass, Morris found time to produce poetry which in its extent and in its strikingly original quality takes high rank in a period when poetry was both abundant and powerful. These poems can never be to an age not wholly alive to poetry, popular, nor in an age not wholly dead to poetry can they be neglected. Two things especially command attention in Morris' poetical work: first, the devout and racy mediævalism of the early pieces, and, secondly, in his later period, the story-telling quality. All modern attempts in the mediæval manner must perforce be factitious, and in his poetry no more than in his decoration can it be said that Morris recaptured quite the spirit of the middle ages. But the inspiration which he drew from the thirteenth century and from the art already tinged with self-consciousness of Chaucer's century was alive and unaffectedly genuine than in the case of any other author in a period of mediæval worship, both sharp and sincere. His narrative poems, which contain almost all the really great stories of the world, were a reaction, and a timely one, against the morbid habit of sentimental introspection and soul torture, which Morris so heartily loathed. Prolix these poems undoubtedly are, and constant in consequence in the intensity which strikes in tragic flashes from the pages of many a lesser poet. But Morris never wrought carelessly, and the dearth in his poetry of those splendidly isolated phrases which are dear to the student's heart was part of this conscious purpose. So felt that modern poetry had become too literary, and that the skill of the modern poet was devoted to the over-elaboration of individual passages, with a consequent loss of spontaneity, and with a frequent sacrifice of that air of impression which a perfect poem, like a perfect picture, should convey. Morris is not, therefore, a poet was a planet in the literary sky. Water and Light committee to act immediately.

The matter of engaging an expert engineer to overhaul and test the plans of the new electric light plant was taken up, and after considerable discussion, Mr. R. S. Keisch, of Montreal, was the man selected.

The following accounts were presented: Chas. Pollard, inspecting cattle, $2.00; Thos. Pearson, digging grave in Catholic cemetery for Patrick O'Donnell, who was drowned here on Sunday evening last, $2.00, paid; Thos. Symington, $12.00, referred to Pringle committee to report.

Council adjourned.

Twelve retort fixers are in their places, six for cooking peas and corn, and six for cooking tomatoes, berries, etc. Two Goldie & McCullough twelve-horse power steam boilers were put into position this week. SECOND DROWNING ACCIDENT.

Last Friday evening Patrick O'Donnell, a native of Belfast, Ireland, aged about twenty-five years, was drowned off the schooner Mary, at the foot of East st. Deceased had engaged as one of the crew of the schooner, and was about to leave port. O'Donnell was using a pike pole to push the schooner off the dock, and it slipped out of his hands, and he was thrown overboard to recover it, but was unable to grasp it and the body was recovered in less than fifteen minutes, but all efforts of physicians and others to restore the vital spark were in vain. Deceased remains were interred in the R. C. cemetery.

CHILD SCALDED.

George Stanley, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cummings, Chambers met with a sad death this week. The child was put to bed one night last week or Monday, and tripped and sat down back cards into a pail of boiling water which his mother had placed on the floor. The little fellow was so badly scalded, and died next day, more, however, from the shock than the scalding. Mr. and Mrs. Chambers have sorely been afflicted, only a few months ago their daughter, a bright young girl of thirteen years, and two years before a son of seven years died from appendicitis. The bereaved parents have universal sympathy.

AUGUST CANADIAN MAGAZINE.—The colored illustrations in the August Canadian Magazine are fully equal to anything which has as yet appeared. Illustration has previously produced. The colored production of Mr. Bridges' drawing is especially good, and it is indeed a pleasure to look at the drawing and the plates were "Made in Canada." The reproductions of Turner's pictures are also pleasing. The illustrated article on Malta will find admirers as we seldom hear from this formerly British outpost. The fiction in this number is exceptionally good, and every story is by a native writer. In fact, this whole number is packed full of interesting and delightful features such as no other can produce, and is one of the periodicals which are found on the newsdealers' counters in this country.

PROPERTY FOR POWER HOUSE PURCHASED—CONTRACT FOR INSTALLING SYSTEM LET TO MR. R. S. KELSCH, OF MONTREAL—LIGHT ABOUT DEC. 1st.

Matters relating to the installing of a municipal electric lighting plant are now progressing nicely. The land has been purchased from Mrs. Bartlett for $700.00, the site being the stone building just east of the Reindeer dock, for some time occupied by the Salvation Army. This property has a 66 foot front on the river, and extends north 260 feet. This is a very desirable location, as water can be easily procured for the boilers, and coal for steam purposes can be unloaded from the boats into the shed that will be placed on the dock.

Mr. R. S. Kelsch, electrical expert, Montreal, has been given the contract for installing the new system, his offer being $2,000.00, to be for plant, specifications, etc., and to oversee the mechanical part of the job.

The plant at the power house will be in duplicate, so that the chance of our citizens being deprived of light for a night will be reduced to a minimum. Three boilers, two engines and two dynamos will be run alternately.

The streets will be lighted with thirty-five arc lights in the main portions of the town, and as many incandescent lights in the outskirts as are found necessary to properly illuminate our streets. The town will be thoroughly wired, and if those desirous of procuring electric light for their homes do not get the same, it will be because they do not get their residences wired and ask to have the current turned on.

It is expected that the system will be ready for operation about Dec. 1st, 1905.

BETHANY.

At the last session of the Official Board of the Bay Circuit, the following resolution of condolence was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the messenger of Death has visited us as a church and broken our official ranks by the sudden promotion of our honored brothers, Manson Dingman and James D. Gault. It is therefore moved by F. S. Wilson and seconded by Wm. Goodeson, that we, the members of the Official Board of the Bay Circuit, in session assembled, do hereby record our great sorrow, at the serious loss we have sustained as a church and board, by the death of Manson Dingman and Gault; and that we also convey our heart felt sympathy to the sorrowing friends of the departed and will humbly pray that they may be fully sustained by God's abundant grace in this the time of their sore bereavement.

It runs hand in hand with poor blood and weak nerves. Health runs down, nerves get irritable, neuralgic torture follows. For the moment applications may relieve—but the cause remains, the system must be strengthened with nutritious blood.

What can equal Ferrozone? It increases the appetite, forms abundance of rich life-giving blood, supplies nutriment and building material for worn out nerves. Ferrozone completely cures dyspepsia. Every food and branch of the disease it kills. Absolute success in every case. Stop suffering—fifty cents buys Ferrozone. Fifty thousand cents' tablets in a box; at any drug store.

OBITUARY.

of Hayburn, passed suddenly away at the home of his son, Mr. John Horner, Adolphustown, on July 14th. Deceased was apparently in good health, and though he had been poorly all winter was helping his son with his hay harvest. The cause of death was evidently heart failure, he retired to bed in good spirits, and in a few minutes, before help could be called by his wife, had gone. He leaves besides his widow three sons and two daughters, John in Adolphustown, George at Hayburn and another in Independence, N.Y.; one daughter in Toronto and Mrs. Bailey, Napanee. Mr. Horner and family came to this country from England about twenty-four years ago and settled on Henry Allison's farm as tenants. The family have lived near here since. He was aged 72 years.

Thrilling Adventure.

In the year 1897 Viscount Dundrum died in England and his estate reverted to Earl Lonsdale. The castle had been vacant for years as the late owner lived in London. Rumors were afloat that the place was haunted, and the new owner had trouble in finding anyone willing to occupy the palace. One and all refused as long said anyone staying over night there was never seen again. At last he offered £1000 to anyone who would sleep in a certain room for three successive nights. This offer brought an American adventurer forward who agreed to sleep there despite the protests of his friends. He entered the fatal room carefully locked the door behind him. He didn't want up and through a narrow passage to this room No. 2, locked each door behind him. He carefully examined the room and found it beautifully furnished, with no signs of secret doors. Besides the door through which he entered there seemed but one opening, viz., a window which overlooked a beautiful little lake. He went to bed but not to sleep. About midnight he heard the outer door unlock and then locked again. A step ascended the stairs, the door leading through the passage was unlocked, opened, and then carefully locked again. The step came and halted at his door. It in turn was opened and there appeared a form so tall it filled the doorway. It passed the bed, looked at the occupant, then left the room and house as it had entered. Next night all the same thing occurred, and again and in the same manner, exclaimed after the visitor left the room as before. "It floats." "It floats." The American awakened to realize this mystery if possible and springing from bed with revolver pointed at the figure, he shouted, "What floats" The figure turned sad said, "Fairy Soap floats." This soap and many other kinds can be had at A. E. Paul's. Look in our window for the two best things that float.

PROFESSOR GOLDWIN SMITH

FAMOUS PEOPLE

BY FANNIE M. LOTHROP

The Greatest Living Master of Style

In "The Grange," a delightful, plain, brick house, half-concealed by the net-work of vines that cover it, with a wide sweep of lawn and grounds filled with old trees—a whole city block in the heart of Toronto, hedged in by high wall—lives Canada's venerable author, Goldwin Smith.

This greatest living master of style in the English language, as he has been called, has had a busy life in his eighty-one years, yet his own words prove it has been a serene and peaceful one. "According to the Psalmist," he says, "if by reason of strength our years be fourscore, yet is their strength labor and sorrow;' but I must say that while I have found mine full of the first, they have been free from the second."

Born in Reading, England, he was educated at Eton and Oxford, graduating in 1845; two years later was elected a Fellow of University College, where he acted as tutor for some time, and though called to the bar, he never practiced. He was prominent in the two commissions appointed to examine into the condition of Oxford University which led to a number of salutary reforms. In 1858 he was made Regius Professor of Modern History at Oxford, a post he held for eight years. During the Civil War in the United States he was a valiant champion of the Northern cause, and on his lecture tour in that country in 1864 he met everywhere enthusiastic and flattering receptions and received the degree of LL.D. from Brown University.

In November, 1868, having resigned his chair at Oxford, he again visited the United States and accepted the professorship of history at the newly-founded Cornell University at Ithaca, N. Y., where he lived for three years. On his retirement he went to Canada, being still Professor Emeritus of Cornell, where he was extremely popular with the students, who affectionately referred to him as "Goldie."

In Canada he soon found recognition and served in a number of positions that gave him opportunity to render invaluable service to the causes of education and letters, and on all questions of vital political interest his voice and his pen were ever ready. A long list of books on history, religion, politics, philosophy and biography he has to his credit, yet a far greater bulk of material remains in his constant contributions to the newspapers and periodicals of his day. A rare scholar, a master of style, a great thinker, a fearless iconoclast, an able champion, a tireless worker, Goldwin Smith has been a mighty influence for good.

CHAPTER I.

ALL the long Sabbath day a mist hung over the mountain so heavy and gray that twilight came on almost unperceived. In the quaint old English village of Cragenstone, situated near the topmost peak of this particular mountain, the early evening services were just being completed in the meeting house, a wooden structure that stood prominently on an elevation of rocks and round the centre of the village, with its sharp steeple rising dark and stern above the shadows of the gathering gloom. Droning voices chanting an anthem were heard. Then the door was opened and the congregation filed out in reverent silence down the rocky pathways leading to their several homes, nodding seriously to each other when the line of parting came.

The solemn stillness of a Puritan Sabbath day pervaded the atmosphere, and all felt its influence, from old Father Furrish, with longhorn suit and gray wool stockings, leaning heavily on his staff, to pretty Hetty Taunston, who walked slowly at her mother's side, carrying her books and prayers, her dimpled face and dropping her eyelids demurely to cover the brightness of her sparkling eyes as she passed young Simon Kempner, who stood waiting at the door, his gaze intent upon her. Mistress Taunston, her best gray bonnet projecting well over her austere countenance, and tied securely under her chin, rested her hand proudly on the arm of her son Josiah, who, tall, spare and grim visaged, strode on in silence, the grave solemnity of his manner giving evidence of his firm belief in the strict and narrow teachings of the Puritan sect to which he belonged.

The mist of the day had lifted, and through the breaking clouds overhead the early evening stars were just endeavoring to send down a gleam to lighten the path of the wayfarer when mother and son entered the gateway before their home, a low, rambling farmhouse built securely of logs and cement. Pausing at the door, Mistress Taunston, with her hand on the latch, bent forward and looked down the dark roadway with a searching glance.

"Hetty! That trifling maid!" she exclaimed in a tone of vexation, "I should not be granted her request to walk with Cynthia Camett, for I might ha' known the twain would loiter on the way, indulging in idle chatter and forgetting the holy day."

"Fret not, mother," Taunston said in a repellant voice, harsh and discordant, "and enter, for I am chilled with the dampness of the night. No harm can befall the girl, even though she desire to exchange greetings quietly with her friends."

Accustomed to do her son's bidding at the slightest word, his mother lifted the latch, and soon the flickering light of several candles disclosed the living room of the farmhouse—the large kitchen.

Throwing his hat and cloak on a bench near at hand, Taunston sank into a seat on the high backed settle in the chimney place, stretching out his legs shiveringly to receive the heat from the burning logs, observing his mother's movements in silence as she removed her bonnet and cap, then drew forward a small pine table, scrubbed to shining whiteness, and laid a Bible upon it. Seeing that she was about to become absorbed in reading the customary evening chapter, he observed suddenly, with an ill concealed attempt at carelessness, "Our cousin Margaret must be on her way by now, mother."

"Her missive sent to us by special messenger doth state that she arrived safely in London," his mother replied, lifting her glance from the page, "and that she would proceed on her way to-day. The most coming out of the roads and recent heavy rains combine to make traveling tedious, as thou dost know, Josiah. But I expect within the week to welcome thy cousin back to the village of her birth."

She shook her head, sighing dolefully, "I wot 'twill be but a and homecoming for the maid, with no father here to greet her."

"Her house and lands are in readiness for her to take possession," Josiah interposed gravely.

"Aye, thou hast been a good steward, my son," she replied, "since thine uncle, showing rare wisdom in his dying hour, chose thee to manage his daughter's estate."

She set erect in her chair, speaking earnestly.

OBITUARY.

MARIA SHANNON.

wife of the late John Somerville, died at her residence, Strathcona, on the 30th. She was born in the Township of Kingston, where she was married and lived for some years. She with her husband then lived in North Frederieksburgh eleven years. They then moved to Camden, where she died. There were born to them one daughter and three sons. William, who died in the Yukon five years ago, James, who died at Bridge seven years ago, and Frank, who is child. All preceded their mother to the better land. The only surviving member of the family is Mrs. Robert Shatler, who resides on the homestead. Mrs. Somerville was a faithful member of the Methodist church. She was only confined to her bed three weeks, but ailing all winter. Her life was a busy one, but she bore with Christian fortitude, and longed to be with her Maker and Saviour, who took her in from all. All was done that loving hands could do, but Jesus thought best to take her home. Her pastor, Rev. J. P. Monts, preached a very impressive sermon. The remains were taken to Napanee for interment.

MRS. JAMES BLEWETT

Passed to her reward on Friday evening last, 28th July, at the advanced age of eighty-six years. Deceased had been an invalid, and confined to the house for some years, and was not intimately known (to the younger generation of Napanee before her illness and during many years she devoted to her family and their welfare, she enjoyed a large circle of acquaintanceship, and was highly esteemed and respected. She had been a resident of Napanee for over half a century, and her husband predeceased her many years. A family of three children survive her, Mr. Henry Blewett, a carpenter and merchant of Boston, Mass., Mrs. Chas. E. Bartlett, and Miss Jessie Blewett, who so tenderly cared for her mother during her long illness. Deceased was a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church, and the funeral service was held at the church on Monday morning, at 8.30 o'clock, after which the remains were interred in the R. C. cemetery.

Death occurred about two o'clock Sunday morning, and thus passed away a genial man, who, during his long residence here, won by his many sterling qualities a warm place in the regard of the community. The late Joseph Richardson was born in the Town of Napanee, his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Richardson, having been among the earliest settlers in Napanee township. Mr. Richardson was a successful farmer and some fifteen years ago removed to Peterboro' He is the last male member of a family of eleven children of whom there are now two sisters living, Mrs. Rev. J. A. Jewell of Brighton, Ont., and Mrs. Geo. L. McBurney of Toronto, whose husband died about four weeks ago. Mrs. Richardson, whose wives, was formerly Miss Isabel Davey of Napanee. She will be sympathized by a host of friends in her bereavement. The deceased was 58 years old The funeral of the late Mr. Richardson took place this afternoon to Little Lake cemetery, and the large attendance was evidence of the friendship The services were performed by Rev. GOOSE LAKE COUNTRY.

Saskatoon, Sask.,
July 26th, 1905

Editor Beaver,—Will you please afford me a small space in the column of The Beaver to express a few thoughts about this Western country. I left Winnipeg this spring for Saskatchewan, and as soon as I got seated in the train I fell in with land seekers and soon got in conversation with them. All the talk was Goose Lake country. Of course I knew nothing about that place, where it was or what it was, and the farther I travelled, the stronger the talk of the Goose Lake Country grew. I stopped off at several places along the line, and certainly some nicely situated towns, with many sociable people. It is needless for me to tell anything about these places, as they are so superior, but between here and Winnipeg it is poorly all good land, well settled and it is a small space of about five hundred miles. When I landed at Saskatoon, where I am at present, and saw before me a lovely little town, inhabited by the finest of people, and I took a trip out to this Goose Lake Country, and what do you suppose I found, a track of country, 30 miles to look at. I was told Goose Lake Country shortly after I left Saskatoon, and I drove one hundred miles and still was in Goose Lake Country, and it continues on hundred miles farther, and the land is excellent. I have farmed in some of the best farming parts of Manitoba, and this land caps it all. Wherever crops have been sown they look excellent. It is no trouble to see large fields of wheat here, standing about four feet high and all nicely headed out, and the frequent showers that we have now will certainly make No. 1 hard wheat. Good wheat has always been called Manitoba, and but we will have to change the name and call it "Goose Lake one hard," for we can grow good wheat here when this country is all in cultivation than Manitoba would ever grow.

On my trip south west of here in the Goose Lake Country, I found it is well settled out about eighty miles with good settlers, principally people from Dakota and other parts of the States and Ontario people. When going down there I passed a large number of wagons, and when coming back we counted the wagons, and there was just seventy-five loaded wagons in the distance of one hundred miles. Of course, there were a number of light rigs which we did not count, which were odd settlers All these people I speak of were all rich, some of them horses, some not a single cent of all kinds. It would not make a green think he was very at a Calithumpian parade, some had covered wagons made of white cotton, others with oil-cloth, others without any covers, and you could see roosters crow, pigs squeal, cows bawling, or a baby cry any place on the trail. This trail is called the Battle Trail. It gets its name from the Indians. They used to haul buffalo bones over it en route for Regina.

The settlers' houses are very regular here. Some of them are built of lumber, and some of them of sod, and a good many living in tents. You would be surprised if you were to walk into a sod house here and see how comfortable it can be made, and the good things you can get to eat in one of them. Homesteads are to be had about ninety miles from here now.

Before I close I must say a few words about the weather here. It is a very warm sun, but there is a gentle and refreshing breeze blowing all the time, and the nights are cool. We only have about eight hours' night here now, and we have nice showers of rain often. Last winter the settlers tell me, they had very little snow, scarcely enough for sleighing, and everybody says they would rather winter out here than in the East. Yours,

SAMUEL CAMPBELL.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FORCIBLE FACTS.

One-sixth of the deaths from disease are due to consumption. Ninety-eight per cent. of all those who have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for "weak lungs," have been perfectly and permanently cured. Christian Lee Cawley, of Leesburg, Armstrong Co., Pa., had for all eighteen months coughed. He says, "My doctor did all he could for me but could not stop the hemorrhages, and all gave me up to die with consumption." What doctor could do, the "Golden Medical Discovery" did. It stopped the hemorrhages and cured their cough. This is one of scores of thousands. Investigate the facts.

Prof. Dr. Pierce's great work, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to cover cost of mailing and customs. Send 21 one-cent stamps for paper covered book or 50 stamps for cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

broader pasture lands, better sheep and cattle, finer horsefleds, an' whose blrelings are trained to labor with more economy and speed? In the two years thou hast been in charge of her estate, Josiah, thou hast proved thyself untiring in thy zeal and worthy."

"I had my yearly stipend that was not unmeerous, mother."

"Thou hast been faithful and zealous for thy cousin's interests," his mother asserted, with stern emphasis, disregarding his observation entirely, "and thou should have a reward, my son. Forsooth, thou art entitled to a rich reward," she repeated.

The ungainly fellow moved uneasily on the settle, a dull red glow of color mounting to his forehead.

"Lately I ha' thought," he said, with slight hesitation, "that mayhap my cousin Margaret would be much changed after her long sojourn in France. Belike she may return to find us dull and our ways too quiet for her taste. Have such thoughts e'er come to thy mind, mother?"

"Nay, not to speak on," she replied, "for I know that thy cousin will realize her obligations to thee and unless her early teachings are entirely swept away will heed the advice of her aunt and listen to her counsels with respect."

She raised her hand and shook her finger sternly.

"But think not it was with my consent that Andrew Mayland sent Margaret away to his sister in Paris," she said, "there to remain until she was twenty-one. I tell thee, Josiah, that Andrew wronged his only child, who should have raised her children in yonder gray stone house, built by her grandfather, and allowed to grow to womanhood among her own kind and in the God fearing ways of her kinsfolk. Education, forsooth! Can Hetty not read and write and do her numbering skillfully? Enough, I say, enough knowledge for a maid. As my good-father, now dead, hath often said, 'Fill thy daughter's heart with a dread of sin, rouse her in fear of the wrath of the Lord, an' thou hath done thy duty.'"

Josiah acquiesced by an emphatic movement of his head. "Mother," he said, recurring again to the subject of his cousin Margaret, "I ha' been thinking much on the coming home of our housewoman. Often my mind hath dwelt upon her youth and inexperience. What knoweth she of the care of a household and the management of so many acres as are hers entirely now. I—thou"—he hesitated—"we must keep close to her, direct her endeavors, and from the first"—he raised his voice, speaking with harsh emphasis—"allow no other influence to crowd in to push ours out. On our counsel she must be taught to rely, and she must ever look to us to be towers of strength upon which she may lean with confidence."

"Thou hast spoken wisely, Josiah," the dame replied. "If my memory doth serve me well, Margaret was ever an obedient child to her father, so will come naturally, methinks, to place reliance on her kinsfolk. Hast thought, Josiah," she continued, lowering her voice almost to a whisper and looking toward the door, "that my cousin's lands adjoin thine and what great benefit could be derived from being master of it all?"

Taunston rose and paced rapidly up and down the dimly lighted kitchen.

"Thought! Of course I ha' thought!" he exclaimed. "For two years I have watched over everything on the Mayland farm lands, from the littliest newborn lamb to the fleetest horse, and given orders as if I were the owner there."

He drew a sharp breath.

"And now—God's pity—I must give place to a wife of a girl, who happen will bring disorder where I ha' had order and put wasteful French notions above good Puritan thrift and care."

As if the thought were too unbearable to him, he gave his shoulders a despairing shrug, strode to the window and looked out long and silently over the blackened landscape in the direction of the Mayland estate. His mother sat for a time looking with sympathetic anxiety at the tall, disconsolate figure of her son. At last she observed quietly: "In doing thy duty so well thou hast grown to love those lands above all reasoning, Josiah. Methinks by every right thou should be master there."

"Mother," he came and stood before her, with his hand upraised, in a state of unusual excitement, "in my thought last night that the vessel on which Margaret Mayland sailed from Paris was lost with all on board, and my cousin, she who stranded never see me and the estate, for I am the next heir, as thou doth know, was gone forever. It was a dream, but for a night all was mine. I was in truth master there, and I lived. I was rich in this world's goods, busy, important, prosperous."

His pale blue eyes glittered covetously with the feeling that possessed him as he brushed his hand over his hair.

"Ha, an' were it so 'twould be well!" Mistress Taunston cried sharply, "provided, of course, it were the good Lord's will," she added piously. "But there are other ways, my son. Hast thou given considerate care to the fact that Margaret will need a husband now? An' who more suitable than thou, Josiah?"

He shuffled nervously on his feet, unable to meet her glance.

"Dost think she would regard my suit with favor? Methinks although an upright an' honorable man, I ha' never thought I had much attractiveness for a woman."

LILIES OF HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

In a recent interview with Mrs. Lily Langtry, she very wisely said:

"The fact that I believe in the superior force of mind over matter does not blind me to the truth that the foundation of every successful life is good health; that the keystone to physical beauty is perfect physical health.

"A sick woman cannot be a beautiful woman, nor can she be anything but what we English call a poor spiritless woman.

"To a great extent a woman's beauty is measured by her vitality—by her health.

"Work, Sunshine, Exercise, Water and Soap, Plain, Nourishing Food, Lots of Fresh Air, and a Happy, Contented Spirit —there, as you say, 'honest and true,' is my working rule for youth, youthful spirits and youthful looks."

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well-being. Every woman, young or old, should Anne Lergel's and her physical magazine. It is a good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book, such for instance as "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M. D., which can readily be procured by sending thirty-one cents in one-cent stamps for paper-bound volume, or fifty cents for cloth-bound copy, and addressing Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can always be relied upon to cure when everything else fails," writes Mrs. Dr. Nielsen, of 422 Lindsey Avenue, Chicago, Ills. "It is a certain cure for female troubles, diseases in their worst forms. I suffered for years with ulceration, intense pains and a dreadful weakness. Was laid up in bed for my work. Finally I grew so thin and weak I was a mere skeleton. I used Favorite Prescription, followed directions and three bottles made a complete cure. Only those who have passed through such a siege of sickness as I have will understand how much I value Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."

Dr. Pierce offers $500 reward for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of the Womb that he cannot cure. All he asks is a fair and reasonable trial of his means of cure. No substitute for "Favorite Prescription" offers so much.

His mother threw up her head with a quick motion, her glance containing both pride and confidence.

"Aye, that she will, Josiah," she announced emphatically. "Of a truth, mon'rt not oversell the woman, but thou art so tall and doth walk about with such an air an' stride that, I ween, scarce a maid thou did set thy heart on could resist thee."

"If it be that my cousin hath an eye to her purse strings," he observed thoughtfully, "my frugal and thrifty management of her farm lands may appeal to her."

"Those facts and others to thine advantage will be placed before her unknowingly by her better judgment and skill upon her arrival," his mother announced. "My son, thou dost know that 'tis thine own welfare I seek in thy counsel in Margaret, for 'tis ever a man's place to do the courting, but that I will keep a close shadow and watch well her thee and thine interests, that can not doubt. Ah, welladay," she drew a deep breath, "'twill be a happy time for thy mother, Josiah, when she can sit before the doorway at her spinning and, ever and anon raising her eyes to look at the wide acres of green pasture surmounted by the gray house on the hill, know that thou art master there."

Taunston, looking intently into space with covetous eyes, made no reply.

Soon the candles having burned almost to their sockets and the bright flare of the logs given place to dull blackness, emitting a few dying sparks, Mistress Taunston bethought herself of the lateness of the hour.

"Hetty not come in?" she exclaimed, walking to the window and looking out with impatient anxiety. "Ah, I hear her voice!"

Then throwing open the door she cried sharply: "Hetty, come in! 'Tis unseemly for a maid to be dawdling out of doors on a Sabbath evening. Thou shouldst be at thy prayers! Who is it thou hast with thee?"

"Only Simon, mother."

The merry faced little creature in her severe gray bonnet and plain dress of homespun came forward hurriedly.

"As I was returning from leaving Cynthia Cassett at the gate I met Simon near the turnstile, and he ventured to walk with me. Be not angry, mother," as the woman, towering above her, frowned wrathfully. "Prithee, a little gossip with good Simon would not hurt a maid!"

"Gossip on the Lord's day! Light and trifling talk on a Sabbath night!" her mother cried in stern rebuke. "And think not that sounds of thy wicked laughter did not come to mine ears! To thy room, hussy! Nay, let the candle remain," as Hetty lifted one from the table. "In darkness canst thou better set thy mind on thy errors and ask the Lord's forgiveness for thy sins!"

Then shutting the door with intentional violence upon the retreating form of the young farmer she latched the wooden bolts securely for the night.

CHAPTER II.

JOSIAH TAUNSTON spent the next day at the market place and having made good bargains and fair exchanges rode up to his door rapidly, with an expression on his countenance more complacent and less severe than usual.

"Ho, there!" he called.

To his surprise the door remained unopened, and, listening, he heard no sounds of life within.

"Mother, open, an' thou art there," he cried, "for I would have a word with thee before I ride farther to speak wi' Simon Kempster on the price o' wool."

At this juncture a man, one of the farm laborers, came rushing from the back of the house.

"The good dame an' thy sister ha' taken their departure long since," he announced, evidently pleased to be the bearer of important news. "They did go to the Mayland farm, master, to meet thy cousin, who hath arrived."

With an exclamation of anger Josiah sprang from his horse, threw the reins to the man and, turning suddenly to hide the dark flush that spread over his face at the first shock of the news, lifted the latch and, entering the house, proceeded at once to his chamber, from whence he emerged an hour later much changed in appearance. The stains and dust of travel had been carefully removed from his person, a fresh linen ruff of dazzling whiteness was about his neck, and in place of his common riding clothes he wore his church going suit of black cloth finely cut and built latterly made by the village tailor.

Taking the footpath that led through the meadows, he walked with long strides in the direction of the road that wound its way from the village past the Mayland farmhouse. A slight fear lest his absence from home at the time of his cousin's arrival would be held against him as seeming neglect caused him some anxiety, and he was framing suitable words of excuse and explanation as he walked along when his meditation was interrupted by the sudden appearance of a young woman at the corner of the roadway. She had evidently been running, for over her flushed face and tumbling yellow hair a broad hat of black velvet, with a sweeping white feather, hung off at the back in reckless abandon, and she held the long skirts of her scarlet riding habit, richly trimmed with silver braiding, high above her pretty ankles. So excited was she and intent upon her chase that she was quite regardless of appearance or of the fact that her small ankles, neatly covered with red silk hose, were exposed above her low shoes to the cold and disapproving gaze of the man approaching. Just then a small dog scuttled past Josiah breathless and panting from a long run.

"Ho! catch her, good sir—catch Biddy!" a girl cried shrilly. "The poor dog will take a fit from fright! That stupid Giles, to let her out in this strange place when I was not at about! More, man! An' thou canst put thy hand on her!"

Thus sharply commanded, Josiah came to his senses and, making a sudden and effective dive, caught the exhausted animal and, carrying it to the young woman, put it into her arms, saying with his customary deliberation:

"Margaret Mayland, for as such I recognize thee, I give thee greeting and do declare that thou art welcome to thy home."

At once she extended her hand cordially, and her lips parted in a smile of pleasure.

"An' is 't really Josiah?" she asked brightly. "At first glance, with thy sober face and black suit, good cousin, methought thou wert the preacher."

"And thou wouldst have called to the preacher, a man of God, to catch thy dog, Margaret?" regarding her with a look of quiet reproof.

"Aye, that would I," she answered carelessly. "I' faith, in my opinion the better the man the more better the deed. But to continue the subject, Josiah, at the second glance I remembered thee at once."

She stepped back a pace or two and, shading her eyes from the slanting rays of the setting sun by tilting her hat well down over her face, regarded him with a pert air of critical interest.

"After all, thou'rt not much changed except that thou doth look more careworn, and 'tis apparent that thou hast grown older," she said. Then, seeing that the expression in his eyes did not soften, added, "But happen, cousin, thou wouldst be better pleased, as is the fashion of all the men in Paris, if I were to tell thee thou wert grown good looking."

She laughed a low, rippling laugh of amusement.

Josiah, finding her levity not to his liking, and having a lurking suspicion that she was amusing herself at his expense, answered resentfully and with an air of offended dignity.

"That thou wouldst so misjudge me as to presume that I would desire praise for my personal appearance I can understand, for after thy years of living in that wicked city and Paris where all the men are fops or cockoombs, with no thought above decking their bodies with tawdry raiment, will ing and eager to lend a critical mouth and grin in pleased acknowledgment of a woman's compliment, thou has thought that all men were made in the same fashion."

The young mistress of the Mayland farm, who had listened to her cousin's words with an air of bewildered surprise, now cried shrilly: "Oh, the man Josiah, for a long face! To talk so of my bonny Paris! Forsooth, an thou wert to go there for a spell thou wouldst lose the sour look that doth hast caught from all the people hereabout and gain much for thine appearance, I do assure thee."

Although this was said with a smiling coquetry that took the sting out of the words, a red flush mounted to Josiah's forehead.

"Peace, Margaret," he said, "and take not upon thyself—but at best a sinful mortal—to criticise the work of the Lord. That I am ugly is the man's image doth suffice for me, and the care —from what I judge at sight of thee—that thou dost give to thy body I prefer to give to the salvation of my soul."

He paused for a reply; but, none coming, he continued: "Ere I met thee I was on my way to thy house. Shall we walk there together?"

Margaret Mayland, looking at the cold, dispassionate face of the man confronting her, with the sharp features and deep set eyes, felt a slight sinking at her heart, and the smile on her bright face faded, her manners becoming at once less friendly and more distant. Turning to go, she said: "Aye, come with me, Josiah, and welcome. Thy good mother and Hetty have but just left, after spending the pleasant hour with me, and already sweet Hetty hath found a place in my heart."

Josiah regarded her soberly, letting his glance rest on her brilliant hued riding dress significantly.

"That my sister hath some trifling faults I do admit," he said. "But she is ever an obedient maid, God fearing, pure minded and modest, setting an example of propriety that would, I wot, be of benefit to many older and more experienced in the world than she."

They had reached the entrance of the driveway that led to the Mayland house. Margaret, stepping inside, hastily drew the gates together after her and, leaning over the railing, said, with an attempt at a smile: "Of a sudden a great weariness hath fallen upon me. Wouldst think me rude and without good manners, Josiah, if I were to ask thee to excuse me from further converse today? I find that my strength is greatly spent by the long ride up the mountain, and I would rest awhile. 'Tis truth I am overdone," she concluded.

Taunston, concealing his disappointment, said, with a forced air of pleasantry that sat ill upon him: "He who cometh late must take, perforce, what is left, Margaret, and I regret, as one having taken the place on my farm for so many months, representing thee in all business matters, that I was not here upon thine arrival to give thee a proper welcoming. But as thou'rt weary and rest is what thou doth need I will go on my way to leave thee undisturbed. God be with thee, Margaret."

He proceeded a few steps, then paused, addressing her seriously:

"Cousin, at prayer time tonight I shall offer thanks to God for thy safe conduct through a perilous journey."

"Thank thee, and farewell, Josiah," Turning hastily, Margaret Mayland went with swift steps toward the house.

Out on the road Taunston continued on his way with slow strides, his head bent over his breast in thoughtful meditation.

"Worse, far worse, than I expected," he muttered. "Much devil's work to be undone! Our cousin hath a comely face enough, and methought after my first words of admonition she appeared more gentle and less boldeasin in her manner, and so silent was she toward the last I doubt not that my speech impressed her. A good example, constant correction and much sound advice is what a woman so young and worldly minded doth require."

Reaching a rising eminence, he paused at the top and looked back at the Mayland estate, with its broad acres stretching far before him in all the glory of their spring beauty, illuminated by the rays of the setting sun. "Ah!" He drew a sharp breath unconsciously of admiration and longing.

"Never before hath my duty to the Lord been placed so fully before me as in this my self imposed task of leading mine erring young cousin into the paths of wisdom and righteousness," he said after a few moments' thought, slowly and with solemn emphasis.

CHAPTER III.

THE next morning the sun rose dazzling in its radiance above the peaks of Cragenstone, shedding a luster over the village. On Mayland farm all was astir. Thrifty robins dotted the green grass, conspicuously displaying their red breasts as they sought their morning meal in the soft damp earth, larks thrilled gayly, and the nightingale poured forth its sweet high notes in joyous exaltation.

Yellow crocus flowers lifted their faces timidly to the sun, and gentle breezes stirred the branches of the trees. Now were heard the voices of the men and maids as they milked the cows or drove them out to pasture, and the noisy bleating of the sheep and lambs, huddling together and running out through the open gates to spread themselves over the fields, added increasing activity to the early morning scene.

In a room of the Mayland homestead above the broad staircase that led to it Margaret Mayland, exhausted by the fatigue of her long journey, lay sleeping, undisturbed by the noises out of doors.

Through the deep silled latticed window a ray of sun poured in, then softly touched the closed eyelids; another kissed the arched red lips, and a third, as it recognized its kind, fell caressingly on the wealth of golden hair on the pillow. One arm was thrown in careless abandon over her head, and her gown of white linen, falling open at the throat, disclosed a finely wrought chain of gold resting upon it, from which was suspended a small cross of the same metal. Her cheek, from which the glow crowed lustily once, twice, Mistress Mayland stirred, then, sighing wearily, aroused herself more comfortably upon the pillows and slept on peacefully.

The sun had reached a higher point in the heavens, and it was well on in the day, according to the early risers of Cragenstone, when Margaret Mayland, now fully dressed, descended the staircase and entered the dining room.

A small, cozy affair that was but a continuation of the long hall, curtained off at the end with dark tapestries and a huge screen set up in the middle for a partition. Mr. Mayland, the father of the present occupant of the house, had French blood in his veins through his mother's side, had not taken kindly to the plain furnishings, high backed chairs, wooden benches and bare white sanded floors of his somewhat simple minded neighbors and had purchased from time to time bright stuffs, works of art and tufted chairs and couches, so that his home presented an air of comfort and elegance not to be found elsewhere on that bleak mountain.

As Margaret entered the only occupant of the room was an elderly woman, having the appearance of being more than a common serving woman, who was spreading a white cloth on a table, idly humming a little tune as she did so.

"A good day, Elsbeth. Prithee, singing!" she exclaimed, with affected astonishment. "I trow thou doth like thy new surroundings."

"An' thou, Margaret?"

"Ah, welladay, I cannot tell thee yet," she answered, with a sigh. "But I own to great depression this morning, Elsbeth, and feelings of strangeness and loneliness lie heavy on my heart."

She walked to the window and, resting her arms on the deep sill, looked out of doors discontentedly, thoughtfully taken by the graceful appearance she made in the French morning gown of pink poplin that fitted loosely to her rounded figure and fell in long folds to the floor.

"Hast had no misgivings, Elsbeth, that a life of unusual dullness doth lie before us?"

"Where thou art, sweet Margaret, I am happy" if the woman replied gently, "whether 'tis at thine aunt's at Paris, where I sewed thy frocks and cared for thee, or here in thine own home. Ever do I find my best contentment at thy side, for, sweet, hast thou not been mine to watch over since thy mother died?"

Margaret, accustomed to the woman's fondness, made no reply, but came and took a seat at the table in thoughtful silence while Elsbeth busied herself about her, pouring a cup of milk, breaking eggs into a saucer and placing the plate of hot bread within easy reaching distance.

"But for thee, sweet," she observed, "happen the Mayland farm will prove quite quiet and dull to thee."

"And Cragenstone!" exclaimed Margaret. "What doleful people here abide! How long and solemn their faces look! To end the matter, walked to the bed and, lifting a dress of sheerest linen from the white counterpane, cut in the latest fashion, with the skirt made full with cunning lace trimmed ruffles to the waist, the bodice low at the neck and sleeveless, gayly bedecked with long streamers of azure ribbon, said, "Wouldst like this for thy wedding frock, dear Hetty?"

The girl turned red, then white. Tears of pleasure filled her eyes. She could not speak.

"Throw off that grim black dress that doth enshroud thee," Margaret cried gayly, "and let us see the effect of a French frock on thy pretty figure. First I shall comb thy hair high on thy head and put a bunch of feathers at the top. I wot the style will become thee, Hetty, as thou'rt not tall. Methinks thou'lt see a vast improvement in thy looks."

After much brushing and combing, twisting and turning, happy laughter and flattering comment, the little Puritan maid was changed into a fashionable woman of the world. With her full white skirts trailing after her, she paced up and down before the mirror in search of delight, holding her head high, as if she were a queen and the bunch of feathers set so high above it a royal crown of gold.

Margaret, standing away from her to see the effect, was amazed at the sight of her cousin's enhanced beauty.

"I' truth thou'rt pretty, Hetty," she said, "and the frock adds to thee mightily. Hadst e'er a lover, cousin?" she added as an afterthought.

The red color in Hetty's cheeks grew deeper, spreading to the roots of her hair as she turned away.

"Thou hast!" Margaret exclaimed, laughing merrily. "I know it by thy blushes! What long faced wight hereabout hath dared to love my Hetty?"

"Who talks of lovers?" asked a stern voice.

"Methought mother would never be done finding chores for me to do," she said poutingly. "First there was the linen to spread on the grass for bleaching; then the sewers to be fixed at the brook, my lessons in embroidery and the Bible teaching. And, oh," with a sigh, "so many other occupations did occur to mother's mind that I grew quite restless, for all the time my thoughts were over here with thee, Margaret."

"Poor, much abused Hetty!" Margaret, arising from the chair, pinched her cousin's cheek affectionately. "And so busy hast kept thy record to come early to see what came from Paris! Prithee, cousin, mayhap in some corner of those boxes lieth a gift for thee."

Hetty's eyes sparkled with pleased anticipation.

"'Tis not a ribbon, Margaret?" she asked eagerly. "The thought occurred to me once to write an' ask thee to bring me a pink one. Say 'tis a ribbon, Margaret," she entreated.

"Forsooth, 'tis better than a paltry pink ribbon, little Hetty. Come and see. Think of every ribbons thou canst have thy choice."

The room overhead was filled with open boxes. Thrown over the big four posted bed were yards of gorgeous colors, and strewn about were stuffs and fabrics of the latest weave from the modistes of Paris—ribbons, hats, shoes, dainty linens and laces. At the sight of so much finery Hetty's face flushed. She drew her breath sharply in a gasping manner, and the pleased clasped her hands together in an ecstasy of admiration and delight.

"An' thou didst bring all this from Paris, Margaret?" she asked at last.

"All from Paris, the fairest city in the world, Hetty."

"Oh, I would go there!" the girl cried earnestly. "Doth every maid wear clothes like yonder on the bed?"

She approached and, slipping her hand under a ruffle of fine silk, raised it tenderly, almost reverently.

"Nay, not all, simple Hetty. But the fashions there are excellent, and fine dressing doth rule paramount. My good Aunt Jane was heedful that I brought the latest patterns with me and have quite established in this country place. And, forsooth," Margaret added gayly! "I have a love of dress on mine own account."

Hetty, who had been observing her cousin's loose morning dress with curious interest, suddenly drew back, an expression of surprise and fear spreading over her pretty face.

"Margaret! Thou wearest a cross!" she exclaimed, with pale lips. "Hast turned papist, cousin?"

Margaret smiled faintly.

"Nay, Hetty, think not so, and take that look of horror from thy face. This emblem"—lifting the cross in her hand and regarding it affectionately—"is but the parting gift of my friend, Hulda Manning, who was so good, whose soul was so fair that God took her to himself."

Hetty continued to regard the cross with looks of aversion and dislike. "Take it off, dear Margaret," she entreated. "Such papist signs will be a curse to thee! Cousin, 'tis near to idol worship!"

Margaret shook her head reprovingly. "'Tis thine education doth make thee think these things, Puritan Hetty. Why, cousin, the day before she passed away to heaven my Hulda with weak hands clasped this chain about my neck, asking me to wear it for all time in memory of our true friendship. This did I promise her that I would do. A curse?" she repeated reproachfully. "Nay, cousin, from one so near to heaven more like 'twill prove a blessing."

For a moment Margaret was silent. Then she added, "So recent hath been my bereavement and within such a short time have these hands wiped the tears from the anguished mother's eyes that the subject pains me."

Then she turned away suddenly, as if to end the matter, walked to the bed and, lifting a dress of sheerest linen from the white counterpane, cut in the latest fashion, with the skirt made full with cunning lace trimmed ruffles to the waist, the bodice low at the neck and sleeveless, gayly bedecked with long streamers of azure ribbon, said, "Wouldst like this for thy wedding frock, dear Hetty?"

"The girl turned red, then white. Tears of pleasure filled her eyes. She could not speak.

"Throw off that grim black dress that doth enshroud thee," Margaret cried gayly, "and let us see the effect of a French frock on thy pretty figure. First I shall comb thy hair high on thy head and put a bunch of feathers at the top. I wot the style will become thee, Hetty, as thou'rt not tall. After much brushing and combing, twisting and turning, happy laughter and flattering comment, the little Puritan maid was changed into a fashionable woman of the world. With her full white skirts trailing after her, she paced up and down before the mirror in search of delight, holding her head high, as if she were a queen and the bunch of feathers set so high above it a royal crown of gold.

Margaret, standing away from her to see the effect, was amazed at the sight of her cousin's enhanced beauty.

"I' truth thou'rt pretty, Hetty," she said, "and the frock adds to thee mightily. Hadst e'er a lover, cousin?" she added as an afterthought.

The red color in Hetty's cheeks grew deeper, spreading to the roots of her hair as she turned away.

"Thou hast!" Margaret exclaimed, laughing merrily. "I know it by thy blushes! What long faced wight hereabout hath dared to love my Hetty?"

"Who talks of lovers?" asked a stern voice.

Both girls started violently with surprise at the unexpected sound, and, turning, they saw Mistress Taunston, grim and severe, standing at the threshold.

"And; Hetty Taunston, take off that wicked garb thou hast put on!" she exclaimed. "Hath no shame, maid, that thou doth wear that sinful dress to show thy naked breast and arms? Learn now, so that thou'lt not forget it, that such wicked vanities are but the first stepping stones the devil doth lay down to give the way to eternal punishment. Dost wish to burn forever, thou vain maid?"

"'Tis Margaret's gift to me from Paris," Hetty faltered as she began with nervous haste to undo the fastenings.

Margaret regarded the older woman with a glance that expressed both indignation and astonishment.

"Prithee, good aunt," she remonstrated, "speak not so harshly to poor Hetty, who is so young and fair that 'tis but natural she should take pleasure in her beauty."

"Hetty had ever an unseemly desire for gay clothing," her aunt replied stiffly, the expression on her face remaining stern and severe. "Idle and vain-glorying sin and folly is wordly vanity; so it is my duty as her mother to scourge it out of her so that she may become a decorous and decent woman. Margaret, my son Josiah awaits thee below in the withdrawing room. He would remain for thee the refreshments, and a fair and just steward I trow thou will find he hath been, fair niece."

Mrs. Taunston put her rough, toil worn hand on Margaret's shoulder. "I advise thee to heed Josiah's counsel, for, although of mine own son I say it, he is a godly man of much honor and virtue. Farewell for so young a maid and to take his counsel in all things pertaining to the management of thine estate, to learn to rely on his assistance, to depend on him, and thine aunt doth promise thee that thou wilt find withal profit, freedom from care and much happiness as a consequence."

"Thank thee, good aunt," Margaret replied civilly. "As Josiah is below, I will see him at once, as methinks so faithful a steward should not be kept waiting. When thou hast changed frocks, Hetty, I will see thee again.

A Run-Down Woman
Made Well by
Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women

Miss Jennie Thomas, of Dirrville, Que., was in a run-down condition — tired, and all dragged out. Thousands of women know just how she felt.

She was given a box of Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women by her family physician. She took them two weeks and then wrote us in these words:

"I have received great benefit from taking your tablets, I desire to continue taking them two weeks longer. The benefit secured from the one box has been so great, and I feel so much better now, I am satisfied that one box more will be necessary to effect what you claim for your tablets, that is, make me again a healthy woman."

She was sent the second box. She took them and has since assured us of perfect restoration to health.

And they are doing this for women all the time. Every day we receive letters from grateful women, testifying to their gain in health since taking these tablets.

If you are in a run-down condition, or suffer from any women's peculiar to your sex, we will restore you to perfect health. They are made by women.

But you must do as Mrs. Thomas did—take the tablets. You will notice improvement the first week.

THE Robinson Co.

Under The Robinson Co. guarantee anything we sell that proves to be poor or gives poor service, we have to make good to you. We've said it and literated it and reiterated it times without number, that a guarantee of reasonable satisfaction goes with everything we sell. Hence it would be the height of folly for us to sell you something we knew was poor.

We're in business to make money—yes, but it must be made on a basis satisfactory to you; for a sale not made is better than to have a dissatisfied customer.

LOW PRICES OF SIX MONTHS AGO RULE HERE

Prices made to touch the lowest level by virtue of the commanding buying power of the store, and its ability to gather largely and long in advance.

It's one thing to cry "Wolf! Wolf!" when there is no wolf. Quite another to state facts calmly and plainly.

And facts as regards wools, cottons and linens are that prices are higher now than six months ago—and still going up. The reason? Largely the Eastern war as related to wool and cotton, for there has been no corresponding increase in the production of these raw materials to offset the abnormal demand. Why, in just one purchase a few weeks ago Russia took ten million pounds of wool from the United States alone.

Of course prices are up and going higher, but our $80,000 stock was bought at the old prices and we are selling as low as ever.

RUN DOWN BY TRAIN.

On Wednesday afternoon of last week Mrs. George Young, of Bannockburn, was run over by a Bay of Quinte Railway train near Adams and so badly injured that she died shortly after. A party of women had been out picking berries near the track, and a rainstorm coming on they started for home. Mrs. Young was deaf, and consequently did not hear the continued whistling of the engine. She was separated from the others, some of whom ran in an effort to warn her of the approaching danger, but they could not reach her in time to extract and rolled under the wheels, one arm and one leg being severed. The injuries proved fatal, death resulting shortly after.

There is a sharp curve at the place of the accident, and this prevented the engineer seeing her until too late to stop. A down grade also made stoppage difficult. The whistle was sounded continuously, but to no purpose.

As soon as the train stopped the unfortunate woman was carried to a neighboring farmhouse, and the engine was uncoupled from the train to fetch medical aid. Two doctors were secured, but they could do nothing.

MAKE RIGHT BEGINNING

DESIRE WHICH IMPELLED SAVIOUR AT CANA OF GALILEE.

THE FIRST MIRACLE OF JESUS

Performed So as to Reveal the Father to the World In the Most Attractive, Winning and Impressive Way. Presents Drawn Lesson of Good Cheer and Helpfulness and Innocent Enjoyment From the Incident.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Diver, of Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 30.—In this sermon the preacher draws the lesson of a gospel of good cheer and helpfulness and shows that Christianity bars no one from innocent enjoyment. The text is John II, 11, "This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee."

Finding the rational causes for the inception of miracles is a problem in the human heart and mind. But next to it is the desire of making a right start when, after years of hard work and toil, we would give to the world the results of our labor and our investigation. When Henry M. Stanley came from his exploration of the dark continent he did not let the facts thus gained lie dormant in his mind. He at once headed toward the great metropolis of London. There, in Albert Memorial hall, before the representatives of the English throne and the greatest of scientists, he described the results of his daring journey. What he did not tell by lip he told as soon as possible to the world by his pen. No sooner did Samuel F. Morse cry as did the Greek mathematician, "Eureka!" "I have found it! I have found that a telegraph line could be sent over the wires," than at once he applied to the American congress to help him build a line from Baltimore to Washington. He would prove to all the world, in the best and most emphatic way, that telegraphy was to be classed among the "found arts."

I enter a great artist's studio. I say to Jean Francois Millet, "What are you working so hard about?" "Oh," he says, "I have consecrated my life to a new mission of art. I need to be noticed for the skill with which I appealed to the lowest passions of life—to the evil desires of the word through suggestive figures of the nude. I heard some bystanders looking at one of my pictures say, 'It is too bad that Millet, with such a genius as he has, paints pictures like that!' I am now left Paris and went back to my old home. There among the hamlets of France I began to study the pure beauties to be found in the face of my old grandmother. Now I am trying as an artist to depict the homely virtues of the French peasants. As this is my first especial picture to be sent to the French salon, I want to make my mark in my new field, for when a man is to make a great success in any one line he must be very careful about his beginning. This is a new beginning for me as a Christian artist." To make a right beginning for his new art—his Christian art—Tissot, the former artist of the French society scenes, reclaimed himself for years in the Holy Land that he might walk and live amid the scenes where Christ lived and died. As a Christian artist he wanted to make a right beginning.

The desire to make a right beginning is implanted in every one's life who starts upon a great career for the reformation of the customs and the habits of the world. Thus, when I began to think upon this subject, this miracle at the beginning of Christ's ministry began to grow and widen and deepen and lift itself higher and higher in the purposes of Jesus Christ. Why? It was Christ's first miracle. For thirty long years he led the life of obscurity. Now Jesus comes forth and practically says: "I have come to reveal my Father to the world. I want to win the belief and trust of the people. I have work to do, and I will do the most attractive and impressive way. I will do it at the wedding in Cana of Galilee." Thus I will begin and preach our subject with awe and reverence. This miracle is not a mere happen so. The first miracle of Christ was one by which we may catch the keynote of the sweetest musical movements of a perfect life.

Where does the active scene of Christ's earthly ministry open? At a nuptial song. At a time of joyful festivities. At a time when not only the young but also the old and the middle aged are trying to be happy and to enjoy every innocent delight. At a time when laughter and merriment and good cheer are making tired men and women feel for a time at least that care and worry and anxiety and distrust have no part to play in the great social economy. The social work which was sung on the morning of the Nativity was not to be surpassed by that which was sung on the morning of the baptism of Jesus, but it was to be more than the songs we hear as we come over the hills and see the wedding party dancing down through the outskirts of the Galilean village of Cana.

Would you have me describe the joy of a wedding festival I once witnessed in the east? I did not see it at Cana; I did see it, however, at one of the neighboring towns of Galilee. First I found the wedding guests coming from far and near. As I came over the hills toward this village I saw the maidens by the score, with their hair decorated with flowers and their garments of the bright, gorgeous colorings of the east, shining in the sunlight. Then their arms encircling each other's waist they were as Miriam of old dancing over the greensward and singing, the time with the moving feet. The young men came there with their hair perfumed, caparisoned with the finest trappings. There were games and feats of strength for the men, and the joyous festivals. At last, after days of frolic, came the wedding ceremony. This came the great climax of the wedding supper. Christ's first miracle was performed at a season of social festivities.

I am glad that Christ's Nativity was announced to the world by the coverture of song. I am glad that his first miracle was performed at a wedding.

I am glad we do not see Jesus at this time standing clothed in the skins of wild beasts, as was John the Baptist in the wilderness. Came he into the wedding to mark his approval of innocent pleasure. "His attendance upon the wedding in Cana of Galilee proves," wrote Bishop Ryle, "that true religion was never meant to make man melancholy. There are times when it is lawful to be merry and rejoice." The calendar of the sinner has only a few days of the year marked as festival days, wrote Elon Foster, "but every day of the Christian's life may be consecrated to the hand of God as a day of rejoicing." Yes, by the echoing chimes of the wedding bells we learn that the joyful songs we hear to day coming over the Galilean hills, in the chorus of which Christ's words may be sung, we believe it. Thank God, Christ's first miracle was performed for a bride and not for a widow, at a banquet and not by a bier.

Christ's ministry opens in a scene of human festivities. It does more than that. Christ came to Cana of Galilee to prove that the most consecrated on earth this side of heaven is the marriage altar. "Marriage," wrote Dr. Taylor, "is the nursery of the world and precious kingdoms and fills cities and churches and heaven itself. Like a useful bee, it builds a house and gathers sweetness from every flower, and labors and unites to societies and republics, and sends out colonies, and feeds the worlds with delicacies, and obeys kings, and governs and unites, and promotes the interest of mankind, and is that state of good to which each one delights to present the institution of the world." That is the right kind of marriage does all this. Therefore, as marriage is a consecration of God's sight and man's, it is very essential, oh, young people, that you ask Jesus Christ to your wedding. Before you are about to be married! Yet the strange fact remains that the world living in the universe some of us would ever think of inviting to our weddings is Jesus Christ.

We treat Christ a great deal as some of us have treated our best earthly friends when giving a banquet or party. We take the calling list of our wives and grown daughters and sons, and we bunch them together the same names of our personal friends, both business and social. Then when the night and the entertainment comes around we say to ourselves, "Why is not Mr. So-and-so here?" Then we go to our wife and say: "My dear, Mr. So-and-so is not here. Did you invite him?" She looks at the list of guests and answers: "No, husband. We forgot to put that name down." "Too bad, too bad," you say. "It is a shame. But, though it is too bad, this fact remains incontrovertible. You did not neglect to invite the most important one to your daughter's wedding. Why? Because you expected him to give her a present. You did not forget to invite that prominent statesman or social queen. Why? Because you expected them to give that wedding announcement in the newspaper. But you did neglect to invite that old time friend who has been true to you for many years and who are almost strangers. But they will not talk about them to Christ, who is more interested in that coming wedding than any other being in the universe, not excepting the bridegroom himself.

Another lesson of the miracle is that nothing is too small or too insignificant to do if by that act you are going to make your fellow men happier. Simply changing of water into wine was not done to heal the sick, or to raise the dead, or to cast out the devils which to the number of a legion were torturing the poor maniac amid the Gadarene tombs. It was done simply and merely to relieve the embarrassment of a host and hostess whose supply of wine for the marriage feast had run out. It was done to alleviate one of those little distresses, W. F. Smith Co., 186 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.

SMITHS BUCHU LITHIA PILLS
A POSITIVE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM AND ALL FORMS OF KIDNEY AND BLADDER ILLS.
AT ALL DRALERS-25 CENTS.
A CURE IN THE PEOPLES PRICE.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?

Let your morning urine stand for 24 hours in a glass or vessel, and then if it is milky or cloudy, or contains a red dish brick-dust sediment, or if particles or germs float about in it, your kidneys are diseased. If the kidneys are well they filter just so much blood, but if they are sick or weak from any cause, they leave the poison in the blood, and this poison affects the entire system.

It is natural to pass urine three times a day, but many who regard themselves as healthy pass it every hour, and from ten to ten times daily are obliged to get up frequently during the night. They have sick kidneys and bladders and don't know it. Smith's Buchu Lithia Pills cure Rheumatism and all Kidney and Bladder troubles, and make new, rich blood.

We will send you a generous sample post paid Free, together with our little book on the above mentioned diseases. Address, W. F. Smith Co., 186 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.

Come then see those guests gathering in the east in your own house? Your wife had made preparations for ten or twelve guests for dinner. There was just enough oysters, enough salads, enough squabs, enough figures of ice cream, for the invited guests, no more and no less. Suddenly, when you were about to be seated, the bell rang, and in came three or four friends from a distant city. You had to ask them to dine. There was no way out of it. Then your wife took you and the children aside and said: "I don't know how we will get through. We have not enough food for those extra guests. Now, you and the children have got to take turns in going without. You must refuse to take the different courses. When the plates are passed you must say, 'I do not want any, thank you.'" Of course all went well except with the youngest boy. The salad looked so good that when it was being passed he said, "I want some, mamma." Then her face flushed. She was embarrassed. Every one in the room was embarrassed. Do you not recognize a mighty Christian lesson in the fact that Christ performed his "first miracle" in order to relieve a little domestic flurry of the home?

If I put myself in Jesus' place I can imagine the scene which took place which led to his going to the wedding. Cana is only a few miles away from Nazareth, where Jesus was then living. There is a tradition that this Cana bridegroom's name was Cephas, who was about to marry Mary's sister. The mother of Christ is talking to Jesus. "Are you going to attend your aunt's wedding?" she asks. "Oh, no," is the reply. "I do not want to go. Weddings have not very much interest for me. But, mother, you go. I know you will have a good time, and I will send my aunt my love and benediction through you." "But, my son," says Mary, "I do not want to go without you. You should go for the family's sake as well as for mine." "Well, mother," he answers, "if you wish it, I will go." Does not this statement bear out the strange wording of this chapter, "And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee, and the mother of Jesus was there, and both Jesus was called and his disciples to the marriage?" Why was Mary's name here mentioned first if there was no reason for Christ going there to please his mother? Yes, I think I am not going beyond my right when I state that Christ went to the wedding, and he performed his "first miracle" there to teach us that nothing in life is too small or too insignificant to do if by that little act we can bring happiness into some loving heart.

But further you go into this premise the more powerful becomes the gospel lesson. Not only did Christ begin his public gospel ministry among his neighbors, but he began that gospel ministry in a private way within the quietude of his own home. Mary, his mother, had felt this divine influence long before the outside world felt it, and saw it in Cana of Galilee. How do I know? The inference is clear from the chapter of my text. When the wine failed, Mary heard the women of the house talking together about the mishap. This would be most natural if the bride to be was Mary's own sister, "Aunt Jesus" aunt. What then happened? Why, Mary immediately went and told Christ. Then she said to the servants, "What he saith unto you, do it." Do not these statements prove to you that Mary knew Jesus could extricate them out of their difficulties if he would? Ah, yes. Christ showed his divinity first in his home. It is right and necessary for us to begin our ministry for Christ among our friends. It may be, however, more important to be a gospel missionary to our neighbors than a gospel messenger in private to our families, or even to our children, in the quiet sanctity of our own homes. Christ was a divine child in a private sphere before he was a divine Christ making the water blush crimson in Cana of Galilee.

But we must not confine ourselves to gospel ministry to our home and our neighbors and our friends. We must go to Jesus Christ, the personification of his first miracle at a wedding, therefore, as we will only attend the weddings and the festivities of the young people. We have a greater mission than that. No sooner were these young folks married and started out in the world with gospel good cheer than Christ went forth into the world to continue that ministry. He went among the strangers. He went to those who were lonely and dejected and mentally slew him. He went among the sinners and the outcasts to carry to them the "bread of life." He went to Mary Magdalene and to the house of despised Zaccheus. He went everywhere where the sins of mankind were calling for the need of a Saviour. From amid the songs and the laughter and the joys of this nuptial banquet, will you and I carry the message of Christ to an outside sinful world? Will we carry the gospel of the cypress as well as amid the orange blossoms? Will we preach Christ under the morning, weeping willows as well as among the singing multitude of wedding guests? "It is better to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting." It is your duty to go to both places. But remember, oh, Christian, those who are perishing to enter another world and to be married to Christ as much as those who are about to place upon their fingers the wedding ring of gold which will last until that finger after the flesh has withered away in the grave.

Feats of Photography.

Photography has caught the fastest express train in motion by means of the cinematograph, and it also shows the growth of a flower. A bud which bursts into bloom in, say, sixteen days is exposed to a camera every fifteen minutes during the sixteen days, and when the pictures thus exposed from the films are assembled in order in the moving picture machine the observer may see, to his delight, all in a minute or two, the gradual breaking of the bud—the blossom opening, close by night and reopen in the morning, the leaves grow under the eye, the stalk lengthen, then cover and finally the full blown flower.

Dangerous Germs in Summer.

STRENGTHEN THE STOMACH WITH MI-O-NA AND KEEP WELL.

A wealthy philanthropist in New York spends thousands of dollars every summer providing milk for the babies, with the result that the mortality is greatly decreased. He appreciates the fact that disease germs are common in the summer and that the stomach must be kept healthy to resist their attacks.

Other people do not live on a milk diet to insure health, but they can so strengthen the stomach and digestive organs by the use of Mi-o-na that the hot germs, and the general debility they feel, will be free from sickness in the summer season.

Take a Mi-o-na tablet before each meal and it will soothe and heal any inflammation that may be present in the lining of the stomach, give tone to the whole system, and cure headache, backache, sleeplessness, pains and distress after eating, vertigo, and all stomach troubles by strengthening the digestive system. It is guaranteed to make a complete and permanent cure in all cases of dyspepsia or indigestion except cancer.

Mi-o-na restores complete health to the whole system, and cures heart disease as if by magic.

A guarantee to refund the money if Mi-o-na does not show help is given with every 50 cent box. Ask T. B. Wallace to show you the guarantee.

The Witch of Cragenstone

Wilt thou come with me, aunt?"

"Nay, Margaret," she fairly stuttered hastily, "thou hadst best see thy cousin alone."

CHAPTER IV.

ABOUT twelve miles or so down the rough and stony mountain road below the village of Cragenstone two men on horseback were slowly ascending a steep defile. The former, having the face of an Englishman, but dressed in the extravagant fashion of the French nobleman of that period, looked about him disinterestedly.

"By St. Peter of the Fetters," he exclaimed impatiently, "a more tollsome journey, worse roads or harder riding it hath never been my fate to experience! Gaston," turning to the man who rode after him, "what said that sour visaged caliant we encountered just below about the road to Cragenstone?"

"Hang me for a witch if I could understand a word of his mumbling," the man replied. "Such suspicious looks he cast at us, as though we were highwaymen who would take his purse or run him through, roused my ire, Sir Godfrey. Certes, but I was tempted to slap his sour face!"

"Peace, Gaston!" Sir Godfrey La Fabienne, who had been looking intently at something in the distance, threw up his head with an air of pleasure. "Surely that rough structure of logs above our heads on the rocks is a dwelling house. Methinks I see signs of human habitation."

Spurring his horse into a gallop, he rode rapidly up the steep incline, halting abruptly when he reached the top to gaze about him.

"Quickly, Gaston!" he called cheerfully to his servant, who was following at a slower rate of speed. "At last we've reached a stretch of open country; also the two roads"—pointing ahead with his whip—"that the churlish fellow we encountered just below did mention. As we could not get his meaning, Gaston, perchance 'twould be better to make inquiries before we venture further, for, by heaven, I can think of no worse calamity than to go wrong on the rocky roads of this mountain wilderness. Follow slowly, Gaston, while I ride thither to ask our way of the people at the house."

The intense silence surrounding the lonely, desolate looking cabin was broken by the noisy clattering of a horse's hoofs as La Fabienne rode up to the door and knocked upon it loudly with the handle of his whip. For a moment there was no response; then a light footfall was heard, and a voice asked timidly, "Who knocks?"

"A traveler that would but ask his way to the village of Cragenstone," La Fabienne called in reply. "Open without fear."

At his bidding the door was pushed out an inch or two, and a girl not more than ten years old peered through the opening. At the unexpected sight of the nobleman in his rich and handsome dress astride the gayly caparisoned horse before her those of the mountain bred child was startled out of all composure. Gasping for breath, her mouth fell open and her eyes fairly protruded with awe and astonishment.

"A greeting, good maid," La Fabienne said, lifting his plumed hat and bowing. "Canst tell me which of these two roads the village of Cragenstone doth lay?"

"Thou—thou canst go right on," the girl stammered in great confusion. "The—the other road leads to Sterndorf."

He thanked her with great civility and, beckoning to his attendant to follow, La Fabienne rode on rapidly.

"'Tis passing strange," he reflected, "how the impression was fixed in my mind that Cragenstone lay on the other road. Damme, 'twere well I asked the maid or 'twould have been tomorrow ere I would see Margaret. I trust we shall see her soon, mayhap before darkness falls, and, by my troth, one glance from her bright eyes will cause me to forget the perils and fatigues of this journey."

With a sudden bright smile of happiness illuminating his countenance he looked over his shoulder to see his follower riding slowly, the rein loose in his hand and his head falling forward on his breast in a most drowsy manner. La Fabienne laughed lightly.

"Parbleu, Gaston; take courage!" he cried in gay tones. "Surely after this good news of Cragenstone we close at hand our hearts are light and we can ride perforce with better speed."

"Aye," the man grumbled under his breath, "'tis easy to have a light heart when thou dost carry a full purse, also the knowledge that at the end of this tedious mountain journey thou hast for a reward the embraces of thy mistress, but with a man's throat athirst, having had naught but unwholesome water since breakfast, and a stomach groaning for bread and meat 'tis not so easy."

Just then some raindrops falling were swept into his face by the wind that had risen with sudden fury.

"Rain, more discomfort!" he exclaimed in great vexation. "Methought those low black clouds had a look of evil portent. By the memory of my mother I do swear it," he continued vigorite "that not for gold would I, not in obedience to the commands of twenty La Fabiennes, would I leave my castle again to journey forth to any mountain village in this accurst country!"

Finding that his master was gaining on him, Gaston gave his horse the spurs and so suddenly that the startled animal fairly leaped into the air, then, running wildly, disappeared with the rider over the top of a sharp decline.

At about this hour in Cragenstone, when the heavy mist lay thick and sodden over the valley, Hetty Bonnard and trees were but indistinctly defined in the cloudy atmosphere, young Simon Kempster, his round face beaming with an expectant look of happiness, came across a meadow near the Taunston farmhouse, suddenly the sweet notes of a woman's voice carolling gayly fell the saddened, listless hound-head, he listened, then with a quick motion vaulted lightly over the stile and almost over Mistress Hetty Taunston, who at that instant passed in his direction from behind a clump of trees with a pail of fresh milk in each hand.

"Thou stupid Simon!" she cried out, greatly vexed. "With thy awkward, lumbering ways thou'rt enough to frighten one into a fit! See, now, all the good milk spilled upon the ground, and three cows gone dry since yestermorn! An' look, my clean frock is all bespattered! Ah, lackaday, 'tis well for me my mother is from home, since I would never hear the end o' her displeasure!"

Kempster, greatly abashed, turned from white to red and back to white again, shifting on his feet uneasily.

"Forgive me, gentle mistress," he said contritely. "Thou didst come so lightly, like a little gray shadow of the mist, that I was upon thee ere I saw thee."

"Today 'a gray shadow' and t'other eve 'as sweet and wholesome as a fresh new cheese,'" she replied petulantly. "I like not thy comparisons, Simon Kempster."

In silence he picked up the half emptied pails that she had set upon the ground, and they started down the long lane that led to the Taunston farmhouse together.

"Whatever I say or do, I ne'er can please thee, Hetty," he observed reproachfully as they walked along. "'Tis one day that my ways are clumsy and t'other that my words are coarse. What can I do or say that would win thee approval? For my happiness doth depend on thy smiles and favor, Hetty."

"Thou'rt happy only when thou'rt on thy farm among thy cows and chickens," the maid retorted, although the red in her cheeks had deepened at his earnest words. "Forsooth, thou canst see beauty in naught else but thy butter, thy cheeses or the last new calf or lamb that doth bleat about thy dooryard. What room hath thou in the mind for thoughts o' pleasing a silly maid?" she concluded, with a pert toss of her head.

"I have room in my mind and in my heart for thee, sweet Hetty," he replied soberly, "and I would be happier could I please thee better."

They were startled by the patter of great drops of rain, and the wind, rising with a loud howl, caught up Hetty's light skirts and tossed her soft hair roughly over her face. Without stopping for more reproaches or explanations, they made what haste they could toward the house, reaching the long shed that projected from over the door of the dairy just in time to escape a drenching. At that moment Josiah Taunston, astride his horse and enveloped in a black storm cape, coming around the corner from the barn, caught sight of them.

"Good even, Simon Kempster." He spoke without smiling, in the stern manner habitual to him. "Hetty, I go now to fetch our mother, who sent me word by Brother Sparrow that the Lord in his wisdom had seen fit to take good Mistress Haggott, whom our mother hath been nursing for the last few days, and she would be returning before the heavy storm sets in that threatens."

"Hadst not better eat before thou start, Josiah?"

"Nay, I'll not wait," he replied. "The storm is upon us now. Happen I'll take a snatch at Haggott's. We will ride in late. Keep a good watch on the house, Hetty."

Urging forward his horse, he rode rapidly away, and as the fast sounds of hoofs pounding the ground passed beyond their hearing Simon turned to Hetty with a persuasive smile on his fat countenance.

"As night doth approach an' the storm will be a rough one, with not-some high winds," he said, "methinks 'twould be right fearsome for thee to sit alone."

Hetty appeared to deliberate the question carefully.

"Happen thou had better stay awhile," she said, with affected indifference, "but I warn thee if thou doth prate of nothing but thy farmyard wonders, thy charnings and thy chickens I shall send thee on thy way most speedily."

Then as she saw his happy face lengthen with soberness and a look of distress come into his eyes that told her that he could not understand what he lacked in his efforts to please her she added more kindly, "But, pritbee, enter Simon, an' in-passing do me the favor to bring in the milk."

He lifted the pails with alacrity, and Hetty, taking them from him, proceeded to pour the frothy liquid into the pans that lay in rows on the well scrubbed table, her companion standing silently at her side admiring wistfully the graceful turn of the small white wrists.

Having finished her task, the young woman lifted her eyes to Kempster's face, with roguish raillery in their bright glance.

"There," she exclaimed, "in my desire to fill the pans quickly I did forget to thank thee for carrying the milk. Forsooth, good Simon, lay such bad manners to thoughtlessness rather than an intent on my part to slight thee."

"Hetty"—he stepped closer and caught her hand in his—"at all times when thy words sound trifling and thy manner seemeth hard and cold is't because thou dost not heed, that thou'rt only a bit thoughtless, or dost thou really feel the aversion ofttimes thy words and manner do express?"

She let her roguish glance turn into a kindly one and allowed her hand to remain in his as she answered softly:

"Some apples, Simon, that are tart to the taste are sound at the core. Thou farmest, Simon! I teach thee that! And for my words and ways, they are part of me that, added all together, make the whole."

She turned away her head, sighing gently, and Simon imagined that she pressed his hand. "Who doth like me," she continued pensively, "perforce must like them also, for long ha' we been one naught now could separate us."

Simon, petting his disengaged hand under her chin, lifted her face to his. "God knows little else than Hetty," he said soberly, "an' thy words, lass, be tender, so glad I am to hear them on my heart gaufy, like the rain on the newly sown seed."

Matters having grown too serious for the trifling little maid, she drew away from him, spinning with a light laugh. "Thy farmyard comparisons again, Simon! Now, forsooth, my words are like rain falling on the crops!"

It was some time later when Mistress Taunston on horseback, seated on a pillion behind her son, rode into the farmyard. The storm had continued to grow heavier, and the rain was now falling in torrents. Despite the heavy cloaks they wore, the riders were drenched to the skin as a man, one of the farm hands, rubbing his eyes as if just roused from sleeping, opened the barn door for them to enter.

"Light the candle, Jacob, and I will hold it while thy master doth put up his horse," Mrs. Taunston ordered from her high position. "There, that is well. Now help me to alight."

When on the ground she lifted the light and, following Josiah, who was leading the horse to its stall, paused a moment to dismiss the man.

"Thou canst go now, Jacob, to thy bed. I would have a word in private with thy master."

Taunston paused in the act of lifting a measure of oats to regard his mother with surprise, thinking something of unusual importance must have happened that she made so much ado about it.

In her stern beaten, mud besmirched garments, holding the flaming candle above her head, she approached nearer, saying, "As brother Camett rode with us, Josiah, I had no chance with thy mother."

He nodded a rough assent, and she, lowering her voice to a whisper, said, "My son, we spoke the other night of certain business current that Sister Margaret had left a lover in France that wast coming here anon to claim her hand in marriage."

Josiah's heart grew cold within him.

"I heard the idle gossip," he replied hoarsely, "but gave the rumor no credence, as my cousin in our frequent meetings hath made no mention of such a man. Why detain me here at this late hour, when I am already chilled to the marrow, to talk me with such unpleasant gossip? Margaret is so young, her aunt so strict, I much misdoubt me that she e'er hath had much converse with men, much less already a lover plighted and betrothed. Let's to the house. 'Tis a fitter place for converse, if thou hast aught to say, than this barn, where horse and wind blowing the flame of thy candle into a blaze."

He moved impatiently toward the door-way, but his mother sprang before him, laying a strong detaining hand on his arm.

"Hist!" Hetty waits within and must not hear," she said in an impressive voice. "Josiah, methinks I saw your cousin Margaret's lover ride by good Brother Haggott's door late this afternoon!"

"Ha!" Josiah exclaimed sharply. "Why dost thou think so? What manner of man did he appear?"

The two tall figures standing close together in the dark barn under a hanging loft of hay, with the spluttering candle casting a dim, uncertain streaks of light, presented a weird picture. Suddenly the horse whinnied. Both started.

"Josiah," she asked hurriedly, "why dost thou think so? What manner of man did he appear?"

IMPROVING THE CANAL.

Mr. W. R. Dafoe is this week putting in a new flume from the head of the canal to the "Big Mill". He has most ingeniously dammed back the water in the canal just west of the flume running to the waterwheels, and will fill up and point with cement that portion of the canal west of the improvised dam. The work has begun none too soon, and it will prove a great benefit to the portion Mr. Dafoe has an interest in.

Much excitement was created on Wednesday afternoon when the new flume to the mill was being torn up. Dozens of large squirming eels, from two to three feet in length, were captured, and besides those taken by boys who wished one, Geo. Lewis had half a bag full of three baby fish which weighed 80 lbs.

LIME LAKE.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Jackson spent Sunday and Monday at their mill here. A number of the Latter Day Saints has been in this vicinity since Sunday last, preaching. None are being persuaded by her doctrine.

The cheapest place to get them is at W. H. WILSON'S.

AN INTERESTING OCCASION.

One of the most interesting gatherings ever held in Napanee was that of Thursday evening, the 27th ult., when the congregation of the Eastern Methodist church and a number of other friends were entertained in the Town Hall under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. A choice musical programme, in which Miss Edith Dafoe, Miss Luella Hall, and Mr. Cairns Smith gave instrumental selections, and Mrs. Lee Riggs and Mr. Harry Daly gave vocal solos, was rendered. The pastor of the church, Rev. W. H. Emsley, presided, and during the evening called upon Mr. W. T. Wilson to open the box found in the corner stone of the church just pulled down, and Mr. W. F. Hall, the recording steward, to assist in making selections from the papers contained therein. The contents were interesting and may be briefly stated as consisting of coins and documents. The documents consisted of the original deed to the trustees bearing date 18th May, 1836, between John S. Cartwright, Esquire of Kingston, and Rufus Shorey, yeoman; George H. Detlor, merchant; John Hawley, yeoman; John W. Detlor, gentleman, and William Grange, yeoman, whereby for five shillings to him in hand paid by the said trustees, the said John S. Cartwright conveys the land for the purpose of a Methodist church.

Minutes of Conference, Missionary Report and Circuit Plan showing seventeen appointments or preaching places on the Wesleyan Methodist Napanee Circuit Plan.

A statement of the building committee of the church erected in 1840, consisting of Rev. C. Vanduzen, P. I. Roblin, John Hawley, John Booth, Wm. Grange, Ephraim Dunham, John D. Pringle and John Gerdanier.

A copy of the Napanee Standard, June, 1861; copies of the Christian Guardian for June 3rd, 1840 and June, 1861, were also amongst the archives.

At a meeting of the Trustee Board, of which Rev. F. Berry was chairman, members present John Percy, John Hawley, Geo. Loug, S. S. Madden, Wm. Grange, Edward Storr and Truman Beeman, held Feb. 18th, 1861, Mr. T. Beeman was elected secretary and treasurer of the board for the ensuing year, and it was resolved that the trustees of the Wesleyan church, Napanee, authorize the erection of a new church on the present site as soon as there is $4,000 reliable subscriptions forthcoming, said church not to exceed $5,000 when all the exterior and interior is completed, with the exception of side gallery, said building to be stone, under the direction of some competent architect. Agreed to by said trustees.

This stone church long outlived the one which it succeeded, and is giving place in turn to one of the most modern and up-to date structures in the Province.

The new machine has arrived from Rochester, N.Y., for construction of cement blocks for the new church.

Man Killed at Yarker.

A sad accident occurred here on Wednesday, to Augustus Montgomery. He was on the B. of Q. Ry. track, weeding, when the evening trains were coming in, and got off the track for one to pass, standing between it and a safe in resuming work, when another backed up and ran over him, cutting both of his legs off and his right hand. He also received a severe cut on his head. Two doctors and a trained nurse, Miss Annie Baxter, were at the station at the time, and did all in their power to relieve the sufferings of the unfortunate man. Mr. F. W. Rathbun, President of the road, was also present, and had Montgomery taken by special train to Kingston General hospital. The mangled limbs were amputated and dressed, but Death relieved the sufferer about 12 o'clock, before they had finished.

"Gus" Montgomery was a good citizen and highly respected by all who knew him. He was a Methodist and claimed after the accident that he was prepared to die. He was 46 years of age, and leaves a wife and two grown up children, who have the sincere sympathy of all in their loss. The funeral will take place on Friday (to-day), service at the Methodist church at 1 o'clock, under the auspices of the A.O.U.W., of which deceased was a member.

We have also to chronicle the death of the little son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Wright, whose funeral took place in the Methodist church on Wednesday. Mrs. Wright's father and mother, of Cobourg, attended the funeral. They also have our sympathy.

Visitors for the week are—Miss Nellie Shulfe, Watertown, and Mr. Geen, at her father's. Miss Jennie Montgomery, Kingston, at Jas. Warner's.

Mrs. John Wilson, of Alexandria Bay, is visiting her many friends here.

W. M. Cambridge and family spent Sunday at Moscow.

The trio rendered Sunday evening by Mrs. Edgerton Van'uven, Mr. C. Shultz and Mr. A. Irish was appreciated by all.

Thrilling Adventure.

In the year 1897 Viscount Dunluch became interested in England and the castle reverted to Earl Loundsley. The castle had been vacant for years. The late owner lived in London. Rumors were afloat that the place was haunted and the new owner had trouble in finding anyone willing to occupy the place. One and all refused as they said anyone staying over night there was never seen again. At last he offered £1000 to anyone who would sleep in a certain room for three successive nights. The offer brought an American adventurer forward who agreed to sleep there despite the protests of his friends. He entered the fresh hall and carefully locked the door behind him. He then went up stairs and through a narrow passage to this room. No. 2, locking each door behind him. He carefully examined the room and found it beautifully furnished, with no traces of secret doors. Beside the door through which he entered there seemed but one opening, a window which on the looked a beautiful little lake. He went to bed but did not sleep. About midnight he heard the outer door unlock and then locked again. A page ascended the stairs, the door leading through the passage was unlocked, and then carefully locked again. The step came and halted at his door. It in turn was opened and there appeared a form so tall it filled the doorway. It passed the bed, and looked out over the lake. After gazing a moment it raised its arms and in a hoarse sepulchral voice said, "It floats." "It floats." It then left the room and house as it had entered. Next night at the same hour the figure appeared again and in the same way recited and after looking out of the window as before, "It floats." "It floats." The American determined to solve this mystery if possible and springing from bed with revolver, pointed at the figure, he shouted, "What floats?" The figure turned and said, "Fairy Soap Floats." This soap and many other kinds can be had at A. E. Paul's. Look in our window for the two best things that float.

EQUITABLE LIFE LOOKS TO CANADA.

Seeks Here an Improved System of Organization.

CANADA LIFE'S PLAN.

(New York Herald Despatch.)

New York, Aug. 8.—In their endeavor to obtain real power in the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the policyholders, the trustees, Grover Cleveland, Gustave Westinghouse and Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, are investigating the manner of election of directors by other insurance companies, not at home but abroad. Those companies whose methods they intend to select as ideal are the Canada Life Assurance Company, of Toronto, and the Northwestern, of Milwaukee.

The Canada Life is a mixed stock and mutual company, with nine representatives of the stockholders and one of the policyholders on the board of directors. Policyholders for $1,000 and upward, who have paid full premium for one year, are allowed to vote for the policyholders' director. To be a director in the policyholders' class one must have paid the full premium on $1,000 insurance for five years.

Although another plan under discussion is said to work admirably in the Northwestern's case, that of the Canada Life is said to be the most favored by the Equitable trustees. It is determined upon conserving the interests of policyholders.

SOUL NOT WORTH CENT

SWIMMER BOYTON'S REBUKE TO THE MEAN MILLIONAIRE.

FIFTY CENTS FOR SAVING LIFE

But All Men Are Not Like That Banker —Such Incidents Should Not Make Pessimists of Men For There Are Others So Opposite That Redeem Humanity For Their Fault—Talmage's Sermon.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dane, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 13.—In this sermon the preacher shows that if the church ever means to win the world for Christ it must be true to its professions, collectively and individually. The text is Solomon's Song vi, 10, "Terrible as an army with banners."

Difficult is it "to keep sweet and keep moving," as a poet once wrote—difficult not to look upon the dark side of life and be impressed by the meanneesses and the contemptibleness of men rather than by man's grand qualities and by his nobilities. Almost all people every day of their lives have some limitation or ambition thwarted or ticed upon them. Unless very careful we are prone to become pessimistic and to complain of the hardness of our fellow men. It may be that the conduct of some one to whom we come in contact leads us to think them as worthless as that man whose life Paul Boyton saved a few years ago. Mr. Boyton was spending a few weeks in Atlantic City, on the New Jersey coast. One day the cry of "Help!" was raised. A bather who was a very wealthy man had been swimming far out beyond the life lines. Caught in the currents, he was being swept out to sea. Mr Boyton at once jumped into the water and, at the peril of his own life brought this millionaire to shore in an unconscious condition. Next day the rescued man hunted up Paul Boyton. After thanking him for what he had done he took out of his pocket a big roll of bills. He turned them over and over. Then he put the bills back into his pocket. Not one was small enough for his fancy. Then he took out a fifty cent piece and handed it to the rescuer. "What is that for?" asked the great swimmer. "Why, for saving my life," "Oh!" said Boyton. Then the swimmer took out his own pocketbook and counted out 49 cents and handed them back to the millionaire. "There is your change," said he. "For what?" "Why," said Boyton, "you have over paid me. Any millionaire like you who would offer a man 50 cents for saving his life has a soul so mean and small that it is not worth more than a penny, if it is worth even that." It was the re-proof of a justly incensed man. His contempt for the meanness and petty provocations similarly contempt ible was a rebuke to certain too low an estimate of human character as a whole.

The pessimistic way in which some of us regard men is very similar to the estimate some of us place upon the spiritual movements of the age. Superficially those which find expression in the work of the church of the Lord Jesus Christ. We try to honestly and intelligently read "the signs of the time." There we find much to discourage us. We do not see the children of this generation loving the word of God and the name of God as did the fathers and mothers of the past generation. We find our Sabbaths looked upon as holidays instead of holy days. We find the "golden calf" the shrine at which the human race is anxious to worship and that the saloon is being entrenched everywhere. We find the Bible being driven out of our public schools and that many of our state colleges have men in their professorial and presidential chairs who never darken the doors of the church and whose whole influence, direct and indirect, is to lead students away from the paths of "free thought" and not into the paths converging at the feet of the Lord Jesus Christ. "Why," some of you say, "it is all well enough to talk about a coming millennium, but there seems to be no sign of coming! The world is growing darker and darker. This is not a spiritual land of the midnight; it is a land of midday blackness. Everything spiritually seems to be going backward." Is it, my brother? I would not have you take such a depressed view of things. I am to day going to take my stand upon the prophecy of my text. I am not only going to show you a vision of a conquering church in the years to come, but a conquering church in the years that are now at hand.

The future of the conquering church, in the first place, is not to be estimated by the mortal numbers of her soldiers, nor the costliness of her barracks, nor the lofty altitude of her watchtowers, nor the inexhaustible gold of her treasury, nor the sharpness of her steel weapons. The text does not ask: "Who is she that cometh forth, leading on an armed host like that with which the invading nations of King Darius overthrew the Babylonian walls, or like that with which Xerxes bridged the Hellespont, or like that with which Alexander—the Great conquered the Persian empire. Oh, no; the text does say: "Who is she that cometh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun." That is the great essential of the conquering church of Christ to which I would call your attention is that she must be "clear as the sun." That means, as all the light and all the heat of the world comes from the great orb which rises in the east, so all the teachings or tenets or beliefs or creeds of the conquering church must radiate from the Sun of Righteousness, the risen Christ. Christ must be the centre, the circumference, the nadir, the zenith, the beginning and the ending and the all of that conquering church, and there will be no triumph ahead of her. What the rising sun is to the natural world, the Sun of Righteousness is to the spiritual world.

A true conception of Jesus Christ is as necessary to the church as is the sun's radiance to the earth. Can you grasp it? Can you grasp the event in the beautiful panorama you witnessed many years ago, when you were one morning early awakened in Washington to see the sun rise in old New England? You went forth in the darkness and took your position on Sunrise Point. The whole world seemed dead as you left the hotel piazza. The servants were still asleep. The night clerk or the watchman was the only person around to speak to. All the trees, tall and grim in outline, seemed like gigantic highwaymen, with their black hats drawn down, and their foreheads and their black cloaks thrown about their shoulders, under which they were concealing their daggers. Off in the distance by the dim light of the stars you could see the mountains looking like a lot of Titans after stepping stones leaking to a gigantic throne. Slowly, almost imperceptibly, the light of the dawn dwindled and the blackness of the night was changed into a dull gray. Then the top of the eastern hills became rimmed with a golden covering. The sun's head lifted itself as from out of the huge rocks, touched by God's finger, had been changed into a huge, living coal. Higher and higher rose the sun as the glowing headlight of the oncoming locomotive off in the distance is seen coming out of a Hoosic tunnel. Lakes become burnished mirrors of light, and the mighty sea off in the distance becomes a sheet of quicksilver. Light, and the rivers, as parts of a great network spread out like your feet, become silver threads. The heavens drip with light and the earth is flooded with it. The birds sing in the trees and the cocks begin to crow. Off in the distance the farmers are seen starting to their fields and the sheep to their pasture. The sun has at last risen, and morning has lighted her many conflagrations. Who is she that cometh forth as the morning, fair as the moon and clear as the sun?" Cannot you answer it? The church of the conquering church—the church, clear in her divine beliefs, clear in her divine worship, clear in her divine life! In order to have a conquering church we must hold fast to Christ, as the sun rising in the east and setting in the west is to the natural world the Sun of righteousness is to the conquering church.

Do not Christ's own words prove that the more we exalt Him the more we shall conquer? What dear name? Read his promise as recorded in the twelfth chapter of John, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." What does that mean? You find the connection between that statement and another in the third chapter of the same book, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up." Methinks I am wandering about in the Israelitish camp in the land of Edom. On account of the sinful dissatisfaction of the people God has sent them the plague of serpents. We can hear their hiss everywhere. The people, with clubs and swords are striking and killing the serpents by the hundreds and the thousands, but the more they kill the more the serpents seem to multiply up. Suddenly one of these serpents buries its fangs in the naked leg of a man on the outskirts of the camp. "Come," cry his companions, "come and look at the brazen serpent which Moses has put up and you will live." But the deadly poison is doing its work. Like a man benumbed by the blizzard's cold and determined to lie in the snowdrifts and sleep, this Hebrew wants to lie down and sleep the sleep of death. "Let me alone," he mutters, "let me sleep." His friends rouse him. They beat him to keep up the circulation. But it does no good. Sleep he will. Then, by main force, as a drowning man is pulled out of the surf, they drag him over the sand to the foot of the brazen serpent. "In God," they cry, "is it too late? Will he not open his eyes and look? Man, you are dying. Look, look and live!" At last, as in a dreaming stupor, he halfway opens his eyes and looks. A tremor, a life giving tremor, shoots through his body. He has looked, and he will live. So, my friend, the church of the Lord Jesus Christ is to be a conquering church when she lifts high the Cross.

To that Cross we must lead, and, if necessary, even drag those who are drugged and poisoned and stupefied by their sins. It is just the same as if we should make a shrine out of a sectarian creed; that does not mean that we should struggle to make Episcopalians out of Methodists or Presbyterians out of Baptists, but it does mean that we shall bring men and women, benumbed by sin, no matter how far they have wandered away from God, back to a Saviour's love and a Saviour's redemption. Hear ye not the divine assurance, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me?" O God, give us a conquering church, clear as the sun! Make the church of the Lord shine from the loving, pardoning eyes of Christ, who had died that sinful man might live. Make us "fair" and "clear" as the Sun of Righteousness, which will scatter every black mist and the dark night of every sinful horror.

But we cannot picture the conquering church as a great invading army, with her banners flying in the winds and her soldiers singing their battle songs and marching to the music of the fife and the drum. Such a church would be unchristian. It is not due to their lack of faithfulness and consecration. It is not due to any defect in the doctrine they are preaching. It is due almost entirely to the sinful white man who enters heathen lands alongside of the Christian missionary. His every ship that sets sail from our shores carrying the white man's Bible carries also the white man's curse of whiskey and the white man's sins. If the white man were true to God, it would not be necessary, nor twenty years hence, before the whole world would be captured for Christ.

If the Christian men were united for Christ, this capture of the heathen lands would be like the wonderful march of Napoleon Bonaparte when he landed on the French coast from the Island of Elba in February, 1815. He had not with him even a corporal's guard, but the French people believed in him. No sooner did the dethroned emperor start for his old capital than King Louis Philippe's soldiers opened for him their fortresses. The people welcomed him in their streets. As a king coming back to his own he entered again his palace in the Tuileries. As soon as the church captures our own land for Christ foreign lands will welcome Christ. China will welcome him, Japan will receive him, Corea and India will receive him, Africa and South America and the islands of the seas will receive him. "As an army terrible with banners" the church will march on to capture the whole world for Christ when we, as true Christian disciples, purify the land and do our duty by her here at home.

Now, my friends, as church members are we ready to start forth this church of ours as a conquering host? Are we ready to say, "Lord, like the moon reflecting the light of the sun I will from henceforth live for thee and reflect thee?" Are we ready to say, "Lord, I will give myself to thy service in mind and body and spirit, so that henceforth I will be a witness for thee?" Lord and I would have his peace and joy?" Are you ready to do this, whereever you are, whenever you go? you will find not a dead church, but a living church, for, like Peter at the beautiful gate, in the name of Jesus Christ you shall make men who are spiritual cripples rise up and walk.

May God move us church members, one and all, to resurrect this day our church for his glory and his honor into the conquering host of an invincible army.

"Well, I didn't last just like a woman," growled Clarence. "Before we were married you didn't seem to care how late I got home."

Beware of Summer Germs.

WILL CAUSE SICKNESS UNLESS STOMACH IS STRENGTHENED WITH MI-O-NA.

One tablet of Mi-o-na taken before each meal during the hot months, whenever the stomach is out of order, or the digestion weak, will do more than any other treatment to prevent the diseases caused by germs at this season.

If the stomach is weak so that food does not readily digest in it, the food will become a sour, slimy, fermenting mass in the digestive organs, the ideal condition for germs to cause bowel trouble, diarrhoea, or other summer illness.

Mi-o-na will soothe and heal the irritated mucous membrane of the stomach and digestive tract, stimulate the solar plexus, and strengthen the whole nervous system. This remarkable remedy will make the whole digestive system clean and sweet that food cannot ferment, and any disease germs which may enter the stomach will be destroyed.

Just one small tablet out of 50 cent box of Mi-o-na before eating, and you will have no headaches, back-ache, poor appetite, distress after eating, heart burn, furred tongue, sleeplessness, or general debility. It will tone up the digestive system and give perfect health and strength.

Take Mi-o-na now, and T. B. Wal-lace will guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure. The risk is all his.

stonate voice, "so much to me, so deeply rooted in my affections, that I could die for very joy of loving him. Were the earth to divide us, Elsbeth, we are one—one heart and one soul forever!"

Then, after a deep felt silence, she added in brighter tones, "But, prithee, come, the peachblow gown an' happy faces, for this is a joyful day, good Elsbeth!"

CHAPTER VII.

At the open door of the kitchen Mistress Taunston sat before her spinning wheel, busy with distaff and spindle, and at intervals as she paused in her work looked longingly toward the fertile lands of the Mayland farm. But her thoughts, never far from her son Josiah, soon strayed back to him.

"E'en now he is at his wooing," she said to herself with stern exultation, "an' I pray the good Lord who is ever watchful of the faithful to put persuasive and convincing words on my lad's lips and guide him to the most proper conduct."

For a time she seemed lost in thought until her distaff, falling from under her arm, came to the floor with a rattling noise that roused her. Then the remembrance of Hetty, who upon her arrival from her cousin's had been sent to the brook to fill the cream pan, coming to her mind, she rose suddenly to look at the sun. Finding the hour to be later than she had at first supposed, her irritation and anger caused by her daughter's delay at the brook knew no bounds. She called the girl's name shrilly once, twice, muttering angrily as she got no response.

Just then Josiah rode in from his visit to the Mayland farm.

"Cease thy shrewish screaming, mother," he commanded roughly. "Dost wish to rouse the village? Thy voice can be heard half a mile below."

The dame, angered at his rebuke, resumed her seat in sullen silence, and Josiah took his horse to the barn. In a short time he returned and, entering the kitchen, threw himself down heavily on a chair near his mother, who continued to spin busily without apparently heeding his presence.

At last he broke the silence by saying with affected carelessness: "Thou didst not tell me—if my memory serves me well on so slight a matter—of what appearance the cavalier was that rode by Haggott's and mistook the Sternsford road. Was he an unbearded gallant, fickle and changeable as the windy one day mad in love with a pretty face and forgetting it the next, or was he old and gray haired, with an eye to finishing his days in comfort on the estate of his bride?"

His mother looked out through the doorway, reflectively maintaining for a moment or two a provoking silence. After what seemed to the impatient Josiah an interminable period of time she remarked with ill concealed eagerness, "Thou wert successful in thy wooing, Josiah, and ask now of thine enemy's appearance in order that thou mayst know the extent of thy triumph?"

"As to that matter, nothing is definitely settled," he replied impatiently. "I will explain our understanding later, mother, when the noon hour is not at hand and the evening to be fed. Canst not find words to answer my question?" he cried out in harsh tones. "Didst thou see this Frenchman plainly? Of what appearance was he?"

With quiet deliberation, which was in direct contrast to her son's excited manner, she combined her narrative.

"Josiah, I ha' told thee of the gallant's sudden appearance at good Brother Haggott's door, of his loud knocking and of how from my place behind the lattice I observed him carefully."

"Aye, thou hast, but naught else," Josiah interposed with eagerness.

"His age, mother? Of what age looked he?"

"Methought as I saw him that the knight was getting on to thirty summers, mayhap one or two more," she said. "He was large in stature, was finely built, with gray eyes and brown pointed beard worn i' the French fashion. A round hat with sweeping feathers covered his hair, long leathern riding boots reached to his hips, and his doublet was of ruby velvet, with black satin slashings. Good son Josiah"—she laid her hand on his arm with an expression of feeling unusual with her—"he presented such a dazzling picture to her father's view that for the nonce—knowing that oft to silly women the sight of rich and tawdry dress doth weigh heavily against piety, honesty and worth of character—a feeling of insecurity, apprehension and alarm for thy prospects so filled my mind that I saw the man who would supplant thee ride bravely away in the same direction with an exultation and a feeling of gratitude to God for his gracious protection of us, ever his righteous and faithful servants," she concluded in her most devout manner.

Springing to his feet, Taunston paced the room with nervous strides, occasionally pausing to look out of the window or to stand stern and gloomy before the chimney fire. Suddenly, as if unable to contain himself longer, he turned to his mother, exclaiming and, going to his mother, who had resumed her spinning, cried desperately: "Mother, I ha' sworn that those lands shall be mine! An' the knowledge that I am not an enemy approaching with intent to baffle my desire doth set me on the verge of frenzy."

"Calmness," she replied in a voice of warning. "Cold calculation and a trust in God were ever better, my son, than hot words and hasty action. Already hast thou taken the first step and spoed six days on thy wooing and six days more before the Skollvent stream will be passable, not taking into consideration the knowledge of the spot of meadsles that spreads so thickly about the town of Sternsford, where our travelers are resting safely there by now."

She laughed in grim enjoyment. "Happen, lad, we may ne'er hear of them again."

VOTERS' LIST, 1905.

NORTH FREDERICKSBURGH.

Notice is hereby given that I have transmitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in Sections 8 and 9 of the Ontario Voters' List Act, the copies required by said sections to be so transmitted or delivered of the List, made pursuant to said Act, of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality to be entitled to vote in the said Municipality at elections for Members of the Legislative Assembly, and at Municipal Elections; and that the said List was first posted up at my office, at Bartodph. on Monday, the fourteenth day of August, 1905, and remains there for inspection.

Electors are called upon to examine the said List, and if any omissions or any other errors are found therein, to take immediate proceedings to have the said errors corrected according to law.

A. B. SEXSMITH.
Clerk of North Fredericksburgh.
Dated at Bardolph, 14th Aug., 1905.

Josiah paused in his restless walking and leaned against the casing of the door, with a gleam of hope in his eyes.

"Ha, ha," his laughter rang out harsh and mirthless. "An our gallant courtier doth fall a victim to the pest 'twill be a long number o' days before he can recover strength to ride down yon rocky mountain road. In that time, with perseverance and determination, much headway can be made!"

He opened his lips to continue, hesitated, then said: "Then saidst I think that yon cavalier's face was not one of much attractiveness, good mother? Not one a woman would remember long?"

Still treasuring in her heart against him the harsh words he had spoken as he rode up to the door, his mother made reply:

"Twere a sin to speak words without truth, Josiah," she said piously, "so I fain must say that to the worldly minded the gallant's face was one of much manly beauty."

Her son did not reply, but strode hastily out of the doorway, and as he walked bitter hatred filled his heart and blinded his eyes so that for once he did not see the green lands of Margaret Mayland's estate spreading out in all their spring beauty before him. His sister Hetty, dawdling at the brook in the sunshine, filling the ewers, spoke to him as he passed, but he did not hear her or appear to know that she was there.

Not so with round faced Simon Kempster, who came after him whistling merrily, a bunch of fagots on his shoulders and a happy light in his eyes as their gaze fell on Hetty, who, having filled the ewers, was now raising one to her shoulder preparatory to carrying it to the house.

Simon threw down his fagots.

"A good morrow, Hetty. Shalt help thee with thy water carrying?"

"Nay, not so, good Simon, for mother, ever watchful from the doorway, would say that we did gossip in working hours," she replied soberly. "Once ere now this morning I ha' felt the severity o' her displeasure."

"Then, by my faith, thy sweet face showeth no sign that thou didst take her rebuke to heart sorely, for thy countenance is as bright—as bright"—

Hetty raised her eyes in pleased anticipation.

"As bright as a new brass kettle," he cried, delighted in that he had found so apt a comparison.

The smile on his companion's face grew quickly into a frown as she turned stiffly to walk away.

"So I resemble a brass kettle this morning!" she said sarcastically. "Next time thou grewest sentimental thou wilt probably compare my graces to a cooking pot or swayback," growing angrier every minute, "I may remind thee of thy new pigs' trough!"

"A good morrow, Hetty."

She walked away swiftly.

"Let's be not vexed with me, sweet Hetty," Simon exclaimed, running after her in clumsy haste. "Wait, wait. I have besthought me of a most beauteous verse about thee."

Hetty halted, indecision in her manner, her nose held high in the air and a look of piqued vanity ornamenting her features.

"Thou wert ever slow, Simon. I would be away to assist my mother."

Simon, flushed and breathless, was evidently laboring under great mental excitement. "Prithee, do not speak, Hetty, or I'll lose it!" he cried, with great eagerness.

"I—I went to the brook.
An' when I did look
I saw a maid,
And—and she no longer stayed.

"There, there! That's sentiment for thee, Hetty."

Her face softened a little, and she approached a step nearer, asking doubtfully, "Dost think so, Simon?"

"Aye, marry, 'tis a fine verse and of wondrous sentiment!" he replied convincingly. "I warrant that Will Shakespeare, with all the talk about him, could ne'er ha' done better. I never hear of such perfection in rhyming, Hetty?"

"Perchance, 'tis well for a verse thought on the minute," she replied, with an indifferent toss of her head. "Ah, welladay, 'tis ill dawdling at the brook the morning, with a day's work ahead of one, a-listening to foolish rhymesters."

Is your Coal Wasted or Used?

It is comparatively easy to build a range that will make a lot of heat, but it requires the exact science of Pandora range building to produce a range that will use all the heat in the coal without waste.

A common range may burn twice the coal that a Pandora will, and yet do only half the work.

If you use a Pandora range you can be certain that your coal money is not wasted, but used.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief in these and all cases from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to control the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Senator Beveridge was describing a precocious little girl.

"She showed her precocity the other day," he said, "by a question that she asked me.

"I had said to her in the course of an examination in mystical arithmetic: 'How old would a person be who was born in 1861?'

"She smiled and asked:

"'Was the person a man or a woman?'"

"By Medicine Life May be Prolonged." So wrote Shakespeare nearly three hundred years ago. It is so today. Medicine will prolong life, but be sure of the qualities of the medicine. Be prolonged by taking Scott's Emulsion, free from disease. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil used internally or externally for coughs and colds, eradicate asthma, overcome croup and give strength to the respiratory organs. Give it a trial.

This is said to be Maude Adams' favorite story: A colored "gemman," name unknown but called Culpepper Pete, who, being crammed of some dunky maiden, and not having the courage to "pop" face to face, called up the house where she worked and had the fair one to the telephone. When he got the proper party on the line, the father inquired:

"Is dat Miss Johnsing?"

"I-a-a.

"Well, Miss Johnsing, I've got a mos' impohtant question to ask you."

"I-a-a.

"Will you marry me?"

"Ya-a-a. Who is it, please?"

Sleeplessness. When the nerves are unstrung and the who'e body given over to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloomy dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the liver, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do away with sleeplessness, and restore to health and strength. Dose, one pill at night.

A Harvard sophomore was reciting a memorized oration in one of the classrooms of the public school of Cambridge, two successive hits memory failed, and he stood there with a vacant look on his face. He began as follows:

"Ladies and gentlemen—Washington is dead. Lincoln is dead"—then, forgetting his headache, he continued—"and dead—and—I—I am beginning to feel sick myself."

The Flagging Energies Revived—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These come from stomachic troubles. The best cure of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the digestive organs become unable to food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare power, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

Holloway's Corn Cure destroys all kinds of corns and warts, root and branch. When you would enjoy them with such a cheap and effectual remedy within reach?

"I won't marry Jack. He doesn't dance at all." "I want an eligible man." "But he's a splendid swimmer." "Yes, but I'm afraid of water, and I'd have to keep in an aquarium."

Mr. Wiggins had an insurance of $600 on the barn. Mr. Dan McConkey's barn, half a mile from Selby, was also struck and burned with a good portion of this year's crop including forty loads of hay, a horse rake and a valuable horse. CAMDEN EAST.

Our little hamlet was treated to a surprise on Saturday last in the form of a victory by our baseball team over that of Yarker. The result was like a bolt from a clear sky, as our opponents were recognized as the leading team in the county, having won and defeated all comers. It was anybody's game until the last man was out in the ninth innings. At the beginning of the last innings the score was 12-12, but in the last innings the Yarker boys were scored, and as Yarker half threw grounders to the infield were all that could be worked off R. Smith's delivery, which only required the fielding of three men in the last innings. The final score stood 14-12. The Yarker boys took defeat in the gentlemen and gave the visitors a very pleasant afternoon, which we hope to be able to return in the near future. The game was satisfactorily umpired by Mr. Sis. Littlewood, of Newburgh.

DEATH OF MRS. AYLESWORTH.

Wife of Methodist Pastor, Well-Known in This County.

Mrs. D. W. Aylesworth, wife of the well-known Methodist minister now located at New London, Conn., fell down the cellar stairs at the home of her son, Frank Aylesworth, at Capron, N.Y., Sunday morning, and broke her neck, death ensuing almost immediately. She was a sister of Francis Marshall, of Kingston, and was born there in 1835, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall. The family moved to Westbrook, and there she met and married Rev. D. W. Aylesworth. On June 23rd, 1903, while residing at Felts Mills, they celebrated their golden wedding. Mr. Aylesworth supplied several charges in Canada and moved to the States in 1865, his first charge being in St. Lawrence county, other places in which they lived were Evans Mills, Three Mile Bay, Turin, Westmoreland, New Hartford, Isberg and Cleveland. Then, in 1891, they returned to New Hartford, where Mr. Aylesworth had previously labored as pastor, and purchased a residence and made their home for four years, while Mr. Aylesworth engaged in lecturing. In 1895 they removed to Harrisville, Lewis county, where Mr. Aylesworth took up pastoral work again, and since they had lived at Sackett's Harbor four years, at Felts Mills two years, and at New London since April, 1901, when Mr. Aylesworth became pastor of the Methodist church in that village.

Mrs. Aylesworth possessed excellent ability, and she was of great assistance to her husband in his pastoral work. She was a worker in the Sunday school, in the Junior League and took an active part in all church activities. She was also especially interested in temperance work and her life was one well spent in helping others to higher and better things. Devoted as a mother and a wife she made the home a shrine of devotion to children and husband, when she made happy by her thoughtfulness and care. The grace of hospitality she never forgot, and all were welcome at her fireside. In the various charges where she and her husband had labored, the news of her sudden death will be learned with sincere sorrow.

Mrs. Aylesworth leaves, besides her husband, three sons, Rev. M. H. Aylesworth, D.D., pastor of the Simpson Memorial church, at Jersey City, N.J.; Frank W., of Capron, N.Y., and Albert R., of Watertown, N.Y.; three daughters, Mrs. Thomas Hughes and Mrs. George H. Drum, Westmoreland, N.Y., and Mrs. G. C. Reesor, Rome, N.Y. Eight grandchildren also survive.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD

To make the best Bread you must have the best Flour.

When the dough is flat, sour, heavy, will not rise,—when the bread is soggy, tasteless, indigestible—then you have cheap and inferior flour.

You may use pure fresh yeast, faithfully adhere to the old-time successful bread making traditions, the methods usually successful—but the baking turns out badly—simply because you have not used the right kind of flour.

Royal Household Flour is purified and sterilized by electricity, it is therefore uniformly pure and wholesome.

And because it is thoroughly purified it will yield a sweet, wholesome, light sponge that will bake into flaky, deliciously flavored, nourishing bread or pastry.

It is really the only absolutely pure flour you can get.

"Which road to Cragenstone?" he asked.

"A feeling like the sharp prod of a knife went to my heart. I knew at once that such a man as that—evidently a French nobleman or courtier—sought not the village of Cragenstone unless he were in quest of thy cousin Margaret. Not one of the plain people that bide about here, forsooth, was the magnet that was drawing that man so toilsomely up our rough hills. So I listened to their further converse with bated breath. Abigail, almost stunned with the shock and fear of her mother's death and surprised at the sudden appearance of such a man at the door, in her confusion and nervous fear instructed him to keep right on."

"Which road?" almost shrieked Josiah.

"The rocky, hilly, torturous ascent, with deep ravines, abounding in turbulent streams and containing precipices sharp and sudden, where death to menace and endanger lives of unwary strangers—that road he took—the one that doth lead to Sterndorf," she announced, with a grim calmness that did not conceal the note of triumph in her voice.

"At first when I did hear the timid Abigail give the wrong direction and I saw the men ride gayly forward me thought to call them back, for mayhap"—

"An thou hadst," Josiah interrupted harshly, his face blanching with excitement, "I had ne'er forgiven thee! 'Twas a good hour when the maid met him at the door and missent the worldly gallant!"

"For a moment he stood there deep in thought; then he added: "In truth 'tis a lonely road, and I much doubt that they will meet a traveler to give them other instruction. The Skoltvent stream is greatly swollen. In their eagerness to reach what they think is Cragenstone they will make desperate efforts to ford it, and, once over, delayed in Sterndorf by this storm, that will raise the water to a depth full high," he cried triumphantly, "no human being can return across that stream in less than seven days. Pray for a constant, steady downpour of this rain, good mother, and heaven give me skill to make the most of my time. Once her faithful promise given, Margaret is mine. And every ambitious wooer that vouneth here after that may ride away down the mountain to seek a mate in other quarters."

He appeared greatly elated.

"But yestermorn, mother, I was with my cousin for two hours, and methought her manner was less stiff and cold and that she did not regard me with disfavor."

"Josiah," his mother admonished him with more than usual seriousness, "leave recourse to thy Bible and forget not thy prayers, for methinks the divine hand of the Lord is in this and doth direct our guidance. Hast thou word of the awful pest of measles in Sterndorf that good Brother Sparrow brought us news of last Saturday e'en? Scarce man or child in the village but is stricken." He said it was a fell disorder that attacked one suddenly with high fever and frightful pains in back and head, stating further that some were blinded for several days."

"Said he so?"

The red light from the dripping candle illumined Josiah's face, showing the exultant expression in his eyes.

"And well good Brother Sparrow knows, for his daughter dwelleth there. Mother, thou hast brought her to this pass than I at first anticipated. And now"—with lowered voice—"no word of this to any other soul."

A sudden blast of wind, a sound of rain so heavy that it seemed as if a cloud had burst, and the flickering flame of the candle was blown out, leaving them in darkness. With an impatient exclamation Josiah drew forth his tinder box, and, after striking the flint and steel together savagely several times without being able to get a spark, he threw them into the corner angrily, and, taking his mother's arm, they groped their way out of the barn, splashing across the muddy roadway to the door, which was opened by the wanton Hetty, who, received with their long delay, greeted them grumblingly and with many complaints.

CHAPTER V.

"SIX days of constant rain, my Hetty."

Margaret Mayland, half sitting, half reclining on a lounge in her bedroom, glanced at her cousin, who sat in a low chair opposite, with a petulant expression on her face.

"Such storms," she continued complainingly, "such deluges of water and blustering winds, I had ne'er thought to witness in this life! Truly 'twell thou wert with me, cousin, or I should have died twenty times over of homesickness and loneliness."

Hetty sighed sympathetically.

"Last night 'twas awful!" She shuddered and drew her soft gray shawl closer about her shoulders.

"The wind screamed about the house and whistled through the lattices, making such eerie noises that I covered up my head with fright. 'Twas a lonesome night, Margaret, and methought the elements at war affected thee, for thou wert restless in thy dreams."

With an air of mystery Hetty leaned over and touched her cousin's arm, saying in a lower voice, "Didst think of witches, cousin, an' hobgoblins?"

"Nay, not of witches," Margaret replied, with a light laugh, "but of a truth the thought occurred to me more than once that 'twas the devil's night and he was holding, forsooth, high revelry with his imps and demons. But if what folks say is true—that witches are his hirelings, having sold their souls to him—I doubt not that many of them also were abroad to rouse the elements and disturb poor mortals."

"Margaret, hist!" Hetty's face grew white, and her eyes opened in fright and horror. "Speak not so frivolously of the uncanny, wicked spirits that dwell in the air lest they hear and do us evil. Didst never hear of the fate of Sarah Goodwin, a woman in Sterndorf who denied the malevolent spirits who ever hover near us and laughed at witchcraft?"

"Nay, good Hetty," Margaret smiled indulgently, "I have ne'er heard of her. An' ye, besides frightful storms, long faces, lonely hours and almost impassable roadways, this country is beset with spooks and witches? Tell me of Mistress Goodwin, good cousin."

Throwing herself at full length on the couch, Margaret prepared to listen. Hetty drew nearer her face still pale and casting timid, furtive glances all about her.

"Lower the voice, Margaret, or ill may befall us. I see not so much as a thine eyes, but 'tis e'en so. Why, one warm day last summer," she continued earnestly, in her desire to convince her cousin, "two goodwives were mending the spire of our meeting house, and as they worked they discussed the bad effects of evil spirits and said that all witches should be hanged, thereby destroying the wicked devils in them."

Hetty's voice trembled. "Just then a gust of thunder rent the air, great black clouds gathered in the heavens, but no rain fell. Lightning such as never was seen before flashed across the sky, striking one of these men to the earth, who in falling brought the other one down with him. The former never spoke again, although he lived, and t'other's arms were powerless to do a stroke of work again."

The blue eyes of Mistress Mayland reflected the seriousness of her cousin's.

"Hetty, thy tale is a tragic one, an' I wot the poor men but ill deserved their fate," she said. "But of this woman, Sarah Goodwin, how did she bear out to Satan that she became a witch?"

"Ah, lackaday," with a deep drawn sigh, "twas never known, but on her body she bore the witch-mark." Hetty whispered. "An' so, as the evil spirits controlled her, she became bedridden and naught of medicine or physicians' care could cure her. All who came in contact with her suffered, although for years no one suspected her. Her own daughter died in childbirth, leaving a vacant minded son to roam the village, ragged and uncared for. Then a fearful drought set in, drying up the land, spoiling all the crops, and folks at Sterndorf had to walk to the Skoltvent stream, halfway down the mountain, for water wherewith to slake their thirst. Then people all about heard rappings, strange noises—doors flew open when there was no one beholden, as well at night, were found dead i' the morning, an', Margaret, all the village lay under the spell of terror, with a sure knowledge of evil spirits lurking in the air about them. One day a neighbor passing Sarah Goodwin's but, hearing strange sounds, looked through an opening and saw the woman in contortions on the floor, one convulsion following another in rapid succession. While with fear in her face she fled, who, after trying every remedy known to medical science, pronounced the woman possessed of devils."

"This country is beset with spooks and witches!"

Hetty paused, watching her companion intently to observe the effect of her words. Margaret drew a sharp breath of interest and sympathy.

"And what happened to the poor creature?" she asked. "Was there no one there to free her of the evil that possessed her?"

Hetty shook her head quickly in the negative.

"Nay, Margaret, the whole village was wild with fear, no one but the leech being venturesome enough to go near her. The town council, having great authority in these parts, met in consultation, hastily brought the woman to trial and sentenced her to be burned at the stake!"

Margaret shuddered and covered up her eyes as if to shut out the sight. "An' was this cruelthing done? Burned they the poor creature?" she cried pityingly.

"Aye, Margaret," Hetty replied; "they did so in the presence of a crowd of rejoicing neighbors. And my mother and 'twere well done, otherwise the woman would have spread constant disaster all about her. Mayhap an her evil inclination indused her," she continued mysteriously in a low voice. "Sarah Goodwin had changed human beings into animals, called up the resting spirits of the dead and put the curse of her black magic on those who might have innocently approached her. But, prithee, good Margaret, be not so downcast at the outcome of my tale, for witchcraft among our mountain people hath ever been thought the blackest of crimes, and punishment or torture being considered too great to suffer in expiation. 'Tis a thing with which we have no tolerance, cousin, for of all evil happenings in the world, of a truth, it is the most vicious and malignant."

Margaret shuddered and turned away.

"Methinks thou couldst have chosen a cheerful subject, Hetty, wherewith to while away the hours of a gloomy morning," she said reproachfully.

Rising from the couch, she walked to the window and, throwing open the lattice, looked out of doors.

"Ah, happy day!" she exclaimed. "Sunshine at last! See yonder cloud, south. Bright rays are breaking through it. Old Giles was right this morning when he said that the fierce wind had shifted and now lay in the western quarter, promising that we would see the sun before night. Rejoice with me, sweet Hetty."

For a time in silence they watched the beauty of the golden tinted clouds breaking apart and drifting about under the blue sky; then Margaret, whose face expressed great happiness and who seemed unable to contain her high spirits, said: "Art not aweary of the close, damp air of the house? Come, let us walk on the old stone wall by the pasture, for the ground is much too water soaked, and witness for ourselves what havoc the storm hath played."

Hastily procuring a light cape, she threw it over the muslin house dress she wore, and, Hetty following, the girls, refusing to listen to the protests of Elsbeth, who met them on the stairs, against going out of doors on such a morning, stepped out on to the ground, picked their way daintily—with much light laughter—over the wet paths, climbed the wall and, holding hands, ran gayly with the light heartedness of school children set free from the confinement along the top of the broad stone wall.

"I faith, 'tis worth a pound to get out into the open and breathe the air again!" Margaret exclaimed, her blue eyes sparkling and her cheeks aglow.

The ribbon that bound her hair came loose, and in very abandonment of youth and health she threw it away, freeing her heavy masses of hair to the embraces of the wind, which caught it up tenderly, allowing the sun to kiss it with its sparkling rays, gently tossed it about her head, and, as if exulting the gay mood of its owner, it grew more playful and roughly swept the tresses before Margaret's eyes, so that she almost stumbled as she ran. A large oak branch hung low over the wall. With a cry of pleasure Margaret caught hold of it and, lifting her feet, swung out into the air and back to the wall again, laughing joyfully at her achievement as she ran on to the end of the wall.

"Margaret!" Hetty exclaimed, running after her cousin, rather breathless at the whole proceeding. "What merry spirit of mischief possesseth thee?"

"Take my hand, sweet cousin, and run some of the Puritan stiffness out of thee," Margaret replied with flushed face and smiling eyes. "Then, sweet cousin, through my veins and my heart beats gayly today because the clouds are drying up that leaf from London to this village. Look not so bewildered, sweet. Thou'it know anon why thy cousin welcomes wind and rain. See, the clouds are scattering and drifting far away! Come, Hetty, once more!" And, taking her cousin's hand, they ran together to the end of the wall.

"I'm out o' breath, but back again! I'll wager I'll get there before thee, slow Hetty."

She paused a moment, looking toward the house.

"What man is that demanding admittance?" she asked. "Methinks he looks on us with disapproval."

"Thou knowest well 'tis Josiah," faltered Hetty. "Dost think he saw us running, cousin?"

"Aye, even so an he did. What careth thou or I?" Margaret replied indifferently as she proceeded calmly toward the house along the top of the wall, followed by Hetty, now white faced and greatly abashed.

"We will go to meet him, Hetty, and give him greeting."

Josiah Taunston busied himself with tying his horse to a tree until his cousin and sister approached, then, standing erect, regarded them coldly, with an unsmiling expression in his small gray eyes.

"I give thee good day, Cousin Josiah," Margaret said quietly. "How can I serve thee? Will enter?"

She threw open the door.

"Thank thee, Cousin Margaret," he replied in a hard, rasping voice. "I but rode up with a message for my sister."

Until then he had ignored Hetty, but now turned upon her suddenly with great sternness in his manner.

"But before I deliver it, Hetty, I would like to ask thee if in thy recent conduct on yonder wall thou bethought thee that the servants were taking notice, also neighbors who might be passing by?"

Margaret, tossing her hair back with her hand, disdained to answer, and Hetty, much crestfallen, replied hastily: "Twas but the pleasure of an idle moment, Josiah. What message sent my mother?"

"She thinks, as I do, that thou hast been here long enough," he said significantly. "Thy mother hath need of thee."

"I'll go at once, brother," she answered in nervous haste.

"It is well, Margaret," turning again to her. "I would have converse with thee an thou hast this hour idle."

His cousin's face fell slightly, but she said pleasantly: "Thou'rt ever welcome, Josiah. Step into the withdrawing room, and when I have bound my hair I will come to thee. Sweet Hetty," turning to her cousin and embracing her tenderly, "goodly, or better, as we say in France, 'au revoir.' Tell mine aunt that I have been a sinful woman and my house to lighten the gloom of the long storm and that I part with thee most unwillingly."

"God be with thee, Margaret," Hetty answered soberly, turning toward home with evident reluctance.

CHAPTER VI.

INHERITING from his mother a hard, unyielding nature, young Taunston, in his life of struggle and trial to keep his farm intact, had obtained what success was his through firm resolve, grim determination and desperate endeavor. Where he could not bend he had broken, and now to gain his ends he knew no other method. So, instead of disguising his disapproval of his cousin's light conduct, he chose rather to place on his pale, gaunt features an expression of hardness and disapproval as he rose stiffly at the sound of the soft rustling of skirts approaching to receive her.

With her hair brushed smoothly back and a prim kerchief crossed over her shoulders, hiding the fair round neck that the dainty cotton frock she wore disclosed, her face calm and serene, but withal a very different creature from the merry young woman who but a moment since had been running on the old wall, Margaret entered quietly and bade her kinsman be seated. He did this awkwardly, appearing ill at ease. Margaret's heart felt chilled. It was all so gloomy here, so cold and cheerless. For the moment her thoughts turned toward Paris with bitter longing.

Josiah shifted on his chair and worked his pale lips as though he were at a loss for words and was angered at the fact.

At last Margaret broke the silence. "Twas a most frightful storm, good cousin. Were thy lands much damaged?"

"Nay," he replied. "Being in the valley, we are protected some. But thou, Margaret, thy lands stretch broadly in the open. Hast thou suffered losses?" Margaret laughed lightly.

"I truth, Josiah, I have not given the matter a thought. Farming, I wot, is not a woman's work or else the Lord had given her a better liking for it."

Josiah's small eyes glittered.

"Then hast argued the truth!" he cried, the words fairly bursting from his mouth in his eagerness to speak them. "To manage an estate, I faith, is not a woman's work. Why, cousin, I warrant that these lands under thy management alone in two years would suffer a decline to one-half. Thy father, Margaret, ever with an eye to thy best interests, gave me the stewardship of thine estate. Didst never accur to thee what his object was in this?"

"He knew, Josiah, that thou wouldst perform thy duties punctually," she replied pleasantly, suppressing a yawn behind her hand, "for thou art known to be a zealous man and one of integrity. I never feel that I cannot think these enough for thy watchful care of mine estate, good cousin."

"Margaret," Josiah said, a dark flush spreading over his countenance, "my mother—in fact, several of my neighbors have remarked that it is not meet for so young and fair a maid to live alone."

Margaret threw up her head rather defiantly.

"I have good Elsbeth and old Giles," she replied, "an' two better watchdogs ne'er had a maid to guard her. What could one want better, cousin?"

The buckle of her shoe coming loose, she leaned over to fasten it when the cross that she wore on the fine gold chain about her neck fell to the floor.

"My chain hath broken," she cried, "an' I promised dear Hulda that I would wear her gift until I died! Is there a goldsmith hereabout, Josiah?"

"Yes; old Adam Browdie, next the Sign of the Red Heart in the village," he answered. "But, cousin, ft were ill for thee to ornament thyself with that unholy papist cross. 'Tis our belief that such forms are for the use of idol worshipers and are instruments of the devil. Already the village folk talk of the cross of gold thou doth wear so publicly with disfavor."

With a sudden movement he rose and came to her side, standing over her sternly.

"Burn it, Margaret! Burn the emblem that doth menace the salvation of thy soul! Burn the wicked trophy!" he commanded.

Margaret slipped the chain and cross into the bosom of her dress. "Be seated, Josiah," she said coldly, "unless thy visit is done and thou wouldst go on thy way."

"Just a moment longer." He walked across the room and resumed his seat. Beads of perspiration stood out on his forehead, and he spoke with an effort.

"I would further remonstrate with thee, Lady Margaret, my mother, who doth love thee with a mother's love, ever holding thy best interests close to her heart, and I sat talking of thee until all hours. We spoke of society, where all the women are vain and frivolous and all the men poltroons, blackguards"—

"I deny that all the men are poltroons and blackguards!" Margaret cried, her face flushing with anger. "Heed thy words, Josiah!"

He went on in his cold, immovable way, as if she had not spoken:

"An', though we fully realize his mistake in that particular, we rejoice in thy father's wisdom that ordered thy return to thy native land when thou had reached thy majority, here to spend the remainder of thy days."

Margaret made no response, but sat before him quietly, indifferent to his words, finding him even more tiresome than usual and inwardly wondering when he would consider it expedient to take his departure, and Josiah, misraking the silence for acquiescence and approval of his words, continued:

"I would have thee to know, Margaret, that I will come to thee. Sweet Hetty," turning to her cousin and embracing her tenderly, "goodly, or better, as we say in France, 'au revoir.' Tell mine aunt that I have been a sinful woman and my house to lighten the gloom of the long storm and that I part with thee most unwillingly."

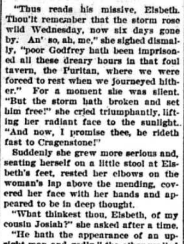
"Thus reads his miserable, Elsbeth. Thou'lt remember that the storm rose wild Wednesday, now six days gone by. An' so, ah, me," she sighed dismally, "poor Godfrey hath been imprisoned all these dreary hours in that foul tavern, the Puritan, where we were forced to rest when we journeyed hither." For a moment she was silent. "But the storm hath broken and set him free!" she cried triumphantly, lifting her radiant face to the sunlight. "And now, I promise thee, he rideth fast to Cragenstone!"

Suddenly she grew more serious and, seating herself on a little stool at Elsbeth's feet, rested her elbows on the woman's lap above the mending, covered her face with her hands and appeared to be in deep thought.

"What thinkest thou, Elsbeth, of my cousin Josiah?" she asked after a time.

"He hath the appearance of an upright man and godly," the other replied



"Take time to think on the words I ha' just spoken."

thoughtfully, "but, I ween, hard and stern, even as his kind, who, with their long, sad faces, do dwell upon this mountain."

"He asked this morning to wed with me," Margaret observed quietly.

"What saidst thou?" Elsbeth exclaimed, indignation in her tone and glance. "The sour visaged churl, to want my bonny Margaret! Didst tell him of Sir Godfrey?"

"Nay," blushing softly. "There are few to whom I care to say that name. I would have told Josiah, 'Nay, nay, nay!' and thrice more nay and sent him roundly to the right about on the instant for his presumption, but he would not take me answer, and, forsooth, commanding me harshly to let thoughts of him dwell in my heart until his haughty lordship would speak with me on the subject again, he took his departure. It was this manner. Look, Elsbeth."

Rising to her feet, Margaret strode with stiff awkwardness toward the door.

"Ugh!" with a shudder. "I was forced to open the lattice to let the sunlight in after the left, the room had grown so damp and cold from his chilling presence! So thou'lt not give thy consent for thy Margaret's marriage with him, Elsbeth?" teastingly.

Elsbeth shook her head in a knowing manner.

"Forsooth, pretty, I trow thou'lt wed the lover that riderh here anon, that thy young heart is set on, with my consent or without it, but," she continued thoughtfully, "we will it seem strange to me that such a hard man as thy cousin Josiah doth appear to be should have a desire for anything so soft as the love of a woman."

"Prithee, forget his gloomy face," Margaret interrupted crossly; then, coming and sitting at Elsbeth's knee again, said coaxingly: "Let's talk of—Godfrey! Oh, Elsbeth, such bonny times, such happy hours as we will have together!" she exclaimed, with clasped hands and quick drawn breath. "Sweet Godfrey, to come so soon! He told me on the eve before I left—when we were both so sad; hath forgotten, stupid Elsbeth, that we had business in London which would shortly bring him across the channel and that he would in probability visit me ere I were well settled on mine estate. Say, Elsbeth, I could wring my hands with sorrow that the cruel storm rose and kept him from me six long days, and then again I could sing until I burst my heart for very joy that I shall see him today ere nightfall."

Rising suddenly, she went to the open window and, throwing out her arms, cried earnestly: "Oh, warm winds, whispering winds, bring me word that Godfrey now rideth safely up the mountain road—my Godfrey, whom I love!"

For answer the rough breeze tossed her hair about, scattering the white points of her kerchief over her face.

"Ah," she murmured softly, "I need not the confirmation, shifting winds! My best, that is ever my best guidance, doth give me assurance that he'll come tonight! What frock shall I wear for Godfrey, who," she whispered laughingly in Elsbeth's ear, "is a stately Parisian lady in my silken gown of powdow blue with feathers waving high above my head, or shall I let him take me to his heart as a simple mountain maiden with smooth hair, gray homespun frock and sober countenance? Whichever way, good Elsbeth, will Godfrey like me best?"

Elsbeth, watching the girl's happy mood, smiled indulgently.

"An my opinion were worth the giving in such a case," she replied, "methinks Sir Godfrey will see only the happy light in thy blue eyes and thy red lips when first he cometh."

"Elsbeth!" Margaret shook her finger at her companion, laughing lightly. "Thou hath surely had a lover, al though thou hast ever denied it, or else how knowest thou so well their ways? Come, I'll wear my peachblow silk, be deck myself in the grandest fashion and receive my Godfrey in the with drawing room with all the honors would bestow upon the king were he to visit me. The king!" she exclaimed with a disdainful toss of her head "Forsooth, what is a king compared to Godfrey?"

The sight of the complete adoration of her charge for this man caused feeling of pain to strike the elder woman's heart, and as she unfastened the lacing of Margaret's bodice she felt compelled to say:

"Methinks 'twere not well, sweet, to fasten thy heart so entirely on a man not yet thy husband. An old woman with much experience of the world doth know that many men, especially worldly men of fashion as Sir Godfrey La Fabienne, woo a maid with much love, always ride away, leaving her to cure a broken heart."

"Elsbeth!" exclaimed Margaret sharply. "Cease thine idle chatter and dar not cast thy vile insinuations against Sir Godfrey in my presence."

Her face flushed, tears filled her eyes, and she took the lacings out of Elsbeth's hands in thought to no longer wished her aid, walking from her.

"Forgive me, sweet Margaret." Elsbeth followed her anxiously, regret at her words showing in her countenance. "'Tis but my love for thee that gives me false anxiety, bonny, for thy happiness is my only happiness, an' thy sorrow more than my sorrow."

For a time Margaret was silent; then she said with great seriousness: "Elsbeth, never again express doubt of Sir Godfrey. Doubt that the sun riseth to light the earth; doubt that night falls upon the day; doubt thy love for me, but never doubt such thoughts as thou didst give voice to a moment since against Sir Godfrey La Fabienne—a man," she continued in a low, pas-

The Latest and Best Medicine for Women

Medicine has made great strides during the past few years. Doctors will not prescribe the same remedies now they did twenty-five years ago. There is something better.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women are vastly better than the remedies put on the market then, which contain some of the most valuable discoveries since that time.

Good, perhaps, in their day, they are now ignored by all the march of medical science by something better.

Many of the most effective ingredients in Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets had not been discovered twenty-five years ago. Some of them were not discovered ten years ago.

Yet the world's best physicians are now using them in diseases of women. There is no other preparation in which they can be obtained except these tablets. That is why we term Dr. Hugo's remedy "The twentieth century preparation for women." It is up-to-date. Women who suffer should ignore these recently discovered ingredients, which science has made available for their relief.

It is an incontrovertible fact that these tablets, embracing as they do, all the latest and best in medicine, will change weak and diseased conditions of matter which they may be) into strong and healthy organs, when the tired feeling, nervousness, and irritability, which come from a run-down condition, will disappear.

They will take away the backache, constipation, and dragging-down pains which are symptoms of a run-down condition or some serious disorder. They will cure all menstruation or uterine troubles even when chronic. In a word, they make healthy women.

Don't think you can never be a strong, healthy woman until after you have tried these tablets. One box will prove that you can. Improvement is noticed the first week.

MERCHANTS BANK OF CANADA AT YARKER.

The Merchants Bank of Canada intend to open an agency at Yarker in the early part of September. This will be a great advantage to the people of Yarker and district, and it is to be hoped that they will give the bank their hearty support, now that banking facilities have been brought to their own door. There are very few people who have not dealings with banks either as depositors or in some other way, and the people of Yarker are to be congratulated that such a large and strong bank as the Bank of Chants Bank of Canada, with its capital of $6,000,000, and rest of $3,400,000, has decided to open an office in their midst.

LAID ALL NIGHT ON WIFE'S GRAVE.

One of the most painful occurrences we have been called on to chronicle in some time, occurred on Thursday of last week. Mr. Wm. Allen, aged 82 years, one of our most respected residents, went out in the afternoon to cut the grass on his wife's grave in the Eastern cemetery. He did not return for tea or during the night, and Mr. Arthur Blaud found him next morning lying on the grave in a semi-unconscious condition. He was at once taken home, where he is still very ill. It was an exceedingly warm day, and his physician thinks he may have had a sun stroke, and perhaps a slight stroke of paralysis. Mr. Allen has lain all week in bed, most of the time unconscious, and showing no signs of a stroke excepting a little thickness in his speech.

GALL—CALDER.

On Tuesday morning, Aug. 1st, at 9 o'clock, the Methodist church, Manitou, Man., was the scene of a quiet and pleasing ceremony, when Miss Beatrice Calder, daughter of Mr. Benjamin Calder, Altamont, was married to Mr. Ernest D. Gall, one of our most popular and prosperous young merchants. Rev. A. Henderson, of Kelkana, B.C., assisted by Rev. W. Bowering, tied the nuptial knot in the presence of about sixty friends who had assembled. Miss Edith Calder, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. Albert Gall, brother of the groom, was best man. The bride looked charming in a beautiful green tasket cloth travelling suit and hat to match. The bridesmaid wore a gown of rosada green and hat to match. The groom's gift to his bride, a Gerrard Heintzman piano, and to the bridesmaid, a beautiful gold bracelet set with one diamond. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party drove to the C.P.R. station where numerous friends had gathered to tender their congratulations and wish them bon voyage. Mr. and Mrs. Gall will spend a month visiting friends in London, Toronto and Camden East, the bride's former home, before taking up their residence in Manitou.

LANE—STEWART.

A very pretty event took place in the Methodist church, Denbigh, at four o'clock p.m., on Wednesday, Aug. 9th, when Florence Lillian, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lane, Hillo View, was united in marriage to J. Robert Stewart, of Ielert. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. R. Butler, Ielert, brother-in-law of the bride, while Miss Jean Lane, sister of the bride, rendered Mendelssohn's wedding march very effectively while the bridal party was entering and leaving the edifice. Miss Vida, youngest sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Mr. Esthel Bebee ably supported the groom, while little Miss Clara Fiddler, Essex, of Petrolea, niece of the bride, made a sweet and charming flower girl. The church was beautifully decorated with streamers and arches of evergreens, while the pulpit was banked with a profusion of potted plants, palms and cut flowers. After the conclusion of the ceremony the company repaired to Vintanere Cottage, the home of the bride's brother, J. Samuel Lane, with whom she has lived since a child, where the guests, numbering about one hundred, sat down to a very recherche repast. The bride was gowned in an elegant creation of snow white chiffon much beruffled and trimmed with rich lace and insertion, with a transparent yoke of silver embroidery. Her under dress was of white taffeta, the whole en train. She wore the conventional bridal veil of white embroidered tulle, falling from a coronet of orange blossoms, and prettily held on by sprays of the same lovely flower, and sprays of the same. She carried an immense shower bouquet of bride's roses and maiden-hair fern tied with long bows and streamers of satin ribbon. Her going away costume was a prettily tailored shirt waist suit of brown mohair, with a small hat of gold sequins and orange blossoms. The maid of honor wore a pretty costume of figured voile in a champagne color, with a deep yoke of heavy lace, a white chiffon picture hat banked with tiny flowers, and carried a sheaf of pink sweet peas, while the little flower girl was very sweet in white silk organdie trimmed with lace, and carried a basket trimmed with streamers and bows of white satin ribbon, of maiden-hair fern, and filled with pink sweet peas which she scattered in front of the bridal party as they left the church. The groom's gift to the bride ornament a gold expansion bracelet heavily chased and set with a large amethyst, the gift of the groom. The groom's gift to the maid of honor was a pin of red and green enamel and silver, to the best man a pearl stick pin, and to the flower girl a gold locket.

Mrs. Stewart was one of Denbigh's most popular young ladies, having always taken an active and cheerful part in all the social and religious affairs of the village. In this way she will be much missed by both young and old. She is held high esteem with which both Mr. and Mrs. Stewart are held was practically shown by the many handsome and costly presents, including cheques, silverware, clocks, cut glass, fancy china, etc., of which they were the recipients. Amid showers of rice, old shoes and the good wishes of the assembled guests, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart left at 6.30 p.m. for Actinolite, where they will spend a few day with his parents before going to their new home in Ielert. Among those present from a distance were noticed, Mrs. J. R. Esson and daughter Teddie, of Petrolea; Rev. J. R. and Mrs. Butler, Courtice; Mr. J. M. Hughes, Roblin; Miss Jessie Stewart, Actinolite; Mrs. Geo. McNab, Port Arthur; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Smith, Griffith; Mr., Mrs. and Miss McLellan, Matawatch; Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner, and the Misses Bebee, Vennachar; Miss Nora Rodgers, Renfrew; Mr. and Mrs. H. Head and Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Roy, Cloyne.

—A lot of interesting correspondence is crowded over until next week.

AGNES C. LAUT

A Successful Young Canadian Novelist

Of the Canadian novelists who have won reputation and recognition during the past few years, nearly half of the number have been women, and in this list the splendid work of Miss Agnes C. Laut deserves high place. She was born in Winnipeg in 1872, and while in her junior year at the Manitoba University her health proved so delicate that she was ordered to pack up her school books and go out into the wild, free, regenerating life of the Selkirks, to see what these noble mountains of Canada could do for her. There, in a life-giving atmosphere, where every breath is a natural tonic, she rode and walked her way to health, defying the doctors and prophecies of her physicians. She found in an Indian reservation located in the wilds of the mountains, material for her first book, "Lords of the North."

Miss Laut was the first woman to invade the camps of the Canadian Rockies and to study the life there at close range. Her virile, graphic newspaper letters on this subject were not signed, and editors of mining journals into whose hands they chanced to come praised them with enthusiasm, and wondered why other Eastern writers did not picture mining life as it really was like the men whose articles were appearing in the "Winnipeg Free Press" and other papers.

To man in the rough, as Miss Laut found him in these camps, uncontaminated by re-civilization, she pays high tribute when she says: "There I learned to appreciate the chivalry and courtesy, the delicacy and consideration, and a class receiving small credit for such traits, and this, though I was entirely alone, without one instance of disrespect or annoyance." On her travels for literary material in the Selkirks she had many interesting experiences, among them an eight weeks' cruise in a government mailboat along the coast northward from St. Johns. She made many later visits to the Selkirks, where the natural freedom from the trammels of social convention appealed strongly to her.

Beside her later books, "Heralds of Empire," "The Story of the Trapper" and the "Pathfinders of the Great West," Miss Laut has written strong articles on politics and social questions; subjects rarely handled by women and still more rarely with the directness, clearness and force which seem to permeate with vitality everything she writes. Her contributions to the "New York Sun," the New York "Evening Post," the "Review of Reviews" and the "Century" show a virility unusual from the pen of a woman so feminine and so unspoiled by success as Miss Laut.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by W. C. Black, at the Department of Agriculture.

A SPORTSMAN'S PARADISE.

The following catches from a letter written by Dr. J. Ingold Ward, to his father, would indicate that there is a delightful country from the angler's point of view. The letter is dated Bucken, Aug. 31.

"Just arrived this morning, having had a fine trip from the Ottawa, seeing most of the way, with short steamboat trips between.

This is the country for sport. If I were not afraid for a good fat entry, it will be straight to Norway. Before leaving Ottawa I had in a week of fishing tackle. I have fished every day since leaving and have a account of the brook trout and salmon I've caught. But I've given a short recital of my average day. Rise at 4.30 to 5, first spell of fishing, brook trout if lake or properly lord. Back to camp for dinner at one or two p.m. I go ahead at first horses two hours, and then the boat comes along, pick up at from 6 to 8 p.m. I have seven guides, paid $1.50 to 11.50, also first class grub. If I don't get a fish, I get a bear or moose. Everything, it's no fun. Was trolling in the family boat, Mrs. Parker, the last four nice salmon trout when I hooked a bear. I got up to it and it was the best three times and finally played it out. Was about 150 pounds, a regular old barrel-chested, but not yet ripe. We threw in four more and measured seven. Last Tuesday we had a moose hunt.

In another letter from Sudy, Rockford Ont., Dr. Ward says: "I've been driving up on our way home by a different route, and have made out 25 miles. In 25 minutes I caught 18 nice ones, brook trout, and had about twice as many. In one place I hooked four the first cast and threw one back, it was jumping over and under the line looking for an opening to get hold of a fly. It was great fun."

Dr. Ward is starting to get fishy. I see he's dressed and found they had taken my wet clothes and boots. Had to be driving 25 miles to get my good clothes as it was raining so hard that the roads were bad. Had trousers but without suspenders. Finally got to Rockford and got a bed. Wednesday we go up the glacier at Twin Lakes, which is Christmas next Sunday."

Two very solemn funerals occurred here on Sunday. One at 10 a.m. of Mrs. John Shangraw. Deceased has been engaged growing milk on Monday, when the horses became frightened and ran away. She was thrown out in such a manner that he died on Thursday morning. He was in the prime of age, a member of the Methodist church, and a highly respected resident. The funeral of Mrs. Tibbs took place at 2.30 p.m. Deceased was in her 70th year. Her death was the result of disease consumption. The funeral was largely attended. Service for the benefit of his health. This sad death has left his wife but a few months since his eighteen year old daughter, who was 34 years of age, and a number of adult children. She was a highly respected resident, having won many friends during the short time she spent in our midst. Beautiful floral tributes were received from Waterloo and Harrowsmith, Oddfellow lodges, and from personal friends. A loving wife and two children, Dyer and Winnifred are left to mourn his loss.

GENERAL INFORMATION IN BUSINESS.

Writing of the question of education to business in the New Idea Woman's Magazine for September, Edward N. Goodlove, who has made wide observation of the industrial field for years, says, "Take stenographers and secretaries, cyclopedias of information, the managerial work in business of a dozen enterprises—the work of stenography as gets ahead of the uninformed every time. Bus-ness information is so important—the information that secures preference for these women is general, not special, with the exception of stenographic training, and that is only one section of a great variety of equipment. It is the kind of knowledge picked up from many sources, in school and out of it. The same brand of information fits a man speaking thoroughly of course, quite as well for the clerkship as for the managing editor or for the secretaryship. For instances, a knowledge of current events is quite as important in one as in the other. Acquaintance with the general run of history, and at least the landmarks in literature, raise up attendants for their fortunate possessor, no matter what their work is. Command of information, more or less, is the need of every woman who aspires to earn her own living in this twentieth century."

The residence of William Baker, Thomasburg, was badly wrecked; scarcely a room escaped. Mrs. Baker, who was standing near the window was stunned. The roof of the house was struck six years ago and Mr. Baker's daughter killed.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

VALUABLE ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

If your child comes in from play coughing or showing symptoms of Grippe, Sore Throat, or sickness of any kind, get out your bottle of Nerviline. Rub the chest and neck with Nerviline, and give internal doses of ten drops of Nerviline in sweetened water every two hours. This will prevent any serious trouble. No liniment or pain reliever equals Polson's Nerviline, which has been the great family remedy in Canada for the past fifty years. Try a 25c bottle of Nerviline.

What Flour Granulation Means in Bread-Making

Flour is composed of myriads of tiny granules.

To make good bread these granules must be uniform in size.

In poorly milled flour some granules are large, some small.

The small ones absorb yeast, "rise" and "ripen" before the large ones—the result is bread of coarse, poor texture.

The large granules are not developed into "sponge," they bake into heavy hard particles, spoil the texture of the bread and make it harder to digest.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is perfectly milled—all the flour granules are uniform in size—the sponge rises uniformly—the bread is even in texture — perfect in flavor — good-looking, appetising bread — easily digested.

THE WITCH OF CRAGENSTONE

Simon watched her wistfully as she walked away from him, with the ever of water gracefully poised on her shoulder. Nor did he take his glance from her until she had entered a woody stretch of country that lay between the brook and the Taunston farmhouse. Then, throwing fear of her displeasure to the winds, he ran hastily and overtook her at the dell.

"Helty," he whispered, panting slightly, "the sentiment in my verse did please thee, I trow, by the look of approval in thine eyes. Wilt kiss me, Hetty?"

"Nay, silly stupid!" She tossed her head indignantly. "Wast ever such effrontery heard on?"

Then, seeing him abashed and his bright face cloud with regret at his temerity,.her eyes twinkled and she laughed a low, sweet, rippling laugh.

"There, there, good Simon, rout not so dolefully," she exclaimed. "Prithee, since thou hath grown clever at to make verses so aptly perchance thou shouldst have a reward. How!—a warm flush suffusing her countenance —"thou canst kiss the back of my hand if thou like," throwing it toward him indifferently. "There, lawk-a-mercy, man, do ha' done! I did not say my wrist an' arm, that I remember! Aye, mother," she cried hastily in answer to a shrill call from her mother in the doorway. "I'm on my way!"

A mother's love starts a man or woman on the right path. The right mother at the right time fits a mother for the ordeal. Motherhood is often looked forward to with feelings of great dread by most women. At such a time when she is nervous, dyspeptic, irritable and in need of a uterine tonic—something which will calm the nerves, strengthen through the special organs, and a strength builder, she will find Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription just what is needed. Here is a medicine that has stood the test of a third of a century with approval, in that time it has sold more largely than any other remedy put up specially for woman's weaknesses. It is guaranteed by the proprietors not to contain a particle of alcohol —which could only do harm to a sensitive system.

The World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, offer a $500 reward for women who cannot be cured of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb. After the cure is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, biliousness and headache.

CHAPTER VIII.

WITH the slanting rays of the afternoon sun falling full upon her, Margaret Mayland rode up the mountain path that led to the Mayland farm, making with her crimson riding habit and yellow hair a brilliant speck of color against the dark background of the green trees and foliage. Her horse stepped slowly, the rein falling loose on its neck, and Margaret, pale faced and dejected, rode along listlessly. A lark calling his mate sent strong, sweet notes across the forest; a busy squirrel, disturbed by the advent of horse and rider, ran chattering up the trunk of a tree, and the little spring brook bubbled across the mountain road and splashed and sparkled in the sunshine, but Margaret, lost in her sad reverie, took no unheeding with bowed figure and drooping head.

Elsbeth, who for an hour past had been peering anxiously out of a window that overlooked the roadway, upon seeing her young charge at the gates, threw open the door at her approach with a great show of cheerful activity.

"Eager, pretty, as rest thyself," she cried as Margaret alighted from the horse and threw the reins to old Giles.

Then, fitting her eyes in mute despair to Elsbeth's face, Margaret came toward the house.

"Thy tea is brewed, and the hot cakes that thou likest are cooking, keeping warm for thee on th' hearthstone," Elsbeth announced.

Margaret entered languidly, carrying her leveled riding whip, her heavy skirts trailing after her as she came.

"I care not to eat," she said sadly.

Then, as if unable to conceal her disappointment or to control her suffering, she cried out brokenly: "Elsbeth, another day must gone and Godfrey hath not come. An' wander where I will I can get no word of him. Mine eyes are strained with looking down the road that leads from London, and my heart aches near to bursting with loneliness and apprehension. Three weeks last Sunday since I received his missive."

Her riding whip fell to the floor with a thud as she sank into a chair, covering up her white face with her hands.

"Elsbeth," she said at last to the woman who stood before her in mute sympathy, "hast ever thought that Godfrey, reckless in his haste to see me, did attempt to ride up the mountain in that fearful storm and—God's pity on me!—was lost?"

"Tut, tut, sweetheart!"—Elsbeth's voice was gay and full of courage to reassure her. "Sir Godfrey's but detained in London. Thou must keep in mind what a great lord he is and that haylup his business there is of great importance. 'Tis often, I warrant thee, that a man's heart is in one place and perforce his body in another. He'll come grieving, Margaret, and eat a little sup to strengthen thee. He'll come anon."

Her young mistress did not move or raise her head.

"Every night since the storm broke," she lamented, "I have worn my finest gowns to welcome Godfrey—at first with happy heart full of bright hope, then, after succeeding days of bitter disappointment, with less hope and more nodding. But tonight"—she drew a sharp breath and put her hand over her heart—"I go to dress sick with terror and broken hearted with despair, Elsbeth," she cried, springing up her head with a little tragic gesture, "I tell thee Godfrey is ill or dead, for so perfect is my knowledge of his unselfish love for me that I know, unless fever did render him delirious or death had stilled his tongue, he would not leave me pining in misery, suffering this frightful apprehension!"

Weeping silently, she prepared to go up the stairs.

Elsbeth sat at her side in a moment. "Tut, tut, my bonny maid! Let not such fearsome thought beset thee," she urged earnestly. "Take heart, Margaret. I promise thee—thine old Elsbeth who loves thee doth promise thee—that ere the sun goeth down on another day thy lover 'll hold thee in his arms."

Margaret smiled sadly. "An I could believe thine oft repeated promises, good Elsbeth, my heart would not now have lost its lightness."

At the top of the staircase she paused.

"Oh, Elsbeth, 'tis easy for thee to be brave when 'tis not thy Godfrey who doth not come!" she said. "But could thou really know what 'tis to wait wearily night after night for the man who hast thine whole heart thou would pity me."

"I ha' ever advised thee, Margaret," the older woman said, putting her arm about the girl comfortingly, "not to fasten too much affection on any man, else he prove not worthy of it and thy joy be turned to sorrow."

Margaret raised her eyes, filled with deep reproach, to Elsbeth's face.

"Such true love as doth exist between Godfrey and me," she said soberly; "such faith and trust, thou will thine evil suspicions, and gratuitous bodings could have no thought on. What knoweth thou of men and lovers, Elsbeth, that thou talk so freely of their imperfections? 'Twere not kind of thee to tease me with thy maudlin talk when"—the tears in her eyes overflowed on her cheeks—"I am so beset on every side."

"Beset! Margaret, tell me. Who troubles thee?"

"I have told thee of my cousin Josiah's importunities, Elsbeth," she answered. "Thou knowest that his wife, pestered with jealousy of me, and lately his advances have been so open and determined that, I truth, I have fear of him."

She drew a shaky, shuddering breath.

"Elsbeth, the sight of my cousin strikes a chill to my heart. I know that he is an upright man and godly, but he tells me so plainly of his firm determination to win me at all hazards; there is something so cruel in his eyes and so relentless in his bearing, that he sets me all a-tremble. At night I have evil dreams of him, and my waking hours are filled with sad presentiments. Oh, Elsbeth"—she burst out crying bitterly—"pray God to send me Godfrey!"

"There, there! Take off this riding dress that hangs so heavily about thee"—Elsbeth stroked the bowed head gently—"and don thine azure muslin that Sir Godfrey loved to see thee wear. Dost remember, sweet, one night in Paris when I was brushing in her hair that thou told me that thy lover said thou were a dainty flower in that frock—a blue forgetmenot? And the next day he sent thee a bunch of the sweet flowers?"

"Ah, remind me not of those happy days!" she replied tearfully. "Ah, lackaday, that I ever left mine aunt Paris!"

Elsbeth, assisting her to remove her habit, said, with gentle sympathy, "'Tis no wonder thou art nerveless and pining, losing in this raw mountain climate that, I trow, doth not agree with thee, an' the sober ways of thy neighbors do pall upon thee."

"Although I do protest to thee, Elsbeth, that I have lost my buoyancy and strength, I have still courage to bear to-be-buried life, such as separation, poor health, grim poverty, I truth, starvation; but I admit that such agony as the knowledge of harm to Godfrey would be a grief such as would kill me."

"Pie, fie on such grim thoughts! Cheer thee, Margaret," urged her companion.

For a moment the girl struggled with herself, then forcing a smile through the tears said merrily cheerfully, "The blue frock, Elsbeth, and my hair pretha. Who doth dare say that thou and I have lost hope of brave Godfrey?"

An hour later, just as the waning sunlight was hovering over the pine covered peaks of Cragenstone now distinctly defined against the rose tinted sky, the young mistress of the Mayland farm, wearing a blue evening gown made in the French fashion, with the bodice cut low, surmounted by a lace bertha, her fair neck and arms bare and ruffled, skirts made full and sweeping, walked out of the house and standing before the door looked down the roadway pensively with an air of indecision.

The soft breeze stirred the leaves of the foliage and the plaintive call of the whippoorwill could be heard over the trees of the forest, but no other sounds, such as the galloping of horses' feet, fell on the ears of the waiting, lonely woman.

"Mayhap, ap thou'lt walk a little down the road behind the hill, thou'lt meet Sir Godfrey," Elsbeth called from the window.

Margaret turned to her sadly.

"Elsbeth, an Godfrey comes not to-night I shall know that he is lying helpless, ill; hath met foul play—or—or is dead. Tomorrow an he is not here I'll rouse the village, send messengers scurrying in all directions, for, prithee," with a little sob, "if the truth is what I suspect, I had better die of that at once than linger with this suffering, this slow suspense that is killing me."

"What foolish megrims! Nay, cheer thee, Margaret," Elsbeth cried in protest at the dark views of her mistress. "I do protest Sir Godfrey's not the man to be outdone by any villainy. And who hereabout would be his enemy? He'll come anon."

"So thou hast said before," Margaret replied, turning away listlessly, "an' meanest well, for thou dost love me. While yet it is dry I'll stroll through the woody forest path to the village. Some new arrival at the inn perchance hath brought some news. I'll go, good Elsbeth."

At about this time Josiah Taunston, with his broad brimmed hat pulled well down over his closely cropped hair, wearing his church going suit of black cloth and finely knit gray woolen stockings, came through the forest toward the Mayland farmhouse to make an evening call on its fair mistress. Unusual pallor shone on his stern countenance, and his eyes, cold and steely, looked almost wicked, so full were they of an expression of determination. Suddenly the sound of a light footstep fell on his ears and, raising his head, he discerned through the foliage a glimmer of blue that caused him to draw his breath hard and his heart to stand still.

Not seeing the approaching form on account of a turn in the path, Margaret advanced, her head crowned by the wealth of hair wound high above it, held proudly, holding her long skirts well off the ground to avoid the briers in her way, disclosing at her feet the big buckles and red heels of her little black shoes.

"I'd give thee good even', cousin." The voice was sudden and loud.

Margaret gave a wild shriek. Her heart and soul eager for the presence of her lover, every nerve strained with listening and waiting for him, expecting him at every angle of the road, she was startled almost beyond hope of composure at this sudden voice. With her hands over her heart, panting, she fell against a tree and rested there.

"I wot I frightened thee," he said, watching her furtively out of his small gray eyes.

"What meanest thou," she cried angrily when she had recovered slightly, "that thou comest like a great panther stealing through the forest? Couldst not give a body warning?"

"'Tis my fashion to walk easily, Margaret Mayland," he observed, "but I truth I had no wish to frighten thee. Rather would I do that which would draw thee nearer to me so that thou would heed my counsel and listen to words that others far older and wiser than thou have given ear to and"—

Margaret, seeing that her cousin was inclined to be oratorical and having no desire to remain in the forest listening to words of counsel and reproach that were distasteful to her, with a quick motion stood erect before him, interrupting his harangue by saying in a quick, peremptory manner, "I have an errand in the village, Josiah, and would be on my way."

He stood in her pathway immovable. "Margaret, hear me. I do but counsel thee for thy good."

"Why should I heed thy counsel, prithee, and drive ear to thee? By what right do thou admonish me? Am I not mine own mistress?" she asked disdainfully.

"It is not part of my plan to anger thee, Margaret, else I would tell thee many things with unvarnished plainness for thy good and for the welfare of thy soul," he said sadly. "An' if e'er a maid needed the firm guidance of an honorable, God fearing man, thou'rt she, cousin," he continued sternly. "For in this wicked Sodom, the French city called Paris, thou didst learn many ways and acquire habits that if allowed to grow uncorrected would lose thee thy soul for all eternity."

Margaret, coming a step nearer, met his glance with flashing eyes.

"Speak plainer," she commanded. "What dost thou mean?"

"One thing, thy way of dressing, I ask thee in all reason, cousin, doth become a modest, virtuous maid to expose her breast and arms to the gaze of men? I do assert 'tis most unseemly."

Margaret's eyes flashed dangerously.

"But," he continued, seeing her displeasure and endeavoring to control his voice so that it would sound less harsh and discordant, "I know that these are errors of education learned from the gallows in that city of sin and woe; thou in all innocence wast sent by thy father, and that with the firm and loving guidance of a pious husband, combined with constant prayer and repentance on thy part, thou wouldst overcome these ways leading to do thee evil. Margaret, cease thou not see what is for thy good? Give me mine answer tonight!"

He came toward her with outstretched hands. "Say, 'Josiah, I will wed with thee,'"

Margaret, who had grown very white, drew away from him hastily, as if in horror of him, and, uttering a cry of shriek out her refusal, then suddenly with a strong effort composed herself and, giving her shoulders a little shrug, leaned back against the tree, regarding her companion with a half smile of contempt and derision.

"My good cousin," she commenced calmly, "since my return among my kinsfolk, where of a truth I expected warm greetings and loving attentions, with the exception of sweet Hetty I have received naught but unpleasant reflection, constant criticism, unkind fault finding and rude interference with my mode of dress and manner of life. I have borne it all with patience, possibly indifference, attributing it to thine ignorance and the narrowness of thy living here. 'Tis true my ways are not thy ways. Forsooth, I would change them if they were, so insupportable are thine to me, for I have ever been taught by the good and loving aunt who raised me that kind words and civil were much to be preferred to harsh criticism and cruel prejudice, and that fair words and good manners were what distinguished a gentleman from the boor. Again I say and in emphasis," she announced, with an air of finality, "if thou liketh not my ways, I bold thine in abhorrence."

Josiah's thin lips worked.

"Mine answer, Margaret Mayland," he interposed harshly, unable longer to endure the suspense; "cease thy woman's palaver and say me yes or nay."

"Thine answer!" She laughed a light laugh of contempt. "Here it is. I say it plainly so that thou'lt understand it and so forever cease thine importunities. Josiah Taunston, I will not marry thee. Rather would I throw my body over the crag of yonder precipice and let the carrion feed on it. Now let me go my way!"

CHAPTER IX.

A COLOR, sudden gray, spread over Taunston's face, white foam came on his lips, and, removing his hat, he mopped his forehead with his handkerchief. For the moment he was stunned with disappointment and anger, so much so that he did not appear to hear Margaret's second imperative command to give way to her, and stood looking at her dumbly. A woman to scorn him! Since Taunston's majority in all the councels of the village his voice had ever been heard the loudest, carrying conviction with it. The people heeded him; he was a leader, and in his own family the women obeyed his sternest orders without question or even hesitation. In consequence as he had commanded all about him for so many years he knew no other way of attaining his desires, so he thought now to conquer this woman, the first to rise in his path to block it, by his usual harsh methods of procedure.

Before I leave this place tonight I'll many those words or I shall force them from thee!" he said in a choked voice, endeavoring to suppress his passion.

"Stay!" he exclaimed.

Margaret laughed scornfully.

"Force!" she exclaimed, lifting her skirts preparatory to moving away in the opposite direction. "Thou'st established a poor rule to win a woman, good cousin."

She stood before him, maddening in her fearlessness, her contempt of him and her beauty. With his heart full of baffled hope and despair at seeing fair, dire close at hand, to control his desire to spring upon her and by sheer physical strength compel her to promise to marry him he dug his nails into his clinched hands until he almost forced the blood.

Not understanding his strong and passionate nature or indifferent to his suffering, Margaret continued lightly: "Thou'st ever been so generous with thine advice to me, Josiah, that before I go I'll give thee, forsooth, some small counsel in return. Learn, then, that while force may be successful in driving men and animals, fair words, a gallant bearing and loving attentions are shafts that soonest reach a woman's heart."

She moved away.

Josiah sprang toward her, laying a strong, detaining hand on her arm.

"Stay!" he exclaimed. "I would speak further. I trust think I heed thy foolish counsel? 'Tis time thou knew, cousin, that God made woman to serve man, to recognize his better judgment in thankfulness and to bow her head in submission to his will. An thou lindst thy way, Margaret, the world would be ruled by distaffs, an' all would come to ruin."

In the dull hopelessness that took possession of him at the dastardly attitude he now openly expressed on her pale face his voice grew less harsh and his manner slightly entreating as he said, "Mayhap my ways are not as fine and squeamish as those of the wicked worldly men, at heart blackguards, that thou hath met abroad but then would find me true, Margaret, and just, and under my direction thou would soon see the value of my ways and follow the good example I would ever seek to set for thee."

"I want none of thee nor thine examples!" Margaret cried angrily. "And thou must cease thy persecutions! Know now for once and for all that I much mislike thee, that I loathe and hate thee, and that I hope our paths will never cross again!"

"An' thou hast no gratitude, woman, for my service on thine estate, for its present value on account of mine endeavors?"

"Thou hast had the yearly stipend that thou did agree was sufficient," she replied. "Now an' for the last time, let me pass."

Seeing the expression of strength and resolution on her face and her manner so disdainful of him, Josiah sickened as a realization of his absolute inability to control this woman came over him. Almost crazed with despair, he spoke furiously, hardly knowing what he said.

"Hear me once more, an' then thou canst go the downward path thou hast chosen unmolested. The honest purpose of an upright man is as a stench in thy nostrils because, wanton, thou lovest the wicked ways of thy French lover!"

Her blue eyes grew black, then fairly blazed. "Take care!" she said.

Josiah, unheeding, went on sneering: "All the pent up hatred and jealousy in his heart coming out of his white lips in taunting phrases.

"Thy French lover, whose sweet enticing ways and gallant bearing thou doth so much admire—he that was to follow thee anon, to press his suit, wed thee an' live restfully on thine estate, spending thy gold for his pleasure until he died—why cometh he not? Whose arms intwine about him, keeping him away?"

"Will you dare to take care!" Margaret cried in deep anger.

"Where is thy truant lover? Soft hearted fool! Dost think he e'er fared forth from London up those hills to see thee once his eyes fell on the beauty o' the maids of that gay city? It augers me to see thee, my cousin, standing there a deceived woman, defending to an honest man the name of a poltroon, a blackguard and a libertine!"

With a quick motion she raised her hand and gave him a stinging slap across the face. He looked at her for an instant, not comprehending what had happened, with open mouth and staring eyes. Then as a realization of what she had done swept over him blood so angry flew to his head that it maddened him. Springing toward her, he caught her in his arms in a close embrace.

"Thou'lt kiss me where thou struck me," he cried with wild passion, "or else I'll kill thee!"

She rocked and swayed in his embrace.

"Josiah, I loathe thee! Let me go!"

"Then," he said, with gloating in his voice, "if e'er thy gallant courtier lover happen doth give thee thought enough to ride this way I'll make my boasts on thee! So kiss me, wanton, if not for love then for thy life!"

She felt his hot breath on her cheek, saw relentless determination in the steely eyes above her, and, desperately trying to free an arm, felt herself in a vise of iron.

"Godfrey!" she called, now greatly frightened.

"Aye, call him! He'll come anon when he gets a sweep of the maids in London," he panted sneeringly.

Both young and strong, they struggled desperately. Margaret trying to reach his face with her clutching fingers, but he held down her hands and laughed at her haughtily.

"Godfrey, Godfrey!"

Her voice rang out strong and clear through the forest.

"Doth some one call?"

Footsteps were heard running. Josiah loosed his hold slightly, listening.

"'Tis I, Margaret Mayland!"

A man burst through the thicket and, with a sharp exclamation, caught Taunston by the shoulders, swung him round with the strength of a giant and with a well directed blow felled him to the ground, where he lay apparently lifeless.

"Godfrey!"

Margaret, white faced and fainting, was clasped in the embrace of her lover, who, holding her to his heart, looked at the prostrate figure with fierce glances of anger.

"The scoundrel doth move!" La Fabienne drew his sword. "I'll kill him where he lays!"

"Nay, dear Godfrey, have not murder on thy soul," she said trembligly, with soft compelling. "'Tis my cousin, Josiah Taunston, who was but angered that I would not consent to wed with him."

La Fabienne's brow grew dark.

"God's pity! 'Twere not murder to finish that white livered hound! Rather 'twould be a deed of kindness to the world," he answered sternly, sheathing his sword with reluctance. "But to please thee, sweet, an' because I would not have thee shed fresh horrors, I shall not molest him further."

He kissed her face and wound his arm about her in a manner affectionate and protective.

"Come with me, Margaret."

She advanced a step or two, then paused, looking back hesitatingly.

"Say, my love, fear not, but come with me. His kind dieth not so easily."

As the last sound of their voices died on the breeze Josiah Taunston, his face livid, with blood dropping from his nostrils, staggered to his feet and, clinging to a tree for support, glanced with wild eyes of hatred in the direction the lovers had taken.

"So, bo, thou hast arrived!" he panted with quick drawn breath. "Fool, thou didst not die, but art here i' the flesh to use thy persuasions with my cousin against me an' my rightful claims! Insistence an' firmness, had ye not come, would have i' the long run won her, an' the farm lands would have been mine."

He stood erect, endeavoring to stanch the flow of blood and muttering promises and threats to himself.

"But with that woman dangler's arms about her, Josiah Taunston, thou hast no hope of Margaret Mayland now! So, bo, thou must use thy brain with subtle skill to smooth this complication out!"

Pausing to go, he paused, shaking his finger in the direction they had taken, a sinister, wicked expression spreading over his drawn features.

"Happen now if matters fall out not to thy liking, Mistress Mayland, thou'lt recall to mind too late that I offered thee the best a man could offer kindly and in a good spirit until thou didst anger me beyond control. Thou didst flout me an' left me stunned an' bleeding—for all thy knowledge dead—to walk away with thy choice. Fair words, a gallant bearing an' loving attentions,'" he sneered, then shook his finger menacingly. "Thou hast them now, an', forsooth, something more that thou wot not of—an enemy, a man whose word will be taken here on all accounts an' who can bring thee into much disfavor; one who would have loved thee, but who now hates thee. Thou'lt live to regret this night, mistress, and I to remember it!"

Then he laughed a harsh, grating, mirthless laugh, and, turning suddenly, groped his way down the path that led to the village.

CHAPTER X.

JUST out of the forest on a flat rock that topped a rising eminence of land stood Margaret Mayland by the side of her lover, who, taller than she, bent his dark eyes softly upon her face, reflecting in them the happiness shining so brightly in her own. Twilight had now withdrawn the last gray shadows from the earth, and night, warm, black and clear, with soft breezes stirring and the air heavy with the sweet redolence of wild flowers, fell on the mountain gently. Gradually the stars came out, first one at a time, timidly; then, as if gathering courage from addel numbers, they shone forth rapidly until the black arch of the heavens was a spectacle of dazzling brilliance.

Margaret, with happy confidence, stood close to her lover, who, with one arm thrown about her, stroked her soft hair caressingly. The stars with added luster sparkled in cheerful radiance, the full moon rode higher, the died away, and the hour was one of tiutense peacefulness. Suddenly from the direction of the village came the loud, unearthly sounds of the baying and howling of a dog—long, loud and, to the superstitious, ominous howls—but Margaret and La Fabienne, entirely engrossed in each other, talked on happily, unheeding aught but the sound of their own voices and the joy of being together.

"An' so thou hadst the fever with no hands but those of strangers to tend thee?" Margaret was saying sorrowfully. "Tell me, Godfrey, more fully of thy miserable experiences."

"Would but pain thee, sweet."

"Nay, I would bear the fullest account," Margaret insisted. "Thou and good Gaston came to a house where there was a maid—continue, dear Godfrey."

"Much blame do I take to myself for my carelessness, heart's love," La Fabienne replied, "but for the nonce my anxiety to be with thee put caution and heedfulness out of my mind. As I was telling thee, we came safely to a house below the fork in the mountain where the two roads lead in opposite directions. At first methought to continue our way on the defile winding upward to Sour right, but, glancing at the two dark, craggy roads, difficult of ascent and steep, and realizing what a dire mishap it would be to wend our way on the wrong one, I asked for right direction from a maid at the cottage. Either from ignorance or a desire for mischief she said that Cragenstone lay at the end of the road leading to the left. So, trusting absolutely to her knowledge of the country hereabout, we fared forth on our journey."

"An' did thou meet no person to tell thee of thine error?" Margaret inquired, with gentle sympathy.

"Marry! Not one soul except a poor lad of vacant mind who mouthed and chattered at us as we passed," he replied. "Soon the drizzling dampness changed to steady rain that fell harder and heavier as we progressed, until at last it came down in great sheets of water, blinding our vision, washing rocks and gravel down the rough and dangerous path and almost sweeping our horses off their feet. Such an awful mountain storm, such cloudbursts, we had ne'er seen in France. Brave Gaston was struck with terror, declared we would be lost and entreated me to turn our horses' heads, but I, disregarding him, pressed forward, knowing that thou were expecting me, and myself seething with impatience to hold thee in mine arms."

He paused a moment, looking intently from his high eyrie into the dark valley below him, Margaret's upturned face regarding his with anxious interest.

"What then, Godfrey?"

MR. WILLIAM ALLEN

Passed peacefully away on Monday forenoon, 21st Aug., after an illness of a little over a week, at the advanced age of eighty-two years, that being the anniversary of his birth. The sad incident of his lying all night on his wife's grave, published last week, no doubt contributed to his hasty demise, as previous to that Mr. Allen was apparently hale and rugged, and good for half a score years more at least. Mr. Allen was a native of County Derry, Ireland, was married in the year 1845, and came direct to Napanee, where he resided continuously until his death. Mrs. Allen, a worthy wife and mother, died four years ago. Mr. Allen was a member of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, and on arrival in Napanee united himself with the congregation here. During all these years he was a faithful and consistent christian, and for nearly half a century an elder of the local congregation. His kindly disposition and straightforward manly character endeared him to all, and his name will long be cherished as a just and upright man.

Mr. Allen was a carpenter, and from the time of his arrival in Napanee until a few years ago, was in the employ of the late John Herring & Sons. THE ARROWS OF TRUTH

USED WITH DRAMATIC EFFECT AGAINST PREVALENT VICE.

"FULL OF DEADLY POISON."

Inspired Verbal Utterance Against the Sin of Slander In Business and Social Life—One Thing That No Man Can Tame — The Tongue, and Its Varied and Infinite Capacity For Making Mischief.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year one thousand nine hundred and five, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 20.—In the sermon the preacher rebuke a the prevalent vice of loose and censorious utterance, and especially of slander in business and social life. The text is James iii, 8, "Full of deadly poison."

Never did inspired writer flatter his verbal arrows of truth with more dramatic comparisons than the author of my text. He seems to take us out to the corral of an eastern Bedouin chief. Methinks I see the leader of this nomad tribe looking over his herd of fine limbed, high spirited, mettlesome thoroughbreds. Then he turns to one of his men and says: "John, I think we will bridle yonder colt to-day and break her to the saddle." "Aye," answers the man. "That is sometime said than done. Never did we have a higher strung, more wild fingered beast than that colt. She will kick and bite and snort and foam at the mouth whenever you come near her." "Is that so?" answered the chief. "Then the sooner we break her the better."

I see the rope flung over the colt's neck. I see her attempt to kick and bite the hand that puts the bit into her mouth and the saddle upon her back. I see her eyes flash. I see her rear, plunge and roll on the ground and afterward bolt, and for miles run away over the hills. Then I see her brought subdued until at last that nomad chief—makes her his pet riding mare. I see her finally under perfect control, like John's mighty war horse, smelling the battle from afar, and as I see all this transformation the author of my text says, "Behold, we put bits in the horses' mouths that they may obey us, and we turn about their whole body." * * but the tongue can no man tame."

Then the author places upon the deck of one of the Alexandrian corn ships. He pictures one of those awful Mediterranean euroclydons that played such havoc with the shipping of old, and which destroys so many ships of the present day. The sails are whipped into shreds. But though that ship is tossing about in the mighty waves billows, yet she is under complete control of the steersman, who, with his little hand, moves the rudder to the right or to the left. Then the author of my text says: "Behold also the ships, which though they may be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth * * * but the tongue no man can tame."

Then he takes us away up in the mountains. He gathers together a few dried grasses and strikes a spark and ignites them. No sooner are the grasses afire than the evening winds fan them into a great conflagration, which sets all the forests of those mountains ablaze. Aye, for nights you can see them burning, as we have seen the mountain fires burning up in the Adirondacks or upon the Berkshire hills. Then he says: "The tongue is a little member." It is almost as insignificant looking as a small spark. But "behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth." The damage which the tongue or the spark can do is infinite. Then he compares the evils of the tongue to the awful ravages of physical disease — to those of hideous leprosy or cholera or the bubonic plague—"It defileth the whole body." Then, in the four words of my text, he compares the evil tongue of man to the poisonous fangs of a hissing serpent. The reason I have drawn for you all these different comparisons, is in connection with the subsequent text of my text, is this: I want you to know that no symbol is too demoniac, no comparison is too destructive or too repulsive for the author to cite as a criterion by which to judge the fatal effects of the human tongue, when it is evil. May God help me to-day to show you some of the dark dens and caverns in which this evil tongue of man, as a serpent's fangs, hides itself, and where it is most able to strike its deadly poison into the flesh and hearts of its helpless victims.

The evil tongue of man, in the first place, is a vindictive tongue. It has stored up among its deadly poisons the accumulated malice, not only of days, but of weeks and months and years. Like the Dutchman's watch, full of old, it never forgets a supposed injury which some one has done against it. It will go out for days, a hundred miles, a thousand miles, aye, it will stealthily lie in wait for years, to get a suitable opportunity to strike. It is not like an ordinary snake, which in like way, lies along and waits to spring upon it, but it is like a panther stalking its prey. It is like a hound on the track of a deer. It is like a lioness following the man who has robbed her of her whelps. It will pursue a supposed enemy for miles and miles, and for years and years, always seeking the right moment when it can bury its fangs in the hearts of its foes. And when that time comes, like Shylock, it will always strike for the vital portion of flesh nearest to the beating heart. Oh, the abject mercilessness of a vindictive tongue! You well know its unforgiving, relentless nature; for it may be that such a vindictive tongue has been following you for years.

It may have pursued you, a minister, for a quarter of a century. Then you took your first church you found the choir loft in the viselike grip of an elder. One of his daughters was the organist. Another daughter sang as the soprano. A future son-in-law is the tenor. The music was an utter failure. What were you to do? You could no more sing those anthems to God without good music than you could run it without the right kind of preaching. One day, in a state of desperation, you called your church officers together and demanded a complete change in your musical leadership. Then and there you got it at the cost of that elder's unrelenting hate. He never ceased to persecute you. He did everything he could to undermine your ministry. He pursued you even after you left his church. He wrote letters to distant cities against you. As the vendetta is carried on for generation after generation in certain families in southern Europe, so the children of that old elder are still pursuing you. Their hatred has never let up, although their father has now been dead for years.

My friend, I sympathize with you in that persecution. You say you do not bear your persecutors any ill will, for you have triumphed over their attacks. But as you were once persecuted as a young man, now as a well established merchant or lawyer or doctor, or preacher or wife or mother be careful that you are not yourself using one of those poisonous and vindictive tongues. I once read of a venomous cobra of India having been decapitated. The people were standing around looking at the headless snake a native reached forth his bare foot and touched it with it. No sooner did his foot touch the opened mouth of the snake than, by muscular contraction, the headless fangs pierced the bare foot, and in one hour the man was dead. Has not the poisonous fang of hate, of a long list some of yours, many years dead, entered into your life? Why did you make that threat remark about that doctor, lawyer or minister or merchant the other day? Why did you slur that young man's character that you were so hard to earn a livelihood for his widowed mother or younger brothers? As others in the past have buried their poisonous fangs of hateful jealousy in your heart are you not burying yours into others who seem to come between you and your success? Men, beware how you try to destroy your fellowmen by vials! Women, beware how you attack that young woman! Her good name is her life. Hate and slander kill. Others have wronged you with a vindictive tongue. Do not retaliate, do not use the same poisonous fangs. Let your evil tongue try to destroy others when you feel they are making a success by the depletion of your own income.

But as I begin to analyze the poison of the evil tongue I find that it is composed many different sinful basic elements. Water, for instance, is composed of a gas called hydrogen, and another gas called oxygen. Chemically, the definition of water is H2O. Sodium sulphate is composed of three different basic elements. Its component parts are sodium, sulphur and oxygen. Chemically, it is written Na2, SO4. Now, as I analyze in God's great laboratory the poison of the "evil tongue," I find it first composed of the element of hate, and, secondly, of the element of falsehood. All through the Bible, the deceitful tongue is condemned by God. The deceitful tongue of man should be condemned by man. Yet to day there are many professional men and many professional building up their practices or businesses upon a tissue of lies.

A prominent physician once confided under my observation, when, many years ago, I was preaching in an eastern city. One of our church members was taken down with lung trouble and had to go to Arizona to live. While there, his little daughter, also became very sick with heart trouble. The mother brought her back home. The father telegraphed me to look after them. But at once went to my family physician, one of the most eminent in the city, and had him examine the child. He looked the little girl carefully over, and this was his diagnosis: "She has valvular trouble of the heart in its most fatal form. She may live a year, but in all probability she will die in about six months. Within a few weeks drop by will see in, then she will have to be tapped. The best thing you can do is to make her as comfortable as possible, for she cannot get well." I wrote to the father the result. At once he came home and sent for another doctor. This other physician came in and said, "I can cure her if you will give me full charge of the case." That physician knew he could not cure her. Death had written its fatal mark all over that child, but because that other physician said he could cure the child the new doctor became the attending physician. He called twice a day for six weeks and the child grew worse and worse, just as my family physician said she would. Then she died, as he had predicted. But on account of that false hope which the other physician held out, he was able to get the father's money to secure the fee.

In business as well as in professional life men are guilty of "the lying tongue." They lie about land they want to sell. They lie about anything they want to rent; they lie about their stock; they lie about their furniture stores; they lie about their real estate; they lie about everything they desire to get rid of. They keep up the lying in business way just as Ananias and Solomon had never hurled his condemnation against business liars when he wrote these terrible words: "The getting of treasures by a lying tongue is vanity, tossed to and fro of those that seek death. The robber of the wicked shall destroy them because they refuse to do judgment." O God, deliver us to-day from being merchants who are perjurers or lawyers who are deceivers or physicians who are falsifiers or men trying to sell their goods by degrading their fellow men. O God, deliver us from the falsifier's doom: "For without are dogs and sorcerers and whoremongers and murderers and idolaters and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie."

But the evil tongue of man is also a vile tongue. Vile in the sense that it is filled with an unclean mouth. Vile because the lewd, the corrupt, the filthy, the defiled, the debased, the impure, have now also a vile type of vile language in which it glories. Vile in the sense that the stories and the communications it speaks are often unfit for respectable ears. Yet its corrupt conversations are not only heard in the notorious places of evil resort but they are also heard in the street and in so called respectable homes and among so-called ladies as well as so-called gentlemen.

But, the vindictive tongue and the lying tongue and the vile tongue is also the blasphemous tongue. When a man of one talent in the Bible went and hid his talent in the earth he immediately commenced to put the responsibility on God. When you and I do wrong and continue to do wrong, at once our evil tongues begin to find fault with the God who created us, and with the Christ who wants to redeem us. One of the worst signs that your tongue is an evil tongue is when it begins to talk about God as a cruel God, a merciless God, a vindictive God and a heartless God. The vindictive tongue, the lying tongue, the lewd tongue, almost inevitably becomes the blasphemous tongue.

But I cannot close this line of my talk without declaring that the blasphemous tongue inevitably becomes the tongue of a human beast of carrion. Like the vulture it can get out of touch with God he inevitably acquires a depraved likes of the human race. Like the buzzard while circles almost in the heavens over the hills and the valleys and the prairies of southern California waiting for the horse or the cow or the sheep to drop dead in his tracks that he may pounce upon it, so the evil tongue of man seems to glory in the banquet of dead reputations, of evil reports and of debasing rumors which all the firm that men and women have gone astray and become as bad as or even worse than ourselves.

No example of the evil tongue is more sinfully suggestive than when a party of men and women get together to discuss the overthrow of a fellow man. Have you heard the news?" asks one evil tongue. "No," answers another evil tongue. "Tell it to me. What is it?" "Why, you know Mrs. Sweetpea, the daughter of our pastor. Well, she is being sued for divorce by her husband." "Is that so? Well, I never! It would come! I never did like her father. He always pretended to be so good that that I felt there was something wrong about him. If that father had only lived as good a life as he pretended to live, his daughter would not have turned out as she did. Good for him! I never did like that daughter anyhow. She always thought she was better than any one else, and now to think she is nothing but a hypocrite!"

But, though man cannot tame his sinful tongue, thank God, the Lord God will tame it, and will save it by the power of the Holy Spirit if it will only let him. He will make the vindictive tongue the tongue of forgiveness; the tongue of vileness the pure tongue; the tongue of deceit the truthful tongue; the tongue of lies the tongue of love and the tongue of gentleness?

"But," says some one, "how can God make this change?" I do not know how it is done, but I do know he can do it and he will do it, if you will only talk with him and ask his help. He can change your evil tongue in the same way that your Christian mother used to change it. You remember, when you took her to your boyhood life, how angry you used to get, how you would lose control of your passions, how you would use some of the vilest words that ever fell from your lips. Your hand was lowered. Then you burst into tears as you said, "Mother! Oh, mother! Forgive me, mother!" So with this evil tongue of ours. If we only use it to pour out our desires into his ear, instead of being the organ of hate and or blasphemy, it will become the organ of kindness, the organ of gentleness and forgiveness, and mercy and love. Oh, my friends, will you not let God do for you to-day your evil tongue?

Would that this daily habit of talking with God might become ours! I once read of a mother who tried to keep the evil tongue scattering its pots on by her fireside by writing down, day after day, every evil saying which she heard her children speak. Then, the evening hour, she would read to her family the evil words of the day. That may be one way to halt the evil habit of a sinful tongue, but I believe the best way to conquer the tongues evil deeds is not to make a record of its faults and errors, but to get our tongues in the habit, every hood of every day of having private conversation with God. When we are about to do wrong, or we should life up our voices involuntarily and say, "Lord, would you like me to do this?" When we are about to say something we should say, "Lord, shall I say this?" When we are about to rebuke a brother, we should say, "Lord, would you rebuke this evil deed?" Then, with the close touch of our tongues with God's ear, God's tongue will become our tongue. Lord God Almighty, may we never tire of talking with thee! In Christ's name, we ask these few words our speech, and then we know thou shalt rule our lives. Tame them, O God! Tame our evil tongues for thy divine service.

The Canny Scot.

In an English railway compartment two travelers were seated, an American and a keen-eyed old Scotchman.

When the guard came to collect the tickets the latter had great difficulty in locating his. He kept the others waiting a long while by rummaged through his many pockets that the ticket-collector, at last, in a way, saying he would come back to find out the result of the search.

When the guard had gone the American saw the lost piece of pasteboard protruding from the old fellow's mouth and, seeing nothing to be gained by telling it was a case of absentmindedness.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?

Let your morning urine stand for 24 hours in a glass or vessel, and then if it is milky or cloudy, or contains a reddish brick-dust sediment, or if particles or germs float about in it, your kidneys are diseased. If the kidneys are well they filter just so much blood, but if they are sick or weak from any cause, they leave the poison in the blood, and this poison affects the entire system.

It is natural to pass urine three times a day, but many who regard themselves as healthy are obliged to pass water six to ten times during the day and obliged to get up frequently during the night. They have sick kidneys and bladder and don't know it. Smith's Bichu Lithia Pills cure Rheumatism and all Kidney and Bladder diseases, and make new, rich blood.

We will send you a generous sample post paid Free, together with our large book on the above diseases. Address, W. P. Smith Co., 185 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.

A MODERN MEDICINE

DR. Williams' Pink Pills Cure Disease Through The Blood.

Medicines of the old fashioned kind will sometimes relieve the symptoms of disease, though they can never touch the disease itself—they never cure. Ordinary medicines act behind the scenes, and only relieve the biliousness and headache; purgatives leave the patient feverish and weakened. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, on the other hand, go direct to the body, blood and nerves. They, till the veins with new, rich, red blood; they brace the nerves; they drive out disease by going right to the root of the trouble. That they always do good they cannot possibly do harm. Mrs. Geo. Henley, Bexgrove, Ont., says:—"It is with pleasure that I tell you that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured me after my doctor had said I could not be cured. I suffered from an almost constant fluttering of the heart, and sometimes severe pains. The least exertion would leave me breathless and tired out. My appetite was poor, and my head ached nearly all the time. I had lost all ambition to do my work, and felt very hopeless. I had taken a great deal of medicine without any benefit, until I was advised by a friend to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These have made a remarkable change in my condition, and I am feeling better than I have done for years. I strongly recommend them in the hope that it will benefit others."

Now Dr. Williams' Pink Pills build up strength in this way and that is why they cure in just one way—they actually make new blood. That is all they do, but they do it well. They don't act on the bowels or they don't bother with mere symptoms. They go right to the root of the trouble in the bloor. That is why these pills cure anaemia, headache, heart palpitation, indigestion, kidney trouble, rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, paralysis, general weakness and the special ailments of growing girls and women. But you must have the genuine with the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure persistent backache, which must be strengthened before it can be cured. Dodd's Kidney Pills do not merely relieve backache, they cure it, and make the kidneys so strong, so healthy, so vigorous that they can withstand any strain put upon them. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only kidney medicine in the world that filters the blood. That is why they cure Bright's disease, diabetes, dropsy, gravel, rheumatism, backache, kidney and bladder troubles. Mr. Alex. Now is the Time to Get Well.

NATURE HELPS MI-O-NA CURE STOMACH TROUBLES IN SHORT ORDER.

The summer months are the best in the whole year for those troubled with weak stomach troubles. The out-door life, with natural exercise, the fruit and berries which are so freely eaten help to restart healing action to the digestive organs.

Now when Nature will aid Mi-o-na in curing indigestion and giving strength to the stomach and whole digestive system, is the best time to use this remarkable remedy.

Taken before each meal, Mi-o-na will soothe and heal the inflamed and irritated lining of the stomach and scale-pepsine, and strengthen the nerves of the digestive tract. Mi-o-na at all times of the year, cures all stomach troubles, excepting cancer, but in the summer months it gives health and strength twice as quickly.

If you suffer with headaches, indigestion, flatulency, specks before the eyes, fermentation, heart burn, dizziness, or have a variable appetite, and a general feeling of despondency or weariness, it shows clearly that the stomach is not digesting the food as it should. Instead of the food being assimilated and making rich, red blood and good solid flesh and muscle, it is turned in the stomach into a sour, slimy fermenting mass that causes gases, distress after eating, and poisonous germs that fill the whole body with poor health.

Just one little tablet out of 50 cents of Mi-o-na for a few days, and all this will be changed for the better, and health restored. Ask at Wallace's Red Cross Drug Store to give you the Mi-o-na guarantee.

Campers still continue to seek the neighborhood of Beaver Lake as a result of the good reports of the leading centres such as Toronto and Rochester are represented.

Mrs. Singleton and daughter Virginia, and Miss Annie Marsh, all of Detroit, are guests at the Commercial House. Mr. Richard Mahaffy proprietor.

Miss Kate Burns, of Watertown, N.Y., is here on a visit to her parents, Mr. Michael Burns and family, of this place.

Mrs. Gillen, of Madoc, is at present the guest of Mrs. Wm. Hopkins, of this village.

A number of our young people and others attended the Centreville picnic on Wednesday.

The great social event of the past week was the marriage of Mr. Wm. Wilson, of Deseronto, and Miss Tessie Kilborn of the parish of Ernesville. The bride was assisted by Miss Wilson, sister of the groom, while Mr. J. Kilborn, brother of the bride, acted as the groom. The happy couple took the afternoon train on a wedding trip to Ottawa and other points.

Mrs. Thos. Gaffney spent a few days last week at the home of her father, Mr. Joseph Hudian, of East Hungerford.

One of the saddest events which has occurred in this vicinity for some time is the death of Miss Minnie Donahue, which took place on Friday, the 18th inst., at the home of her mother. The deceased young lady, who was only twenty-two or three years of age, was the eldest daughter of the late Thos. Donahue. She had recently been in the employment of Messrs. Grant scallen & Wagar, of Tamworth, as clerk in their store. Her early demise is universally regretted inasmuch as she seem to have been a favorite with all.

The Separate School, which has been under the able management of Miss Jordan, of Westport, assisted by Mrs. Hopkins, of this place, during the first half of the present year, will open again for the fall term on Monday, 21st. A fact which is encouraging to Miss Jordan and her assistant, and no doubt will stimulate them to still greater efforts, is that all the candidates sent up by them in the recent entrance examination were successful in passing.

Mrs. Frank Brennan, of Deseronto, arrived on the afternoon train yesterday on a visit to her brother and sister, Mr. Peter Hogan and Miss Agnes Hogan, of this vicinity.

The Ernesville branch of the C.M.B.A. held their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday evening, 17th inst.

Our young people are anxiously looking forward to the Ernesville picnic on Wednesday, 30th inst.

Dr. McDonough and family, of Toronto, are once more summering in this vicinity. "

CENTREVILLE.

For last week.

The ball is smarter, more active, and Mr. R. W. Saul has sent for a date stone to be set in the stone work.

The R. C. picnic held in Mrs. Evan's grove, proved to be a great success, and passed off quietly. The feature of the day was the baseball match between Yarker and Marlbank. The teams lined up as follows:

Yarker.		Marlbank.
H. Montgomery	p.	J. Coughlin	p.
C. Shultz	c.	A. Killey	c.
M. Warner	1st b.	W. Young	1st b.
W. Dunn	2d b.	A. Martin	2d b.
H. Martin	3d b.	J. Killey	3d b.
R. Woodhouse	ss.	A. Kelleher	ss.
B. Doxer	r.f.	——Holmes	r.f.
F. Purcell	c.f.	R. Carter	c.f.
P. Edgar	l.f.	V. McNeil	l.f.

Score by innings — 1 2 3 4 1 5 6 7 8 9

Yarker	1	0	2	2	0	3	0	1	3	13
Marlbank	2	1	2	0	0	1	0	0	2	8

Both teams played in good earnest, but Marlbank was hands-upped by being forced to take an score men, who were out of practice, and The Yarker battery was very efficient, which is shown by the fact that they struck out fourteen men. The game throughout was interesting, as were also the other sports. All the visitors of amusement were well patronized, and the day passed pleasantly.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Hinch spent Sunday and Monday at Beaver Lake.

Mr. Blake Connolly, Kingston, spent the week at home.

Miss Myrtle McGill was successful at her mid-summer examinations in Napanee.

The Methodist Sunday School held their annual picnic at Donoghues grove, on the 17th inst.

PRESCRIPTION DRUG STORE

Wallace's Drug Store is a prescription drug store. The highest quality of every drug is used in this establishment.

WHY WE RECOMMEND

"HECLA" FURNACES

Because they are made by Clare Bros. & Co., of Preston. That's the best guarantee of quality we know of.

Because they have fused joints, instead of being bolted or cemented together. Fused joints make Hecla Furnaces smoke tight and gas-tight.

Because they consume less fuel for the heat they give out.

Because they have special grates for soft coal and wood.

Because—well, there are a dozen good reasons why we think Hecla Furnaces are best.

Come in and let us go over them together.

A MORNING PRAYER.

Father, as from my humble cot
I rise this glorious morn,
To bless my life, my lowly lot
With Heavenly love adorn.
I pray thee not for wealth or fame,
But when the day is done,
That I can say in thy dear name
I'm one day nearer home.

And when my last earth day shall come,
My trials all are o'er,
Oh may I see the Healing Sun
Beyond death's cold dark shore.

ARDEN.

Since last writing the Prentice Hoss have celebrated the 12th of August. A large crowd assembled, and the day passed off commendably, when considering the amount of drinking that was indulged in, though not as quietly as the 12th usually.

A party of seven from Binghamton, N.Y., are camped on Buck Lake, west of the village, having driven here. At present there is the Centenary Methodist church, and Rev. Dr. Hendry, of the Tabernacle, Toronto, is preached morning and evening at Arden, and all were delighted with his discourses. Mr. H. Burns, a singing evangelist, another member of the party and well known here, preached on Sunday evening, 13th inst., to a large and good profit of his old friends.

Mr. A. C. Huffman returned on Friday evening last from an extended trip to the Plevna and Vennachar mission fields, looking after the interests of the Methodist church there being no man as yet sent to either field.

Mr. Rev. A. C. Huffman left Monday to visit friends at Roblin, Newburgh and Napanee.

The guests at present at the Lakeview Inn are Mr. and Mrs. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Sims and Miss Currie, Toronto; Mrs. Goldrup, London.

Mr. Fake, of Binghamton, is a guest of Mrs. Lake.

The home of Mr. Jacob Palmateer, of Mt. Vale, has been destroyed by fire.

Mrs. Dennison, of Montreal, is visiting her parents here.

Mrs. Wilbur Wartman, Colebrooke, and Mrs. Hendley Moscow, spent the day with Mrs. Fenton at the Methodist parsonage.

Much sympathy is felt for Rev. Mr. Fenton in his severe affliction.

RADIANT WOMANHOOD.

The glory and satisfaction of beautiful womanhood can be known only to those possessing the unlimited ad-antages of health. No weak woman can be happy or enjoy half the pleasures of life. Pale cheeks, sunken eyes, ta-ptalized nerves, tell tell of a terrible struggle to keep up. What the weak woman needs is Ferrozone. It gives it, restores and vitalizes instantly—it's a "woman's remedy."—Sold by all.

Ferrozone makes women strong, plump and healthful because it contains the kind of nutriment, the kind that forms muscle, sinew, bone and nerve. Vitalizing blood courses through the body, bringing delightful color, happy spirits, true womanly strength. Fifty cents per box at Ferrozone in any drug store.

THE NEW FASHIONS IN SKIRTS.

"The closest attention must be paid to the fitting of the present-day skirt, whether it be short or long," writes Helen Berkeley-Loyd in the September Delineator, "for a false line about the hips is a defect that cannot be concealed. The new short skirt is a bit shorter than we have recently seen it; hence the shoes and hosiery worn with it must be of high grade, corresponding with each other and with the gown to which they belong. Kilting continues popular; the kilts growing narrower and more accurately plaited more carefully to the hips. The French models show much shirring, and in response the American dressmakers are introducing gores gathered or shaped into the waistband, instead of plaits. The newest modification of the fashionable circular skirt has a bias effect in the front and at the sides and full plaits in the back. It is also marked by the reveled graduated flounce. The tailored gown the line of union is left plain, or else it is emphasized by a shaped fold finished with fine cord. Occasionally this fold is built up in a sort of ladder-work of narrow bands of cloth or of rows of soutache dyed to match the goods. There are strong indications that the gore front will presently be revived, and some of the most jealously guarded institutions show a still more daring innovation in the lines of the skirt. For example, a chiffon velvet gown in cut-strawberry color has its front gore laid in shallow but unmistakable drapery folds, just below the belt and parallel with the edges. Other examples of these drapery curves disappear beneath the narrow box-plaits in the adjoining gores.

If your children moan and are restless during sleep, coupled, when awake, with a loss of appetite, pale countenance, picking of the nose, etc., you may depend upon it that the primary cause of the trouble is worms. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator effectually removes these pests, at once relieving the little sufferers.

Keep the Pickles Cool.

A current shelf is advisable wherever pickles and preserves are stored. The rays of the sun should not penetrate, and too much light may be mitigated by wrapping the jars round with newspapers.

For Little Folks.

For a little girl is fashioned a frock with a long bodice pouching over a skirt formed by two closely pleated frills inset with insertion. About the shoulders there falls a collar of white tucked muslin and lace that resolves into a round bertha inset with bold motifs of lace.

Another most persuasive white muslin frock provided for a girl of twelve is trimmed with alencon lace. The effect of this frock is commendably simple, the enlivening touch occurring in a handsome sash of pink faille ribbon.

There is not another range built in which the heat may be regulated so that you can bake in the oven and cook on the top at the same time without spoiling one or the other.

But you can do both equally well at the same time on the Pandora, because its heat is not wasted and is at all times under the simplest, most positive control.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

First Shoe Store Clerk—Women are so extravagant.

Second Ditto—That's right. A woman came in yesterday and said she wanted a shoe that was both comfortable and stylish.

Very many persons die annually from chronic and kindred summer complaints who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used at the first dose. Do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it rely on it as being prompt, and thoroughly subdues the rankest disease.

"You say he is a financial wreck. Then why is it that he appears so large?"

"Well, I guess his credit's so poor that he can't even borrow trouble."

Little Edgar—Pa, what's meant all where my umbrella go. I left one in the rack last night, and now it's gone.

Willie—Ater's beau has got it.

Ater—Why, Willie, the idea!

Willie—Well, last night when he was going home I heard him say that he was only going to bear last one.

It Needs No Testimonial—It is a guarantee in itself. If testimonials were required they could be furnished by thousands from all sorts and conditions of men in widely different places. Many medicines are put forth every year which have but a brief, useless existence and then are heard of no more. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has grown in regularity every day since it first made its appearance, by lady love is perfect quite.

Her hair is brown, her eyes the same.

Her disposition's sweet and bright;
There's naught I'd change — except her name.

They Drive Pimples Away. — A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples come to let you know that the blood, prompted by Dr. Hamilton's Pills, is to drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be known witness to their excellence.

"I suppose, madam," said the architect, "you will want an electrolier put in the drawing room?"

"Sure," answered Mrs. Neurich, "I don't know how to play one, but I'll begin taking lessons at once, regardless of cost."

For Inflammation of the Eyes. — Among the many good qualities which Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil possesses, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth numerous letters of recognition from those who were afflicted with sore eyes, and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a healthful, natural way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

"There's only one way to tie sore of a good cook?"

"Well, what is that?"

"Marry her."

Thos. Sabin, of Hillsdon, says, "I have removed ten corns from my feet with Holloway's Corn Cure." Readers, go thou and do likewise.

Little Alice, who had been sent on an errand, returned rather hurriedly. She called out to her mother:

"Oh, mamma, what do you think? A little girl has come to our house, and she's new because she had lost some money and was crying. I gave her some gooseple thunded, but I didn't."

"And why did you, you laugh, my dear?" asked the mother.

"Because," she said, while the child, with trembling lip, measure the little girl was me."

"Now, this, Jamsey," said Flannery to his wife one morning, "me boy says bed-typhoid. Dye mind how I helped ye?"

"I guess I do!" replied Jamsey.

"Well, now, I want nawthin' from ye but a good Sayvior, an' very little of that."

ADDITIONS TO THE FLEET.

Messrs. Smith and Spencer launched their trim little gasoline launch on Tuesday evening. Mr. Smith is to be congratulated on the excellent model turned out. The hull of the boat has the appearance of being carved out of one piece of wood, and really looks too nice to get in the water.

Mr. W. C. Smith has purchased a 26-foot gasoline launch. He has also built a boat house just south of the elevator.

Another gasoline launch has been added to the local fleet. Mr. F. J. Miller purchased a 35-footer from Mr. Hanbury, Kingston. The boat has a speed of ten miles an hour, and is equipped with four cylinders.

The local fleet of steam, gasoline and sailing yachts is getting to be quite a large one.

For last week.

Quite a severe electric storm passed over this section on Thursday morning. During the storm Mr. Pagden's Wilson's house was struck, considerable damage being done. Mrs. Thomas Hinchey had a narrow escape, the bedroom occupied by her suffering from the effects most. It made its exit through the woodhouse, setting fire to the oil can there, and but for Mr. Edwin Wilson, the whole house might have been destroyed. He managed by lashing on water, to get the fire under control, before the neighbors arrived, and saved it. Mr. Pagden was on the spot soon after the alarm was given. We have one of the best hearted men right here, they won't see their neighbors in trouble without lending a helping hand.

The Anglican Sunday Schools of Newburgh and Camden East held their picnic at Varty Lake on Friday. A very pleasant time was spent and the outing thoroughly enjoyed. The feature of the day's enjoyment was a baseball match, in which the ladies figured, assisted by some of the male ball tossers. One of the prize winning balls was put in use, but when the boy who had won it desired to carry home his prize in triumph, a ball with more bounce in it was put in play. Spaulding's rules were disregarded, the ladies running on a fast but, provided it was a good one. If a runner started for first base before the ball was in the act of being batted out, she changed her mind and took another try with the willow. When your scribe asked if there were any home runs made, one of the ladies replied "Oh, yes, I made lots of runs, but I didn't make them all at once." The score was 44-33. The teams were: Winners—R. Bowman, c.; Mrs. W. Sutton, p.; Mrs. Lemmon, ib.; Miss M. Galbraith, 2b.; Miss E. Robinson, s.s.; Mrs. J. J. Shorey, 3b. Losers—William Price, c.; James Shorey, p.; Miss Robinson, 1b.; Miss Ethel Galbraith, 2b; Miss Eva Shorey, s.s.; Elgin McWilliams, 3b.; Miss Edgar, r.f.; Miss D. Galbraith, c.f.

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL
The Inventor of the Telephone

Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, comes from a family that has made a special study of sound and speech for three generations. His grandfather, Alexander Bell, invented means for overcoming impediments of speech; his father, Alexander Melville Bell, was the inventor of the "visible speech," a system to teach deaf-mutes to speak; and the third of the Alexanders, really "Alexander the Great" of his family, taught a piece of wire to carry the human voice many miles and deliver the message without a change.

He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1847, and after receiving his education at the High School and the University of his native town, went to London and for a time continued to attend the University, but left on account of ill health, and in 1870 came to Canada with his father. Two years later he went to Boston, where he introduced his father's system of teaching the deaf, and subsequently himself by private classes. But the broader field of science attracted him most; in England and Canada he had carried on experiments in multiplex telegraphy which grew more fascinating as he progressed, and in Boston he interested two wealthy men who supplied funds for his experiments; but he had to teach by day for his own support.

In 1874 came the first faint elusive germ of the telephone; it seemed such a will-o'-the-wisp to his partners that they would not listen to it; they were practical men with no time for such dreams. In 1875, after completing his multiplex telegraphy, he went to Washington and found his application for a patent had been contested by Elisha Gray, the great scientist. He was in despair, but while talking to Professor Henry, he mentioned his theory of sending sound by telegraph, and the few kindly words of encouragement he received, breathed into him new life and purpose.

He returned to Boston with a giant's energy but an almost empty purse. To complicate the situation he had fallen in love with Miss Hubbard, daughter of his friend and benefactor, and had a feeling of delicacy about asking the father of his fiancée for a loan. So in desperation he renewed the struggle, and in June, 1875, almost by accident, stumbled on a clew that solved the problem. On February 14th, 1876, he filed his application for a patent; one hour later Elisha Gray filed a caveat on precisely the same plan, and on March 7th, 1876, Mr. Bell received his patent; it was number 174,465, one of the most important ever allowed in the history of America.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by W. C. Black, at the Department of Agriculture.

A Husband's Opinion of

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets For WOMEN

A cross and nervous woman is not a pleasant one to live with.

Husbands know this. But in nine cases out of ten, women are cross and irritable because they are not well.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets transform cross and irritable wives into bright, pleasant women.

They Make Healthy Women

Husbands appreciate the change and the remedy that causes it.

The letter of one appreciative husband is given below.

I wish to congratulate you upon the efficacy of Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women. Mrs. Baldwin has tested them, and certifies to their worth. Her experience together with testimony of the others in this vicinity who have been by them "made healthy women," leads me to request you to send three boxes to a relative, Mrs. ——, who is a sufferer from the peculiar to women, whom physicians and their remedies have thus far failed to cure.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

RACING AT THE FAIRS.

Preston at Superintendent of Agricultural Societies, Mr. Hodgins, is gathering information in regard to a number of fairs which hold horse races as their fall exhibitions.

As a result of a series of questions sent out, to each one it has been found that 141 societies are in favor of horse racing, and 129 against it. Many of the societies in favor of horse racing believe that the purse of the purses should be limited. 140 societies report that they themselves are racing to be necessary for the success of their exhibitions, and 130 are in favor of this opinion.

In reply to a question asked the societies as to whether they would consider horse racing necessary, there fewer exhibitions at their events 118 societies replied in the affirmative 152 stated that they would not, and the value of the purses offered at exhibitions last year amounted to considerably over $25,000. The societies are in favor of restricting the races to horses owned by men living within 20 miles of the fair, while 153 societies stated that they would not be in favor of such a restriction.

Quite a number of the societies are in favor of restricting the value of the purses for horse races to a sum not to exceed one third of the value of the total amount paid in prizes for all agricultural purposes.

THE LATE DR. MEACHAM.

The following resolution was passed by the Quarterly Official Board of the Warsaw Circuit, and presented to Mrs. Meacham:

To Mrs. W. W. Meacham and family, We, the members of the Quarterly Official Board of the Methodist Church, Warsaw Circuit, in regular meeting assembled, desire to express to you our deep sense of the loss we have sustained in the death of our beloved brother, W. W. Meacham, M.D. He was an active member in our Board, and took a deep interest in every department of church work as well as in social and public life. He was highly in efforts as a Bible Class leader in the Sunday School and class meeting. In the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper of the seasons, and faithfully and carefully endeavored to present the truth of God.

We have found him to be a man of sterling integrity with a firm faith in God, a warm heart, a genial, kind and affectionate disposition, a practical, one from whom the friendless claims of the church and every worthy cause received substantial support.

We tear from many expressions of appreciation of his Christian sympathy and kindness in the discharge of his duties as a medical practitioner. We wish hereby to express to you our sympathy in this your hour of sore bereavement. We pray the consolation of Divine grace and strength may be yours and that you may realize the fulfilment of the promise of God that He will never leave nor forsake those that put their trust in Him.

OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD

Bran waste is one great difference between good and poor flours.

The food part of flour is "protein."

Protein makes bone, muscle and brain.—There is no protein in bran.

—bran is the outside part, the husk or "bark" of the wheat.

—bran is the part of the wheat which is absolutely without food-value to the human system.

—bran represents part of the difference between Royal Household Flour and whole-wheat flour or cheap, inferior flours that are poorly milled and not thoroughly purified.

No other flour in this country is so thoroughly and completely separated from the waste as is "Royal Household," because no other mills are so well equipped or exclusively devoted to the production of scientifically pure flour as Royal Household mills.

THE WITCH OF CRAGENSTONE

For over a third of a century Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has sold more largely than any other blood purifier or stomach tonic.

Bigger sales to-day than ever before. Is that not the best of tests? Cures others, why not you? Makes rich red blood.

An imitation of nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and improvement of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative extract of herbs and roots, without the use of alcohol, like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This vegetable medicine assists the digestive functions and helps in the assimilation of food, or rather takes from the food just the nutriment the blood requires.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood and entirely eradicates the poisons that breed and feed disease. It thus cures scrofula, eczema, erysipelas, boils, pimples, and other eruptions that mar and scar the skin. Pure blood is essential to good health. The weak, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience is commonly the effect of impure blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery not only cleanses the blood of impurities, but it increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and it enriches the body with an abundant supply of pure, rich blood.

No matter how powerful the intellect or the resources of intellectual power, it must be backed up by physical force. Every day the youth or man must manufacture a pint of rich, arterial blood, that is pure, stimulating to the brain, and that can rebuild the tissues that were destroyed in yesterday's work.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness, sick headache, dizziness, constipation and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

"Soon we came upon a stream that ran bubbling and foaming across our path. With many comic oaths from Gaston and some sharp imprecations from myself, we contrived to get across it, but so nearly were our horses swept from under us by the swift current of the stream and so difficult was it for them to gain a footing on the steep embankment of slippery rocks on the other side, that, I'truth, I thought we would be lost. After much maneuvering and some desperate chances we found shallower water, a little sand, and triumphantly gained the other side.

"Three night came on, and over the unknown road for a distance that seemed interminable we almost felt our way." And he laughed lightly at the recollection. "Gaston was unsparing and curses of thy country, sweet, and waterrunning off me in streams, dampened mine ardor so that it was with dejection and rather heartless pleasure that we beheld the first flicker of light from a window, ahead of us on the road. Reaching the house, or, rather, cabin that it was, I knocked loudly for admittance. A querulous old voice bade me begone, cried feebly that there was a tavern for strangers a mile down the road, and that we had no manners to disturb a poor sick body at that time of night. So we continued, on our journey until we reached a house with signs of life about it that proved to be the tavern.

A strapping visaged landlord received us, took our order for a good warm supper, called a boy to take the horses, and we entered.

"How great a distance to the Maryland farm?' I inquired as he showed us to a room.

"The Maryland farm?' he repeated in stupid bewilderment. 'I ha' ne'er heard on it.'

"Fool! churl! I exclaimed, my patience exhausted by the long series of discomforts. Thou livest at Cragenstone and hath ne'er heard of the Maryland farm!'

"But this is the village of Sternclerf,' he answered. 'Cragenstone lieth on t'other side of the mountain, across the forest. Prithee, sir, 'tis a long, circlous, roundabout journey from here to there.' Margaret, in my surprise and disappointment at his information I could scarce run him through, so desperate was I. The man's stolid, unsympathetic face and no better suggestion, to offer than that we abide there until the ending of the storm maddened me, and, as though the fault of the mistake were his instead of mine, I rude the fellow begone in my surliest tones. 'Twould weary thee, heart's love, to tell thee all," he continued, with a sigh—"how the next day the storm raged, destroying our equipment, and the next and next; how I took counsel repeatedly with the idlers about the tavern as to the expediency of our setting forth and how they did not, assured me gravely that it would be impossible to ford the Skolvent stream. Then I grew listless and, to my surprise, seemed not to care; had no appetite; mine eyes swelled and smarted in my head, followed by nausea and hot fever. Then, dire calamity, I was attacked with the pest called measles, a disease raging in every house in the village, and lay ill of it for near a fortnight, and, Margaret, when I was strong enough and safe of contagion to come to thee all traces of the storm had passed, the stream was passable, and we rode forth, with blithe farewells to the good beer faced loungers about the tavern door, down the mountain to find the right road that brought us at last happily to Cragenstone. Sweet, art glad to see me?"

Margaret pressed the hand gently that held hers, saying, with a sigh of content: "Thou knowest well how glad Godfrey, how glad am I. Such nights of suspense, such burning fevers of impatience, such days of hourly heartsick expectancy no mortal ever before experienced. Methought perchance that thou wert dead, Godfrey, that thou wast so long in coming."

"Nay, heaven's gift of joy, I lived for thee."

For a moment neither spoke; then La Fabienne said suddenly: "But tell me, Margaret, of thy cousin, Cortes, he seemed an ill favored wholly enough. So he would wed with thee, my love?"

"What rare fortune, Godfrey, that thou didst come in time!" she exclaimed, with a shudder. "An thou had delayed another minute that vile villain would have had my portion!"

La Fabienne's face darkened, and he exclaimed angrily as he laid his hand upon his sword.

"See my bodice how 'tis torn? And my kerchief is in ribbons, so desperate was our encounter. In my fright I screamed quite wildly."

"And thou didst call my name," he said fondly. "I recall my surprise at hearing it. Had thou news of mine arrival, Margaret?"

"Nay, dear Godfrey," she answered, with a little laugh that was half sob as she buried her face in the velvet folds of the puffed sleeve of his doublet. "Thy name, that does ever dwell securely in my heart, in my helplessness sprang from there to my lips, and they gave voice to it. Then thou, as if sent specially by kind Providence to rescue me, burst through the thicket and now—thou art here."

"Aye, I am here," he said, with particular emphasis. "But, sweet, art not a-weary from standing so long?"

She slipped her hand through his arm.

"Come, Godfrey, to the portal of my door, where I had hoped to meet thee. Thou did have but a rough and unpleasant welcome. And thy lady"—she made him a little, mocking courtesy, with a smile on the lips—"would give thee a greeting more befitting thy station and high rank."

He turned and kissed her where she stood.

"The rough forest path or this stone, sweet Margaret, an thou art on either, is on portal of no unpleasant best lieu its my station," he replied. "But I will go with thee gladly, oh, my love, an thou leadeth the way, even to the end of the world."

Just then the moon rose over the horizon, illuminating the mountain so that the lovers could discern the path, way without trouble, and soon they turned the corner of the road, passing out of sight.

CHAPTER XI.

In June the days are longest. The sun, unwilling to remove its warm gaze from the fair expanse of earth, rich in leafy foliage and gay with bright blossoms, roses hanging full and red, distilling with the evening dew its sweet odors to the soft air, withdraws its last rays lingeringly, reluctant to give place to gray and somber twilight, that ever stealthily and surely comes following in the wake, bringing the boon to all mankind of a restful hour after the heat and turmoil of a working day.

It was on such an evening that Simon Kempster, having taken the road to the village—the long and less frequented one that ran past the Tannston farmhouse—arrived late at the customary lounging place of the villagers, the Sign of the Red Heart, to find the scene as usually occupied in his favorite corner under the small open window taken by Josiah Tannston, who, pale faced and taciturn, sat there grimly holding his tankard of ale in his hand. To Simon's cheerful greeting he returned a solemn nod, and so occupied was he with his own thoughts that he appeared not to notice or hear the talk of those about him.

On the steps at the door, also in the hallway, groups of idlers stood absolutely discussing the affairs of the village and watching with curious interest the movements of the latest arrival, a French peddler, who, dressed in a tawdry suit of purple velveteen trimmed profusely with tarnished brass ornaments, huge rings suspended from his ears and high russet leather boots, broken and bursting at the soles, was eating supper greedily. Hardly finishing the last morsel, he sprang from his seat, eager to catch the attention of possible purchasers before the darkness set in and they would depart for their homes.

"Look, kind sirs and pretty gentlemen," he cried in a shrill, wheedling voice, holding up for their gaze a box of plain gold rings. "Surely some one here about hath marriage on his mind, and where can he buy the wedding circlet cheaper? Solid gold and only 10 shillings! Buy, buy! Who will buy?"

His keen glance, searching about the room, fell on Josiah Tannston, who was regarding the peddler's endeavors coldly, a sneer on his face. The fellow quickly gave him his back, so as not to waste even another glance on such an unpromising customer, when he spied Simon Kempster, red faced and contagious, singing near by.

"What wilt thou, m'sieur—a marriage circlet? By our lady, with thy yellow locks and sturdy limbs I wot thou'd make a bonny bridegroom!"

The idlers about tittered, nudging each other with sly winks, and Simon to cover his confusion fell on his knees to the floor, making a show of examining some trinkets that were in a chamois skin bag.

"Twere fool's work, Simon, to buy the ring unless thou hast thy sweetheart's sure promise," young Hugh Haggott called from his place near the door.

The wary peddler thought to try another tack. Fumbling among his wares, he soon produced a handful of silver heart shaped rings and fine chains, and, selecting one, he dangled it enticingly before Simon's eyes.

"Happen thou and thy maid have quarreled," he observed, "an' thou would carry one of these to her for a peace gift. 'Twould bring thee luck in thy courting," he added persuasively as he saw a gleam of desire for the gewgaws in Kempster's eyes. "Oh, sure luck, m'sieur, I do promise thee, and only 4 shillings! Half the price I paid for them in the principal mart in Paris!"

Forcing the chain into Simon's hands as if it were a settled fact that he had purchased it, the vender turned his attention to the securing of other customers.

"Silver hearts!" he cried lustily. "Sure harbingers of good luck and a successful wooing! Cheap at 4 shillings! Contains a charm that will cause the most trifling or stubborn maid to o'ercome her scruples and name the wedding day."

"And thou didst call my name," he said fondly. "I recall my surprise at hearing it. Had thou news of mine arrival, Margaret?"

"Nay, dear Godfrey," she answered, with a little laugh that was half sob as she buried her face in the velvet folds of the puffed sleeve of his doublet. 'Twould bring thee luck in thy courting," he added persuasively as he saw a gleam of desire for the gewgaws in Kempster's eyes. "Oh, sure luck, m'sieur, I do promise thee, and only 4 shillings! Half the price I paid for them in the principal mart in Paris!"

Forcing the chain into Simon's hands as if it were a settled fact that he had purchased it, the vender turned his attention to the securing of other customers.

"Silver hearts!" he cried lustily. "Sure harbingers of good luck and a successful wooing! Cheap at 4 shillings! Contains a charm that will cause the most trifling or stubborn maid to o'ercome her scruples and name the wedding day."

"And thou didst call my name," he said fondly. "I recall my surprise at hearing it. Had thou news of mine arrival, Margaret?"

"Nay, dear Godfrey," she answered, with a little laugh that was half sob as she buried her face in the velvet folds of the puffed sleeve of his doublet. "Thy name, that does ever dwell securely in my heart, in my helplessness sprang from there to my lips, and they gave voice to it. Then thou, as if sent specially by kind Providence to rescue me, burst through the thicket and now—thou art here."

"Aye, I am here," he said, with particular emphasis. "But, sweet, art not a-weary from standing so long?"

She slipped her hand through his arm.

"Come, Godfrey, to the portal of my door, where I had hoped to meet thee. Thou did have but a rough and unpleasant welcome. And thy lady"—she made him a little, mocking courtesy, with a smile on the lips—"would give thee a greeting more befitting thy station and high rank."

He turned and kissed her where she stood.

"The rough forest path or this stone, sweet Margaret, an thou art on either, is on portal of no unpleasant best lieu its my station," he replied. "But I will go with thee gladly, oh, my love, an thou leadeth the way, even to the end of the world."

Just then the moon rose over the horizon, illuminating the mountain so that the lovers could discern the path, way without trouble, and soon they turned the corner of the road, passing out of sight.

CHAPTER XI.

In June the days are longest. The sun, unwilling to remove its warm gaze from the fair expanse of earth, rich in leafy foliage and gay with bright blossoms, roses hanging full and red, distilling with the evening dew its sweet odors to the soft air, withdraws its last rays lingeringly, reluctant to give place to gray and somber twilight, that ever stealthily and surely comes following in the wake, bringing the boon to all mankind of a restful hour after the heat and turmoil of a working day.

It was on such an evening that Simon Kempster, having taken the road to the village—the long and less frequented one that ran past the Tannston farmhouse—arrived late at the customary lounging place of the villagers, the Sign of the Red Heart, to find the scene as usually occupied in his favorite corner under the small open window taken by Josiah Tannston, who, pale faced and taciturn, sat there grimly holding his tankard of ale in his hand. To Simon's cheerful greeting he returned a solemn nod, and so occupied was he with his own thoughts that he appeared not to notice or hear the talk of those about him.

On the steps at the door, also in the hallway, groups of idlers stood absolutely discussing the affairs of the village and watching with curious interest the movements of the latest arrival, a French peddler, who, dressed in a tawdry suit of purple velveteen trimmed profusely with tarnished brass ornaments, huge rings suspended from his ears and high russet leather boots, broken and bursting at the soles, was eating supper greedily. Hardly finishing the last morsel, he sprang from his seat, eager to catch the attention of possible purchasers before the darkness set in and they would depart for their homes.

"Who'll buy, m'sieurs! Love's magic! Who'er buys a heart perforee must buy a circlet!" the fellow cried, not seeing his companion's agitation.

"Hast any charm that contains evil?" Josiah said in a voice so low that he almost whispered.

The peddler regarded him curiously.

"Surely," he thought, "that sour visaged fellow needs not evil charms. The devil is close enough to him already."

But he answered suavely: "It doth happen that I have small call for those. Most folks are afear of them. Once I had a box of crosses that were said to be possessed of the devil, but they brought me much misfortune and bad luck, so I soon got rid of them. Gentlemen, step up! Surely there's not only one among ye a-sweethearting! Who'll buy my wares?" he called out.

"Those crosses, man!" Josiah interposed impatiently. "Wert of gold? Where soldst thou them?"

"Aye, of pure gold. Only the nobility bought them," he replied proudly. "I was in Paris I sold them. Ah, good sir," to a timid young Tannston who had approached, "an thou wilt take a golden circlet thou canst have it for 8 shillings. Cheap, dirt cheap, but I am much in need of money."

But the man, shaking his head as if the price were too much, walked away.

"Master, wouldst thou like a silver cross? Diable! There is not much left luck in them!" the vender continued, turning toward Josiah again. But, to his surprise, the man's place was empty, for Tannston, unnoticed by the throng of bystanders that was interested in the peddler and his wares, with gleaming triumphant eyes had passed through the doorway and gone out into the night.

CHAPTER XII.

At about this time Hetty Tannston, having finished her evening task of washing the supper dishes and putting the kitchen in order, sat idly on a little bench beside the doorway of her home. Some pink roses hanging on a bush near at hand attracted her attention. Reaching over, she plucked a handful, then, after bending an ear in the direction her mother had taken to visit a neighbor to assure herself that she was not repairing, arranged the blossom coquettishly in the prim little knot of hair wound tightly at the back of her head, saying softly: "When I hear her coming I'll throw them out. Happen she'll not stay long now darkness hath fallen."

Sounds of approaching footsteps crunching the earth heavily fell on her ears, causing the girl to put her hand to her head guiltily. Then as a merry whistle broke out on the evening air she sank back with an appearance of relief, leaving the roses undisturbed.

"Pah! 'Tis Simon!" she exclaimed. "I might ha' known the sound of his clumsy footfalls! Lord knows I ha' heard them often enough. The callant's forever a-passing!"

Presently Kempster reached the garden gate, paused and, peering through the gloom, saw the glimmer of a white kerchief.

"Hetty, it's thou?" he said as he came toward her.

"Yea, Simon, who else but dreary me, pining all alone?" she said, rising, with an affected sigh. "Wilt enter? The air is chill."

Stepping into the kitchen, she lighted a candle that stood in readiness on a small table and, setting two chairs near the doorway, motioned to her visitor, who stood hesitatingly at the threshold, to be seated and took the other one herself.

"Those pink roses become thee, Hetty," Simon ventured to remark, regarding the young woman affectionately, his eyes glistening with admiration at the court. My love charms are world famed! Step up, m'sieurs, only 4 shillings!" he called.

"By the mass! I had a sure proof of their value within the month," he continued, addressing Josiah, but speaking in a loud voice so that all might hear. "At Sternclerf, over the mountain, I was delayed by the storm and had a room in the tavern there next to a gallant gentleman, an English noble, holding high rank at the French court and in high favor with the king, who had missed his way and lay there ill of a fever. All through the horrors of the fever and pain he moaned sorely for his ladylove, who, he lamented, was pining for his presence and whom he feared he would ne'er see again. I gave him one of these heart shapes, an', m'sieurs," the peddler announced triumphantly, holding them high above his head, "that day the storm abated, the sun began to mend, and ere many days he fared forth on his journey. And the first thing I saw as I approached the village, good sirs, was this same gallant riding by the side of a most beauteous lady, both merry an' the light of happy love shining in their eyes. Signaling by the wayside, I pulled my hat off to the ground at their approach, an' Sir Godfrey La Fabienne"—he said the name proudly—"with kind civility doffed his hat in return an' gave me pleasant greeting."

"With all respect and reverence, my lord,' quoth I, 'the love charm hath worked?'

"The lady blushed, and my lord threw me a gold piece.

"Thou chargest not enough for thy valuable wares, good fellow,' he quoth, 'so I will further compensate thee.'

"An' they rode away laughing together, laughing gently, and so great was the love and happiness on their faces that I watched them with tears in mine eyes until they entered the forest.

Josiah Tannston, who during this recital had grown pale to the lips, with trembling hands clutched the heart shapes tighter.

"Who'll buy, m'sieurs! Love's magic! Who'er buys a heart perforee must buy a circlet!" the fellow cried, not seeing his companion's agitation.

"Hast any charm that contains evil?"

Hetty, who had been listening to his words with an alert, suspicious look on her face, grew quite fidgety as she saw him medially casting about for a suitable comparison.

"Now, Simon, thou hadst best be careful!" she cried hastily in a voice of warning.

At her words the enthusiasm on Kempster's countenance faded away. "I was but thinking on my little young heifer, Hetty, the lost the run o' my words," he concluded lamely.

"There, I knew it!" she exclaimed angrily. "Thou wast going to compare me to thy heifer!"

She sprang from her seat and, hastily pulling in the window casement, said sharply, with no desire to conceal her pettishness: "If thou hast no better talk than that, forsooth, thou'd better be on thy way, Simon. A body'd love to look like an old cow!" she wound up sarcastically.

To Simon, who saw beauty in everything connected with his snug little farm, Hetty's dislike to his gentle flatteries was always a mystery to him. He scratched his forehead nervously, knowing that he had offended again unwittingly and wishing from his heart that he had not come, when the reason of his visit occurred to him. Approaching his companion, he thrust his hands awkwardly into his breeches pocket and, pulling out a little packet, handed it to her.

"'Tis a trinket for thee, Hetty." A hot flush was on his face. "There wast a peddler at the Sign of the Red Heart a-selling them, and when I saw the gewgaws I thought at once on thee. Thou'rt so fond of trinkets, Hetty." He had succeeded in placing her this time? Simon's heart beat rapidly, and he could scarcely breathe with suspense as she undid the wrapping, picked up the chain and hung it on the end of her finger, a dazed expression in her eyes; then she laughed in low, trilling, happy laugh.

"Thou didst buy it for me, Simon?"

"For thee, sweet Hetty."

The honest fellow's voice trembled with feeling, and terms of delight sprang to his eyes at sight of her pleasure. "'Tis a good luck charm for lovers, they say."

"Ha! done, Simon!"

Hetty, angling the chain and heart before the light of the candle, blushed furiously. "Must do foolish things like squandering thy money on gewgaw for cross patch maid who e'er finds fault, with thee wivout adding on thy silly nouseme?"

"Will wear it, Hetty?' he whispered, coming nearer.

"Aye, gladly, Simon!" she cried, delighted with the gift, then, undoing the clasp and putting the chain about her white throat, said: "Could—couldst thou fasten it, Simon? My fingers are all thumbs, an' I'm all a-fluster with surprise."

He sprang to her assistance, taking the ends of the chain from her small hands.

"Ah, lackaday," she continued in a lower voice, "I must wear it 'neath my kerchief, I ween, as mother is so wrathful at a lover giving a gewgaw to me. She says they are implements of the devil to make maids vain and worldly. Shame, Simon! Thou needst not plish that. Thou'rt a big, clumsy manners. Hist! 'Tis mother!"

They sprang apart. Hetty sank into a chair, carelessly arranging the heart and pendant, and Simon, bending over an open Bible, turned over the pages slowly, as if intent on looking for a certain verse.

Mrs. Tannston entered, closing the door after her. "Good even, Simon Kempster. The night air groweth chill."

"A fair greeting, good mistress."

Simon pushed a chair toward her. "Yestermorn Josiah told me that some of the neighbors had been in and did him stop in to see if they were better of the malady."

The dame seated herself gloomily.

"Ah, woe is me!" she sighed. "All's adversity and trouble! Two more sheep lay down with the disease tonight. But, and she, standing by with her hand on who hath ever had a hearty appetite, for the past fortnight almost refuseth food."

"What doth ail Josiah?" Simon asked with interest.

"No one can say," she answered, "but methinks 'tis the sight of so much wicked wealth in his neighbor's house, our cousin hath seen fit to bring into this hitherto reverent village that hath caused it. Josiah, Josiah, wouldst scenes as we perforce must witness! Why, just tonight in going to the village I took the short path through the Mayland farm, and there before the door sat this papist lover of Margaret in a suit of lavender satin trimmed with gilt needlework, stringing a lute, and she, standing by with her hand on his shoulder, was humming the air of some French song. Both were so intent upon their wicked music that they did not even see me. Margaret, sweet Such a sight sickened me, and I lamented my slothfulness in taking the short way. To be a constant eyewitness of such foolishness, as perforce Josiah is, can ne'er help grieving him. Prithee, 'a pious, God fearing man, as he is well known to be, feels a responsibility for him and his soul and resents her cool and brazen determination to go her evil way."

"Nay, good dame," Simon ventured to remonstrate, "methinks 'tis but fears for the loss of Mistress Mayland's soul, for I warrant thee that the spirit that must dwell in such a beautiful body could ne'er find else but a place in heaven."

"There, that is the way wi' the men," cried the woman angrily—"ever seeing outward signs, which are devil's snares, and attributing them to the work of the good Lord!"

Her eyes, glaring around wrathfully, chanced to catch a glimpse of the roses dangling from Hetty's little knot of black hair, which that maid in her pleasure at Simon's gift had entirely forgotten to remove. Her mother was at her side in an instant, and the flowers ott, threw them on the floor and stamped on them.

"Thou vain, wicked, empty head!" she cried shrilly. "Thy only thought to lay snares for the senses o' men, forgetting thy father in heaven! Thou'd like to copy the wanton ways of thy cousin, wouldst thou, so that thy good brother could have more cause for grieving an' be kept longer at his prayers?"

Hetty, who was really terrified at her mother's anger, began to weep gently. Mistress Tannston strutted to the large cupboard at the other end of the room to hang up the bonnet, and Simon, troubled beyond expression at the sight of Hetty's tears, contrived to slip a crumpled piece of paper into her hand, whispering quickly: "Happen this will comfort thee, sweet. I writ it at the tallow chandler's on my way up here. 'Tis good verse, Hetty, and of marvelous rhyme. Fare thee well, sweet."

Then, taking up his hat, he strode to the door, calling his adieus loudly to his elder woman, who answered in a muffled voice from the interior of the cupboard.

Once safely in her room, Hetty drew the wooden bolt across the door and, sitting down before the piece of glass that constituted her mirror, removed her kerchief and with sparkling eyes looked at her white throat encircled by the silver chain.

"If mother e'er sees it she will burn it," she whispered, looking toward the door to make sure she had secured it against intruders. "Now for Simon's missive. For all he loves his farm, methinks he is not entirely lacking in sentiment. Maybe 'tis a love verse."

Undoing the crumpled piece of paper, Hetty deciphered the writing with great difficulty:

To wvete Hetty I fane
Would bring a chane,
With a love charm of a hart
That will never—no, never—let us part.

Hetty walked to the window and lifted her flushed, pleased face to the calm star lit sky.

"Methought never to have liked that clumsy Simon so well," she whispered. "His comparisons were e'er so homely I much doubt me that he knows he has can write such love verses I ween that he is not without good parts."

CHAPTER XIII.

The next morning the sun rose red and hot above the hills. Not a breath of air stirred, and a sultry, unhealthiness pervaded the atmosphere. Laborers going to their work mopped their brows and looked anxiously at the sky, deep blue as that of the heavens for a glimpse of a cloud that might perchance grow larger as the day advanced and spread itself between the fifth day of the month, A.D. 1901, in Book "13" for the Township of Richmond as number "396B" and which parcel may be described as following, Commencing at a stake planted on the south side of the forty foot road north of Lot Number Seven and following the said road easterly one hundred and eighty feet; thence south to the fence at the edge of the mill pond; thence westerly one hundred and eighty feet; thence north to the place of beginning.

DO YOUR OWN STRETCHIN'.

After being without a girl for a week, the mistress of a Harlem apartment was showing an applicant over the flat, as Harper's Weekly has had been liberal in her promises of privileges in the way of afternoons and nights off. She had even gone so far as to extend the hour of the girl's return on these nights and to agree to her using the sewing machine after her work was done.

The new girl seemed pleased, and the mistress was beginning to feel glad. They walked back into the dining-room, and the girl had actually removed one hat pin from her face. Then her smile faded.

"Do you do your own stretchin'?" she demanded.

"Do we do our own what?" asked the puzzled mistress.

"Stretchin'," repeated the new girl. "I don't understand."

"Stretchin'," repeated the girl again. "Do you put the stuff on the table at meal time and stretch for it, or do I have to shuffle it around?"

THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS BUGGY PAINT

Was made originally to paint buggies with, but is just as good for any number of other things. A buggy, boat, flower stand, baby carriage, sleigh, children's toys, &c., can be made to look clean and bright at very little expense. The color and varnish are applied together, giving a fine gloss. One of our customers said, "For twenty-five cents I have fixed up the old stand that I was going to throw away because it looked so badly." You can do the same thing. We can always show samples of the colors carried in stock.

Lindsay Post, Aug. 25th.

The funeral of the late George Fox took place yesterday afternoon to Riverside cemetery, and was attended by a very large number of our citizens. The deceased who was for a time a very prominent newspaper man, for several years a leading writer of the Ottawa Free Press, and subsequently the editor of the press gallery of the House of Parliament. He also established a paper in Bowmanville, which he published for several years. He was a very ambitious and hard worker in his profession and while in the height of his success was attacked with affection of the eyes which was occasioned by overwork, and in spite of the best medical skill he became totally blind. He accepted his sore affliction with great resignation and wore a cheerful smile. For about a year it was seen that he was failing in health and at Christmas he was confined to his room. In May he was placed in the Ross Memorial Hospital, but in spite of the best of care he passed away on Monday. He leaves behind him his aged mother, three sisters, Mrs. A. Perry and Miss Peggie Fox, of this town, and Mrs. W. H. Meagher, of Napanee, and two brothers Mr. S. Fox, M.P.P., and James Fox, who resides in Florida. The family have the sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends.

ARE HERE.

Hundreds of Jackets now ready for fall selling. Styles are so new and different from last year that every woman will want a new coat.

Paris Says the "Empire Style" Shall Rule in Women's Coats.

We had early and authoritative hint from Paris that the Empire (three quarter) style, and Empire effects are to rule this fall in Women's Coats. The styles with the long pleats or folds dropping from the yoke. Collarless styles are much in evidence, as a rule in collar effect with velvet in harmonizing tones. Sleeves with full puff at top, leg-o-mutton style is correct. Cuffs usually turned back with self trimming, velvet or braid. While the Empire type is good style and becoming to most figures, there are a lot of people who will be more interested in our new fitted and half fitting styles. There are very few women who care to have a coat exactly like their neighbors, and we have selected our coats so that there are not two exactly alike. It's a great collection we have provided for you. Come and look them over. If there should be one you think you ought to have, we would lay it away for you till wearing time.

Men's Custom Tailoring for Fall and Winter.

One thing will strike you at first glance on looking through the 384 Patterns and Colorings in the new Fabrics is that green is the strong note of the coloring. But equally in good taste are the black, dark blue, brown and grey effects.

Looking back over the last two years in our Custom Tailoring Branch we find a great many customers who have reordered five times, four times, three times, twice—showing that we have a good name for style, fit and workmanship. We'll see to it that the good name stays.

We get sure word of style. We get the newest fabrics. The risk of the fit is ours—not yours. Come in and see the new goods. You'll not be urged to buy. Don't buy if you don't see what you want.

The Montreal Daily Herald, which is ninety-seven years old, has moved into a spacious new home, beautifully situated on Victoria square, and to signalize the event has issued a fine edition of ninety pages, descriptive and illustrative of the progress of the Dominion and of Montreal. To remark that this tremendous paper is sold for one cent, is to call attention to the fact that Canadian newspapers, in general, give far more reading matter to their subscribers than is justified by the revenue they receive from their readers. The Herald's edition does more than record the progress of the Dominion. It emphasizes the great strides The Herald itself is making in popular favor.

DIVINE CALL OF LOVE

FINDS THE LUKEWARM IN RELIGION HARD TO REACH.

THE CHURCH AT LAODICEA

Outward Appearance Reasonably Fair, But Not One of the Seven Churches In Asia Was More Excoriated Than This Church For Systematic Indifference.— Modern Laodiceans of Lukewarm Christianity.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dixey, of Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 27.—In this sermon the preacher takes to task the spiritual indifference of professors of religion and shows the evil results of their example in social and business life. The text is Revelation iii, 15, "I would that thou wert cold or hot."

God is love. The Bible declares it. Whether the divine Father's chastenings are rains or sinners they are still enshrined in his parental affections. God's love is like unto that of the earthly parent who one day overheard his little child saying to her brother, "Now, Charley, be a good boy or papa will not love you." With that, the father answered: "No, Nellie, you must not tell your brother that. I do not love you children because you are good or hate you because you are bad. I love you, whether you are good or bad, because you are my children. When you are good, then you make me very happy. When you are bad, then you make me very sad. But I still love you just the same." God loves his prodigals, though they are prodigals, and he loves his saints with a delighted joy.

But, though God loves all his children, there is one class about whom he is especially concerned. As the worried mother four or five times during the night lights her lamp and goes to look at the little sick patient and to feel the brow of the fevered child and again and again turns his anxious eyes toward certain of his wayward ones. And where do you think these divine eyes are most frequently looking? Toward the social outcasts? Oh, no! Toward the drunkards who are staggering and hiccoughing toward their filthy tenements? No. Toward the murderers in the condemned cell about to be tried for their lives? No. Toward the thief who in the evening hours knocked down pedestrians and toward the safe-breaker who with his dark lantern is making his way through the depths of the bank below

Beware of Summer Germs.

WILL CAUSE SICKNESS UNLESS STOMACH IS STRENGTHENED WITH MI-O-NA.

One tablet of Mi-o-na taken before each meal during the summer months, whenever the stomach is out of order, or the digestion weak, will do more than any other treatment to prevent the diseases caused by germs at this season.

If the stomach is weak so that food does not readily digest in it, the food will become a sour, slimy, fermenting mass in the digestive organs, the ideal condition for germs to cause bowel trouble, diarrhoea, or other summer illness.

Mi-o-na will soothe and heal the irritated mucous membrane of the stomach and digestive tract, stimulate the solar plexus, and strengthen the whole nervous system. This remarkable remedy will make the whole digestive system so healthy clean and sweet that food cannot ferment, and any disease germs which may enter the stomach will be destroyed.

Just one small tablet out of a 50 cent box of Mi-o-na before eating, and you will have no headaches, back-ache, poor appetite, distress after eating, heart burn, tired feeling, sleeplessness, or general debility. It will tone up the digestive system and give perfect health and strength.

Take Mi-o-na now, and T. B. Wallace will guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure. The risk is all his.

She—I wanted to see how you would act.

He—But I might have rushed off without waiting for an explanation.

She—I had the door locked.

"Young man," said her father, "do you smoke cigarettes?"

The blood says you declared the youth hastily, "I would consider it flattering to be seen with one of the vile things in my mouth. I think all cigarette smokers should be jailed. Why do you ask, sir?"

Suitor—Yes, sir. I came early to avoid the rush.

SEPTEMBER CANADIAN MAGAZINE.

There is some spicy speaking in the leading article of the September Canadian Magazine. The article is entitled "Merki Heroism," and is from the lieutenant pen of the Hon. J. W. Longheed. He seems to think that Canada need some frank advice in this line by way of their prosperity. Quoting among the Highlands," by M. E. Farrell, is an illustrated contribution, which will attract considerable attention. "The Story of Miss Robbins," by Isabel Eccleston Mackay, is one of the most charming stories ever written by a Canadian. "Studies in Moonlight" is a beautiful tale for the children, illustrated by Emily Hand, a Canadian illustrator whose work is becoming more popular. The usual poetry and the departments are quite up to the average.

THE FOUR D's.

Charles Spurgeon once said that there were three great enemies to man —"dirt, debt and drink." Some one has added one more and included dyspepsia. The evil results of this discase could hardly be exaggerated. Its effects are felt in mind and body, and are as far reaching as the effects of the curse that was laid on the Jackass of Bheims which was cursed and degraded to be eating and drinking, standing and sitting and lying. The baneful effects of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery are most marked in dyspepsia, and in curing each one of its steps. It abates the stomach gangs to secrete the necessary quantity of digestive fluids, and this at once removes that craving or gnawing sensation so common to certain forms of indigestion. It tones and regulates the stomach, invigorates the liver and gives the blood making glands keen assimilative power. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures ninety-eight per cent. of those who use it. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Tablets are superior to all other laxative medicines when the bowels are obstructed.

Apple Crop Report.

Messrs. Simons, Shuttleworth & Co., Liverpool and Manchester, Eng., have sent out the following report. They are the largest dealers in apples in the world:

The difficulty of accurately estimating this year's crop of apples is specially appreciable until an attempt at a fairly definite opinion regarding it is taken in hand. Many districts in the large number of States, Valleys, others again report a fair to a good crop. Apparently climatic conditions during the blossoming period were favorable, or as in many cases, where there were but a few days or even hours difference in the time when the trees were in full bloom, the weather conditions were either favorable or otherwise, and the setting of the fruit followed in accordance with these conditions. As a rule, the trees where crops are heavy is of far better quality than half year, and will harden closer than it did then. It must also be remembered, people being plentiful, apples will be harvested and cared for, where under ordinary circumstances they would be allowed to rot. The American reports give a very favorable impression, and compared comparatively on the enormous crops of last year, and are therefore misleading. In other cases, and Pacific Districts have a large crop of good quality. The Eastern Exporting States and Canada have far more apples than is generally supposed, and while the crop may not be anywhere near last year's enormous yield, yet, it must be borne in mind that a large percentage of last year's apples were set, so to waste, while there is every prospect of this season's crop being all cared for.

Trade conditions in Great Britain in the Clyde and Scotland district are good, but in other lines a depression is likely to set in on the opening of the purchasing power of the masses, and consequently the quantity of apples consumed will likely be limited. In summing up, our opinion is that there are ample supplies of apples to meet all requirements, even at moderate prices. We have always taken a good deal of pride in respecting the crop reports issued firms, knowing that they have valuable information, and can handle successfully in their several districts, and in giving a continuance of your consignments, we feel sure that this confidence will be still further strengthened.

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera and all summer complaints, and sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.

TUBERCULOSIS MAY BE EXTERMINATED.

Vegetable Juice the Cure.

New York, Aug. 25.—A good deal of interest has been aroused in medical circles by a circular issued by the New York Post-Graduate Hospital relating to the treatment of tuberculosis under the supervision of Dr. John P. Russell in the hospital annex, in east 19th street. The circular aims to show how tuberculosis can be treated in the home by the careful selection of foods. In it Dr. Russell brings forward a treatment of his own, which is fully in accord with approval by the Post-Graduate Hospital officials and a medical committee appointed to examine into the annex work. Dr. Russell says he has found a combination of foods which seems to be effective in the destruction of the bacilli of tuberculosis. The most beneficial item in the food combination, consisting of butter, bread, eggs, milk and cream, is fat says, vegetable juice. Since the introduction of this juice the report records remarkable results among the tuberculosis patients. Dr. Russell is associated in his colleagues at the Post-Graduate Hospital fellow in the use of the fluids of every kind of vegetables to that in the market. It has been found in the hospital along with other dietetic aids. Th. It is now generally held in the first five months of the year 1904 patients were discharged "apparently" cured, against a record number of 1,000 in the first 6 during the whole 12 months of 1904. This sudden increase and the fact that the patients are still thriving upon the vegetable juice treatment lead the examiners to believe that Dr. Russell has discovered a fluid the properties of which are fatal to the progress of tuberculosis.

"What the vegetable juice is," said Dr. Donald M. Barslow, one of the committee appointed by Dr. Russell's method at the Post-Graduate Hospital, "none of us can say. It may be food or it may be anti-toxin. I am inclined to think it is a food which enables the constitution of a person that presently the system is strong enough to throw off the germs of the bacilli of tuberculosis.

A few from here attended the picnic at Tweed on Wednesday, after spending a splendid time.

Miss Mabel Carscallen returned home on Thursday, after spending a few weeks visiting her sister, Mrs. McTavish, Bath.

Did you ever have your range grates burn out?

If you did you will know what that means in common ranges — it means plumbers, delay, muss and big bills — because common ranges are built that way. As range grates must some time burn out you are certain to have that kind of trouble if yours is a common range.

If you have the Pandora you won't have any trouble, because you can take out the old grates and put in the new ones in ten minutes, and a ten cent piece for a screw-driver does it easier in the Pandora than a whole kit of plumbers' tools will do it in common ranges.

A ten cent piece for a screw-driver is all you need to take out old and put in new Pandora grates.

FEEDING FACTS

In ordinary feeding the steer consumes about ¼ of its ordinary feed; the balance is undigested or wasted.

This undigested balance can be made to give ½ to 1 lb. extra gain per day, and at a profit, by adding the "salt, pepper, and gravy" to its food to make it "tasty."

You like these on your own food; why not the animal.

Like ourselves the animal longs for a "tasty" meal.

It starts the "mouth watering" before eating, and the stomach fills with digestive fluids to thoroughly dissolve the food.

This extra amount of digestive fluid dissolves an extra amount of food. This is where the extra gain comes in.

Clydesdale Stock Food

is the "salt, pepper and gravy" that makes the animal's "mouth water." It is equally good for Horses, Sheep and Hogs.

Nothing injurious in it and can stop feeding it without harmful effects. Human beings can take it with benefit. We take it every day. We know its contents. It is made clean.

If not satisfied your money will be cheerfully refunded by the dealer.

DIED IN A DISTANT LAND.

On Tuesday Mr. T. A. Huffman received a despatch from Wheatland, Wyoming, stating that his youngest son George F. Huffman had died there that morning. The despatch was from Dr. F. Huffman, brother of the deceased, who is practicing his profession at Wheatland. The news will prove a shock to a large circle of friends besides his bereaved father. George was twenty-two years of age on 4th June last, and was cut off in the first flush of young manhood, and until recently with the prospect of a brilliant future. Deceased was a medical student at Queen's University, Kingston. In the winter of 19 4 he contracted a severe cold which settled on his lungs. In January of that year he left for Wyoming in search of health. Although for a time he slightly improved, the change of climate did not prove beneficial, and he continued to decline in health until the end came. At home George was a universal favorite, a good boy, and at college he proved a diligent and bright pupil, liked by both teachers and fellow students. He was in his second year in Medicine, and passed his exams most successfully. Deceased early became a member of the Presbyterian Church here, and was in every way an exemplary son and citizen. He leaves besides his father, a brother, Dr. Freeman Huffman, to whom the heartfelt sympathy of all their friends and acquaintances is extended. The remains will arrive in Napanee on Saturday night, and the funeral will take place from the railway station to the Eastern cemetery at 9 o'clock on Sunday morning.

The War Over.

After three weeks of debating and arguing the matter at Portsmouth, N.H., the Japanese and Russian plenipotentiaries came to an agreement on Tuesday last, and the war, one of the greatest in the world's history, is over. To Japan is due the credit of breaking the deadlock and ending the contest. In the previous negotiations the Russians gave in to their opponents on every point, excepting the payment of the expenses of the war and the giving up of the interned warships to Japan. As it now stands, Japan has gained all she went to war for, has obtained control of Port Arthur, Dalney, the better half of the Island of Saghalin, and control of Korea. Russia also agrees to clear out of Manchuria which is to be turned over to China, and Japan gets all the public railroads and other privileges built by Russia.

On most sides it is contended that Japan has been leader in the negotiations. Perhaps she has, but still she has gained more than she demanded before the war, has defeated and crippled probably the greatest military power in the world, annihilated her navy, and demonstrated to the world that she stands in the forefront of the nations for peace and commerce as well. She is now mistress of the far east, and with England as her ally, should be sure of peace and prosperity for years to come.

WINDOVER—ANDERSON.

A very pretty wedding took place on the evening of the 30th Aug., at Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anderson's home, Overton, when their eldest daughter, Myrtle, was united in marriage to Herbert Stanley Windover, son of Mr. James Windover, of Forest Mills. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. O. Huffman, of Arden, uncle of the bride, assisted by Rev. C. W. DeMille, Mrs. DeMille presided at the organ, and to the sounds of Mendelssohn's wedding march, the bride entered on the arm of her father. She was appropriately gowned in white organdie trimmed with valenciennes lace and insertion, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Mina Chaney, cousin of the bride, acted as maid of honor, and Mr. Stuart Lewis assisted the groom. The guests, numbering about sixty, were only relatives and near friends. Every appointment was ideal and the dining room a perfect bower. The presents, numerous and beautiful, were an elegant testimonial of esteem for the bride. The groom's present to the bride was a gold brooch and chain and to the bridesmaid a pearl finger-ring pendant. Followed by hosts of good wishes the young couple left for a trip to Peterboro and Toronto.

NAPANEE BOY MURDERED.

Charles, son of Welleslay Babcock, and grandson of Reuben Babcock, of Napanee, was fatally stabbed in Watertown, early last Sunday morning, by an Italian named Frank Fiori. The bullet entered the victim's back, just behind the left ear, and death was almost instantaneous. The deceased had had an altercation in a saloon, and the Italian shot Babcock on the street, on his way home. The Watertown Times gives the following particulars of the murdered man:

THE MURDERED MAN.

Charles Babcock, the murdered man, was of light build. He was 20 years of age, his birthday having fallen on Sunday. He was born on Lepper street, in this city, and was a son of Wellesley and Eleanor Babcock. When quite small, the boy was taken to Napanee, Canada, and was there brought up in the home of his grandparents, Reuben Babcock. He lived there until he was about 14 years of age, and then returned to Watertown, where he resided for a time and then went back to Canada. He came to Watertown four years ago and resided here almost continuously after that time.

His father, Wellesley Babcock, left for Alaska about two years ago and has not been heard from since that time. About three years ago the boy's mother married Arthur Sarwell; with whom she now lives at 62 Factory street.

Young Babcock did various kinds of work during the time he resided in this city. He worked for Spratt & Corcoran as plumber's assistant for several months and for some time prior to his death had been employed in the same capacity by Fred Page at 42 Factory street. He boarded with the Page family at the time of his death. He resided for a comparatively few months and worked in a pottery manufacturing establishment. His grandfather, George Thompson, resides at 100 Baron block, and his grandmother, who was divorced from George Thompson and is now Mrs. Lucy Bastian, resides at 100 Baron block. A sister, Mabel, two years younger than Charles, was placed in the orphan's home as a child and was adopted into the home of a family residing at Beckett's Harbor. It is said she now resides at Henderson.

MAY ABOLISH STATUTE LABOR.

Toronto News.

"I intend to advocate the abolition of statute labor, for one year," said Mr. A. W. Campbell, deputy minister of Public Works, yesterday. "I am in favor of having all the expenditure on roads and bridges paid out of the general taxes of the township. I would also like to see a closer union between township, county and Provincial authorities in the construction of roads. What I think would be the ideal plan would be for the expense of all trunk lines of railways to be borne by the three bodies. This would save the present system of making the towns and cities pay a greater share of the cost of maintenance."

Mr. Campbell is just back from the convention of the American Roadmasters' association, held in Fort Huron. One of the important matters discussed was the use of cement concrete for bridges, in which line the delegates from the East have a lot of information. It has been found, after many years' experience, that bridges so built would be the ideal plan would be for the expense of all trunk lines, of railways to be borne by the three bodies. This would save the present system of making the towns and cities pay a greater share of the cost of maintenance.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constant failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

DEATH OF DR. FEE.

Kingston, 1st Sept. — About one o'clock to-day Dr. S. H. Fee, medical health officer of this city, passed suddenly away. Following his usual custom, the deceased went to the home of his brother, William Fee, corner of Princess and Queen streets, for dinner, after the meal he laid down on a lounge for a short time. Later the housekeeper heard sounds of heavy breathing and on entering the room found the doctor unconscious with a bullet wound in the head behind the ear.

Medical aid was immediately summoned, and Drs. A. R. H. Williamson and Campbell did everything possible for the unfortunate man, but he passed quickly away. The deceased had been troubled very much of late from a disease of the optic nerve and his sight has been under treatment. Last evening, about half past ten, he was relieved by his niece, Miss Davidson, and appeared in the best of spirits. The late Dr. S. H. Fee was born in 1840 in the county of Armagh, Ireland, the youngest of a family of eight children. His parents came to Canada early in the 'fifties, and located in Kingston. They soon returned to their native land, however, to remain long. They returned to Kingston and later removed to Sydenham East. The doctor received his primary education in Sydenham, and who kept a school on Sydenham street near Queen street. Next he went to the Kingston academy, and thence to the grammar school, where he matriculated and became a student of the Royal Medical College. He graduated 1862, and performed professional duty in the Federal army during the civil war, 1860-65. He commenced practice in Kingston later, and served as alderman for the Sydenham ward, 1872-73, and was appointed health officer in 1886. He was for a while a member of the public school board, and during that term, 1872, and serving there for three years, was also a member of the city council in 1882.

Besides the deceased was a performer, in religion a Presbyterian, a member of St. Andrew's church. He was ever charitable in opinion, kindly in acts. William Fee and three sisters, Mrs. Andrew Davidson, Mrs. William Shannon, and Mrs. William Massie, Jr., are residents of this city.

Women

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets Hit the Right Spot.

When a woman gets all run down, feels tired and out of sorts it is pretty hard to tell what part of her peculiar organism's causing the trouble.

She takes different medicines, but they do her little good. They don't hit the right spot.

It is useless, for example, taking a stimulant to heal inflammation or correct an irregularity.

Whit the exception of Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women, no compound remedy for the female set exist to-day. To compound remedy we mean one containing the alterative and tonic medical ingredients necessary to regulate and strengthen every organ of the female system.

And that is just what these tablets do.

In taking the ordinary remedies you may miss the very ingredients your system requires. These tablets contain every ingredient. They go to the weak spot wherever it may be.

It is not necessary to guess at the cause of the trouble and perhaps take a few months or a good half a dozen times. It is not necessary to even know exactly the cause of the trouble.

Dr. Hugo's remedy contains something for every organ of the female system; something for the stomach to help indigestion—for the bowels to cure constipation—for the nervous system to tone—for the nerves—for the liver and kidneys to assist them in action in carrying off impurities—something for the uterine system to stop all drains, allay inflammation and make women regular.

The tablets are sure to go to the right spot and get there the first time.

The remedy is now recognized beyond doubt or question as the best adapted to the special needs of sick and run-down women, no matter what the cause.

Mr. Gus B. Geroux, writing from Pembroke, tells how he was injured in a lumber camp. "A heavy sap rolled against my leg and I was laid up with stiffness and a hard swelling. No person can afford to be without Nerviline. Use it for all internal and external pain. Large bottles 25c at all dealers.

A "QUIET" WEDDING.

Belleville Intelligencer, Aug. 30th.

A very pretty and interesting ceremony took place at Holloway Street Methodist Church at noon today, being the wedding of two persons afflicted with that lack of speech and hearing. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. H. Leitch, pastor of the church, and Prof. Coleman, of the institution staff, acted as interpreter, his gestures and signs being vivid enough to be understood by nearly anybody, whether he had taken a course in the sign language or not.

The groom was Mr. Samuel Cornwell, of the Township of Lavant, Lanark County, and the bride Miss Lottie Ann Rogers, of the township of Richmond, County of Lennox. Miss M. Kennedy was bridesmaid and Mr. Vasco Crowder best man. The attendants both belong to Kingston.

Promptly at 12 o'clock the organist, Miss Ethel Grills, began the wedding music, and the quiet little party entered the church. The principals and their attendants formed up in front of the altar railing, and Rev. Mr. Leitch began the simple but beautiful ceremony of the Methodist church. It was all very impressive, and an air of deep reverence prevailed everything. Both principals bowed slightly when it came to the "I will." At that part of the ceremony where the words "forsaking all others" occur, Prof. Coleman's gesture was eloquent. It might easily have meant the renunciation of a kingdom. Very simply and naturally the happy couple (or they looked decidedly happy) plighted their troth, and the minister, in his closing prayer, thanked God that, though these afflicted ones were deprived of some of the blessings of life, they were not deprived of the sweetness and happiness of love and home.

The ceremony over, the little circle of client friends crowded round to congratulate the happy pair. There were smiles and handshakes and kisses, and the bride, looking very sweet, winsome and gentle, graciously received her wedding ring.

So ended the simple service. As other man's burdens have been lightened by dividing them up. Good luck to the happy pair.

THE VALLEY OF SILENCE.

Rev. Abram J. Ryan, of Nobile, in his "Song of the Mystic," has expressed the aspiration of a life soul with the deeper rich imagery of a mystic. I walk down the Valley of Silence,
Down the dim, voiceless valley, alone!
And I hear not the fall of the waterfall
Around me, save God's and my own!
And the hum of my heart is as holy
As hovers where angels have flown.

Long ago was I weary of voices
Whose music my heart could not win;
Long ago was I weary of noises
That fretted my soul with their din;
Long ago was I weary of places
Where I met but the human and sin.

I walked through the world with the world;
I crowed when the world never gave,
And I said, "In the world each ideal,
That pilgrims like a shall crave,"
Is wrecked on the shores of the Real,
Then sleeps like a dream in a grave."

And still did I pine for the perfect,
And still found the flaw in the true;
I sought mid the human for heaven,
And caught a mere glimpse of its blue;
And I wept when the clouds of the mortal
Veiled even that glimpse from my view.

And I toiled on heart-tired of the human,
And I moaned 'mid the masses of men,
Till I heard a voice call me. Since then,
Till I heard long ago as I say,
I walk down the Valley of Silence
That lies far beyond human ken.

Do you ask what I found in the valley?
'Tis my trysting place with the Divine.
And I felt at the feet of the Holy,
And about me a voice said: "Be mine."
And then rose from the depths of my spirit,
An echo, "My heart shall be thine."

Do you ask how I live in the valley?
I weep, and I dream, and I pray;
But my tears are sweet as the dewdrops
That fall on the roses in May;
And my prayer, like a perfume from censer,
Ascendeth to God, night and day.

In the hush of the Valley of Silence,
I dream all the songs that I sing,
And the music floats down the dim valley,
Till each finds a word for a wing,
That to men, like the dove of the deluge,
Shall bring
The message of peace! they may bring.

But far on the deep there are billows
That never shall break on the beach;
And I have heard songs in the spirit
That never shall float into speech,
And I have had dreams in the valley
Too lofty for language to reach.

And I have seen daylights in the valley,
Ah me! how my spirit was stirred!
And they were holy veils on it their faces,
Through which
The Seraphim can scarcely be seen,
They go so through the valley like virgins,
Too pure for the touch of a word.

Do you ask me the place of the valley,
Ye friends that are harrowed by care?
It lieth afar, between mountains,
And God and the angels are there.
And one is the road and the highway,
And one is the gate of the air.

FIFTY CENTS

IN some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion is very rapid. For this reason we put up a fifty-cent size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children. In other conditions the gain is slower—health cannot be built up in a day. In such cases Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment; a food rather than a medicine. It's a food for tired and weak digestions.

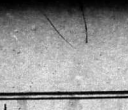
CORRIGAN—O'SULLIVAN.

St. Mary's Church, Marysville, was the scene of a very pretty event on Aug. 23rd, when Miss Margaret O'Sullivan, daughter of Mrs. Wm. O'Sullivan, was united in marriage to Mr. Francis Corrigan, of Hiessington. The Rev. Dean O'Connor performed the ceremony. The bride was prettily attired in cream satin trimmed with silk allover lace,chiffon and chiffon ruching, with hat to match, and carried a white prayer book. She was attended by Miss Ethel Day, sister of the groom, who was most becomingly attired in green silk trimmed with allover lace and chiffon, and wore a white chiffon hat. Mr. Frank O'Sullivan, brother of the bride, supported the groom. After the ceremony the party drove to the residence of the bride's mother, where about fifty guests, among whom were the Rev. Dean O'Connor and Father Lalonde, partook of a sumptuous dejeuner. The many presents which the bride received testified to the high esteem in which she was held by her friends. The gift the bride was a gold watch and chain, to the bridegroom a gold brooch and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links. Mr. and Mrs. Corrigan will reside at Hiessington, where the former is engaged in business on the blacksmithing business. They have the good wishes resting them from scores through life.



How Big Is Two Cents?

The average consumption of flour, per year, by each person in Canada, is about one barrel (196 lbs.).

Suppose you use an inferior flour at a saving of say 75 cents over the cost of a barrel of Royal Household Flour, that is just 6½ cents a month —less than two cents per week.

But an inferior flour can yield only a portion of the nutriment you get out of "Royal Household" because cheap flours are poorly milled, contain a greater proportion of bran and shorts —the granules are not uniform—the bread is heavy—the texture is coarse —the flavor is tasteless or poor—the nutriment is not in it.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR, being perfectly milled, is uniform in texture—makes bread that is light and waferlike—white as snow—finely flavored—highest in nutriment

"Royal Household" is electrically purified and sterilized—backed up and guaranteed by its makers' reputation.

THE WITCH OF CRAGENSTONE

"Ho, ha!" Taunston laughed discordantly. "I' truth, 'tis no wonder thou hast sprains," he said, with deep significance, "when thou doth keep such devil's implements about thee. Thou'lt have worse than sprains an thou takest not more care, good neighbor."

At the ominous words and manner of his visitor the goldsmith's face paled, and his jaw dropped as he stared at him, aghast. Almost unconsciously he laid the chain down.

"What meanst thou?"

Josiah shook his head sadly and let his long face grow longer as he said: "Oft and many a time have I reasoned with Margaret Mayland against the wearing of that idolatrous emblem, urging her that it would do her harm, but she, ever o'er headstrong, would not heed me, which fact I much deplore. My mother, a woman widely known for her wisdom, asserteth that from the day our cousin brought that cross among us we have been sorely beset with misfortunes. First the drought. We have not had a drop since the big storm. How can planted seed grow? And then the disease among the sheep. Our lambs most all ha' died. Ah, lackaday, 'tis a great loss to a hardworking, saving man!"

He sighed drearily.

"An', Adam, I repeat it, woe to us all the day that accurst cross was brought to this village!"

The goldsmith, possessing even more than the customary large amount of superstition held by his neighbors, glanced fearfully about him, moving farther along the bench from the cross and chain, and Josiah, seeing the suppression he was making, continued with solemn emphasis:

"But, lifted ye, we would not ha' given thanse to our cousin's headstrong persistency so readily had I not held converse with a French peddler, a dealer in magic charms, who told me on his oath that crosses of gold were known among men of his trade to be possessed of devils tind to bring harm to all who touched them."

So great was the superstition of that period, so firm the belief in charms, black art and magic, that the goldsmith, almost overcome by the knowledge of his danger, fairly trembled with apprehension.

"Lord ha' mercy! I'll send the wicked gewgaw home by-the-stranger," he said, "an he comes in from the wedding."

After an interchange of a few more words Josiah proceeded on his way, and old Adam was left alone in his room, that was half kitchen, half workshop. At first he walked about nervously, casting timid glances at the golden trinket on the bench, now glittering in the warm embrace of a sunbeam that had fallen on it; then, as if forcing himself to action and brave determination, he stood erect, found a piece of paper, laid it on the bench and procured a pair of tongs, with which he lifted the chain and cross, placing them upon it. His hands trembled. Adam's face was white and his breath came in gasps as, barely touching the edges of the wrapping, he hastily made it into a small parcel.

"Other pains I ha' had," he muttered, "An' in the while I was thinking of my lumbago came from cold! Ah, woe, woe! Such evil days as we ha' fallen on! Good Lord, ha' mercy, I pray, an' keep us safe."

CHAPTER XIV.

UNDER a tree that spread its leafy branches over the garden that stretched out before the house the young mistress of the Mayland farm, wearing a dress of thinnest white linen, sat with her lover on a wooden bench. Both were silent. La Fabienne watching with interest the endeavors of a young robin that was struggling with a large ground worm and Margaret absorbed in her own thoughts, that seemed from the pensive serious expression on her face to be far away and troublesome.

Although large clouds had spread themselves over the sky, obscuring the sun, the heat of the afternoon seemed to exceed that of the morning. Not a leaf stirred; the dogs lay motionless in the shade, the air in the barn was close, surcharged with heat and hedgy. Giles, passing with a wagon load of stones, touched his hat respectfully, calling to them in a voice that was in sight, as the clouds were forming for a thunderstorm.

"An' from the looks of yon black cloud methinks 'twill be a rough one, good Giles," La Fabienne replied; then, turning to Margaret, who at the interruption of her meditation had drawn a quick breath, half a sigh, half an expression of unpleasant thought, inquired, "Hath lightning terrors for thee, sweet?"

"Nay, not now, when thou art here," she said gently, laying her hand on his sleeve with a caressing touch, "but last night, Godfrey, I had a dream of evil omen that, I confess, hath disturbed me. I dreamt that enemies by treatgeous took from me; then came telling me that thou wert in this place and that to taunt me. Wild eyed, my hair hanging down my back and flowing long and free as in days of distress, I followed their directions only to find upon my arrival that thou wert not there. Oh, Godfrey, 'twas an awful night! An' the terror of it hangs over me today."

"Bon Dieu," he exclaimed, pressing the small hand affectionately, "how art thou changed from the laughing Margaret who but lately dwelt in Paris! Away with such megrims, sweet! 'Tis this dull village, filled with scurvy Puritans, that wearieth and unnerves, I do protest. I' truth, Margaret," he continued more thoughtfully, "a man whose hath been to sea be much at court as mine hath seen many sides of life, but beshrew me if I have ever before encountered such ignorance, intolerance and narrow minded bigotry as doth here exist. Ofttimes when lounging about the inn and perforce listening to the conversation and arguments of these sorry wights I fain must call for another bumper in an endeavor to raise my sinking spirits lest I do myself harm from sheer depression."

He laughed lightly at his jest, and Margaret smiled.

"Then the manner of my cousin Josiah Taunston and his mother doth grieve me," she continued softly. "They make their avoidance of me so plain, and Hetty, whom I love, is forbid my house. Each day I receive an added slight from them, one day this, another that. Last night when one of the shepherds brought me word that two more lambs were stricken with the disorder that was spreading among the sheep, causing much loss and damage. So when I was dressed I crossed over to mine aunt's house to ask of her the remedy she had for the malady. To my civil greeting she returned a surly nod, did not invite me to enter for the trouble and my glove I must take it was constant prayer. Then she advised me with sneers and grim insinuations to ask God on my knees to lift the evil out of my heart and to scatter the black and evil spirits that had to all appearances obtained control of me."

"Talked she so to thee, sweet?" Sir Godfrey cried angrily. "Thou gooth there from me no more! She hath cut thee because thou wilt not love Josiah!"

"And when I was going down the path," Margaret continued, "I met Hetty coming from the brook with the covers, and when she stopped to give me greeting her mother called to her quite coldly from the doorway to come on at once, as if she feared I would do Hetty harm," she concluded sadly.

For a time La Fabienne sat quietly, maintaining an angry silence; then he said:

"Margaret, methought once to go away for the nonce and then come back for thee. But now, when I go, I'll take thee with me, and we'll return no more."

Margaret slipped her hand into his with clinging fingers.

"Godfrey, oh, my love," she whispered, with tears standing in her eyes, "there is a terror, an apprehension undefined, hanging over me. The cold looks of these people weigh heavy on my heart. Take me with thee when thou goest."

"An thou say the word we go tomorrow," he exclaimed sternly, holding the small hand strongly in his own.

"Right willingly would I, Godfrey, for without my dear father naught pleasant here doth hold me. But cares of the estate, the selection of a permanent overseer, which I find difficult; new buildings for the tenants, now in construction, and many matters of importance to mine interests will keep me here a few weeks longer. Clothe thy soul in patience for that small time, dear Godfrey"—she tried her head quickly, smiling through her tears—"an' when thou seest a solemn face that doth depress thee"—

"I'll think of thine, my winsome love," he interrupted happily, pleased at the change in her mood, "a face as beauteous to mine eyes that when a remembrance of it shall flash across my mental vision I swear that all black horrors will disappear, melted away, verily, by the radiance of it."

"Thou flatterer, Godfrey!" Margaret exclaimed softly, her lips curving into a smile. "Such high sounding praises come easily to a courtier, Nay"—she raised her finger warningly—"swearnot by"—

One of the lads from the village coming around the corner of the house in their direction caused Margaret to pause, the unspoken words on her lips.

Much embarrassed at coming upon the person of Sir Godfrey La Fabienne so unexpectedly, the boy hesitated, pulled his forelock bashfully, then stood still, uncertain whether to advance or retreat. Margaret, seeing his confusion, beckoned him to approach.

"What is thine errand, good lad?"

"The tiny trinket, Mistress Maylind, that my gran'ther, Adam Browdie, the goldsmith, hath mended for thee, an', with your leave, mistress"—timidly giving her the parcel—"he did charge me to say that he would ha' mended it before had it not been for the inconvenience of a sprain."

La Fabienne, who had unfastened the wrapping, was now examining the workmanship critically.

"'Tis finely wrought and jointed together skillfully, Margaret," he said. "Here, lad," throwing Christopher a gold piece; "here's a coin for thy grandfather's trouble."

The boy, much pleased, caught the gold piece, doffed his cap and walked away. Just then a flash of lightning streaked the sky that had now grown thickly covered with black clouds, followed by a low, rumbling sound of thunder, causing the boy to pause and look about him doubtfully.

Margaret, who had risen, called to him to remain; to go back and wait in the kitchen with the maids until the storm was over, but Christopher shook his head and, muttering that the goldsmith would be angry if he delayed, ran down to the turnstile, sprang over it and, hurriedly deciding that the path through the forest would be the quickest way home, plunged into the thicket.

Hardly was he under the shelter of the trees when a pattering sound was heard, and the rain beat down in great drops. Then the wind rose in a wild fury, the tall trees bent and swayed, tussling with its rough strength, and the grass and vines were swept down even with the earth.

Christopher, holding his jacket close about him, with his cap in his hand, walked on quickly, inwardly congratulating himself upon the fact that he had been wise enough to seek the sheltered path through the woods instead of the open roadway that was unprotected by high trees. Little, sharp flashes of lightning appeared almost constantly, and the thunder was constant, low, threatening, ominous. Innocent of his danger and not understanding the harsh, grating sounds of warning from the heavens, Christopher proceeded on his way. Now the clouds had grown so thick and black that the forest was almost as dark as night, and the rain fell in blinding torrents. Soon a sharp flash of lightning ran zigzag through the sky, then a clap of thunder louder than the report of a cannon resounded from end to end of the village.

Christopher gave a wild scream of terror and stood still, uncertain whether to advance or go back. Although the forest was familiar playground to him, he seemed to lose his way and staggered on blindly until, a long, vivid flash of lightning illuminating his path, he found his bearings, and, remembering the cave on the other side of the precipice now near at hand, he resolved to seek safety and shelter there. With the wind and rain beating him backward, he climbed the steep ascent, clinging with his hands and feet to the roots and bushes in his way until he reached the top, where was a precipice, with water rushing in wild turmoil fifty feet beneath. Now the lightning was so near as to appear to be playing through the forest in long flashes of brilliant light, and the dark clouds almost touched the tops of the trees. Suddenly, with awful violence, the wind rushed shrilly over the mountain.

The boy, pale with terror, on the edge of the precipice, wound his arms about the trunk of a tall oak tree, clinging to it for support and protection. He dared not move another step, and the thought of reaching the cave was abandoned. Another blinding flash, followed by two more in quick succession! The poor young lad, who could not swim, was in the midst of the awful disturbance of the elements, frantic with terror, sent forth scream after scream that the wind and rain defied human ears to hear above their boisterous noise and din. Then the clouds opened, showing light like the blast from a furnace, and Oh, God!—a peal of thunder so loud that the village people with prayers on their lips fell on their knees, raising their white faces to be seen.

The tall oak tree was struck and rent asunder; flames shot up, were put out by the heavy rain, and clouds of steaming smoke filled the forest. The large tree staggered, then fell with a sharp noise of crashing branches that drowned the sickening sound of the dull thud of Christopher's body as it fell lifeless from the edge of the precipice into the swirling, tumbling rapids of the angry waters below. Nor was heard the clanking ring of the gold coin as it fell, striking against the rocks with a short, metallic sound, from his stiffening fingers.

"I must refuse thee."

ing is a sin that sends the soul to eternal punishment, for so our preacher hath ever taught us, and my brother Josiah would count me out of the house an he heard I indulged in such practices."

Sir Godfrey, inclining his head courteously, walked away, and Margaret threw down her lute, interposing hastily to cover Hetty's embarrassment.

"What ails thee, man, that thou would ask a Puritan maid to dance? Thou must excuse him, Hetty, as he knows not the plous customs of our mountain people. Come, dear Godfrey, read to us from thy new volume of Will Shakespeare. 'Twill delight sweet Hetty, who hath great love for poetry, and as for me," she added, with a smile, "thou knowest the sound of thy voice is ever music in mine ears."

In reading and pleasant converse the afternoon passed so rapidly that it was after milking time when Hetty bethought herself of the lateness of the hour. Hurriedly saying her farewells, she ran down the roadway to the fence, passed over the stile and went hastily in the direction of the pasture, where the cows, unaccustomed to such irregularity, had assembled at the bars, bellowing low plaintive calls for release.

Breathless and panting, Hetty let down the bars and, picking up a stick, proceeded to urge the cattle to a greater rate of speed than was usually necessary. If her mother had returned unexpectedly she was lost! Frightened at the thought, she gave the last cow in the line a sharp prod with the stick, who, not accustomed to such rough treatment, looked back at her reproachfully, then galloped awkwardly ahead of the others. The cows once in the yard, Hetty ran to get a few moments to collect the pails and stool for milking.

Other evenings Hetty sat down to the operation cheerfully, usually singing lightly to the accompaniment of the soft sound of the milk streaming into the pail, but tonight the task was distasteful to her. She took her seat with a jerk and exclaimed irritably when the cow, in order to brush a fly from her flank, switched her tail across her face. "Keep still, thou old beldam cow! Dost think I want mine eyes scratched out o' my head?"

Although under the skillful manipulations of her hands the pails filled rapidly; Hetty's thoughts were not upon her occupation, but were overcome by shadows of the Maryland farmhouse, with La Fabienne and Margaret. The poetical and romantic vein that ran through the girl's nature had been touched by the afternoon's entertainment. The handsome dress of Sir Godfrey and his gallant bearing, combined with the exquisite beauty of Margaret in her soft flowing gown of white linen, caused Hetty's little heart to ache with sympathetic yearning.

"Was ever seen such a bonny pair o' lovers?" she thought. "Such truth, such evidence of love in every action! Ah, lackaday, woe is me!"

At the sighed hopelessly.

"No lover more gallant than a Puritan farmer, and instead of a lute : milk bucket!"

At last, her task finished, she carried the heavy pails to the dairy.

"Methought Sir Godfrey regarded me with a pleasant gaze," she said to herself as she rested on a churn near the door.

Then as a sudden thought seemed to strike her she raised her face quickly, her eyes beaming with the light of love.

"An I had had the roses in my hair and had worn my new lace tucker, mayhap he would ha' admired me more," she said. "As 'tis, perchance, he might speak o' me to a comrade high in favor at the French court who would fall in love with his description and come bravely here to woo me."

The thought was so pleasant to the imaginative, romantic soul of little Hetty that, forgetting to pour the milk into the pans and set them away for the cream to rise, she sat on the edge of the churn, her head resting against the wall, lost in her rosy hued day dreams. With her hand in her imaginary lover's, who wore a suit of light blue velvet trimmed with silver braiding, she was just making a low courtesy before the king of France when her illusions were roughly dispelled by the loud, hearty voice of Goodwife Foster, who having seen his adored Hetty enter the dairy, followed in her footsteps to have a chat with her. From the excessive heat and the exercise of carrying a sack of potatoes a long distance Simon's face was red and perspiring; his rough suit of homespun, unbuttoned at the throat, soiled and shabby, hung loosely on his sturdy figure, and his broad feet forming but mats of reeds was torn and broken at the edges. He laid down the sack and entered.

Startled from her brilliant dreams by Simon's appearance, Hetty's thoughts fled from the court of the King of France and fastened themselves upon matters of the present, the most important of which were the full milk pails. Springing off the churn and seizing the nearest pail, she grit with an absent smile of greeting, she proceeded to fill the row of pewter pans with the white foaming milk.

Leaning himself with his broken hat, Simon watched her from his place at the door with admiring eyes. It occurred to him that Hetty had never before looked so pretty. The red color in her cheeks had heightened; her eyes were brighter; she held her little head higher, and in his estimation went about her homely task in the same manner as would have a queen. Looking at her white throat, he thought of the silver heart lying on her fair bosom that he had given her and that she had received with so much pleasure—a sweet secret safe between him and Hetty—and his honest heart gave a great throb.

Stepping to her side, he asked her for a song of milk. Hetty's pleasant afternoon and her consequent happy day dreams had left her in sort of an uplifted state. She wished good fortune to all and gave Simon the refreshment he demanded, with a smile of happiness.

"Poor Simon," she thought as she carried the first full pan to the buttery. "What a kind friend he hath ever been to me. There's many a lonely hour I would ha' spent without him. When my dad doth come and I ride away I shall not forget Simon. Happen anon I may have influence to have the maid lackey at the court."

Returning for another pan, with her heart and mind full of her good intentions, Hetty bestowed a more than ordinary sweet glance of esteem and kindly feeling upon her visitor, whose heart, always full of love for her, ached now to bursting with fancied encouragement. Only when wearing his new churchgoing black suit, he thought, had she ever given him kinder glances; so, regardless of his untidy appearance, he grasped the astonished Hetty in his arms, and thoughts that for months had been filling his mind now took the form of words and sprang from his lips in sentences expressing his passionate love for her.

"Art gone daft, Simon? Ha' done, I tell thee!" she cried in angry surprise, struggling to free herself from his strong embrace.

"Hetty, say the word," he entreated. "Promise to be my wife. Plight thy troth with me."

"Coward," she cried, "to bold a maid against her will! Dost think I want a cowboy for a husband?"

He loosed his hold and drew back as if stung, with staring eyes and a face from which all color had gone.

"Then will not love me, Hetty?" he asked solemnly. "An' all our sweet friendship is to go for naught?"

"Love thee?" Hetty gave her head a toss. "Whoe'er put thoughts of my loving thee into thine idle brain? Nay, silly. Look not so downcast," she cried, "an' take my best assurance that our friendship hath not been in vain, for so dear I hold thee in my heart that but e'en now before thou spokest thy foolish utterances I was making plans for thine advancement."

Statistics show that in fifty years the average height of British men has risen an inch. The present average height for a man of twenty is five feet eight and one-half inches.

It is a custom with the Rothschild family that one of the partners shall be on hand during business hours, and from this rule no departure is ever made.

Senator Depew recently gave utterance to this burst of philosophy, "The man who laughs is a doctor without a diploma. His face does more good in a sick room than a bushel of powders or a gallon of bitter draughts. People are always glad to see him. Their hands instinctively go half way to meet his grasp, while they turn involuntarily from the clammy touch of the dyspeptic who speaks in the groaning key. He laughs you out of your faults, while you never dream of being offended with him, and you never know what a pleasant world you are living in until he points out the sunny streaks in its pathway."

A DRESS GOODS STOCK AND A DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT

THAT WE ARE PROUD OF.

Our Dress Goods Department starts the Fall 1906 as the best yet. You may test it from any point you wish. The fact remains that you will go many a mile to find its equal in size, variety, exclusiveness of style, value and service. Miss Smith, the head of this department, has established a Dress Goods Department record that any dry goods house might envy. She has with her expert assistants who know how to assist a customer in selecting proper styles. Our dressmaking department is at your service too. Whether garments are to be made by us or not. Stocks are now complete, We mention some, after all only a few. If you have a dress goods need or expect to even, put us to the test. That is the better way to demonstrate our supremacy in doing the dress goods business right.

A Correction.

Last week we intimated that we did not have two Women's Fall Coats exactly alike. Since writing we have discovered a few exceptions, but so very few that you can almost count them on one hand. When you consider that we show hundreds of coats, all different from your neighbor, you will readily see the advantage in buying from us. We are now in our new Ready-to-wear Department. Lots of room and best of light Come and see the new coats, for from the youngest up.

New and Beautiful Dress Fabrics of Wool and Silk

The New Dress Goods for Fall are in, and the showing is very complete. Almost every fabric dedicated to the goodness of fashion can be seen here.

The Dry Goods Economist, New York, says (and it is the authority on Dry Goods) in its issue of Aug. 26th, "that for fall the leading materials are Broadcloths, Panama Weaves, Serges, Mohairs and Henriettas." There is also a feeling that Plaids will show considerable activity.

The Economist also states that there is a desire to bring out freak shades of purple and blues, but these colors are not looked upon to gain any prominence. Speaking from the standpoint of general popularity, the correct colors are:

Greens, Browns, Greys, Navy Blues, Modes, and as is always the case, a lot of Blacks.

Our stock for Fall comprises all these qualities and colors—just what New York says is correct.

We never had the pleasure of showing a better stock in point of quality, variety, durability and value. You will not be doing yourself justice if you do not at least look over our stock before deciding upon the Dress material which will have so much to do with your appearance this coming season. Mr. Treleaven, who is in charge of this department, will be glad to show you the new things and the price.

Silks. A large shipment of Chiffon Taffeta and Japan Taffeta just received, at 50c and 75c per yard—all colors.

Ladies' Ready-to-wear Garments. New Skirts, New Mantlee, New Wrappers, New Lustre and Silk Waists, New Raincoats, New Golf Jackets and New Millinery in abundance.

Sole agents in Napanee for Puritan Underwear for ladies and children.

Those from the village who will attend the Model School at Napanee are Miss Elsie Moore, Miss Mattie Wellbanks, Fraser Paul, Roy Farley, Fred. Meers.

The Newburgh contingent for the Toronto fair could not get a seat on the train when No. 2 pulled out of the station on Monday. In fact the crowd had to drop their grips on the car platforms and stand hanging on to their lunch baskets, over which they kept a careful watch. On a morning when such a crowd was expected the railway company might have furnished an extra coach. Those leaving for Toronto on Monday were:—J. B. Aylesworth, G. F. Hill and wife, Jerome Estes and Miss Estes, H. J. Wood and wife, Miss Gardier, M. W. Simkins, Mrs. McKeisnter, Miss McKeisnter, Edgar Mc Keisnter, Joseph Tait, Miss Leichhead, Miss Edna Hinch, C. H. A sad affair occurred here yesterday when the young child of Charles Hilts choked to death by an apple core lodging in the throat. Everything that medical aid could do was done, but without avail the poor fellow soon breathed his last, after terrible suffering. He was a bright, healthy little lad, between two and three years of age. The parents have the sympathy of all in their grief.

Threshing machines are the great rush with our farmers now. Some seemingly slow men get on in a hurry.

Miss Jennie Filson, who has been teaching school near home for nearly two years, has resigned and gone to the Northwest. We hope she will like her work there as well as here.

Is it true that another of our Island girls is soon going west also? We hope she will think more seriously of the matter and not leave her many friends.

Quite a number from here are attending Bath High school this year. There are also a few going to Kingston Collegiate Institute.

Stella is getting lively again. We are looking forward to a dance on Friday evening and a social Saturday evening in the town hall.

MEN OF ONE TALENT

REV. DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON FOR LABOR DAY.

DRIVING THE LAST SPIKE

The Preacher Shows What the Humble Every Day Workers Can Do For the Welfare and Happiness of a Nation —No Workmen Are Useless — The Hebrew Talent—"To Another One."

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Louis Tiers, of Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 3.—In this Labor day sermon the preacher appropriately takes for his theme the great army of the invisible every day workers upon whose faithful use of their single talent in their particular sphere depends the welfare and happiness of a nation. The text is Matthew xxv, 15, "To another one."

"The Driving of the Last Spoke" is to me one of the most suggestive pictures ever painted. Not because it is the work of Thomas Hill, one of America's famous artists, who in his lifetime has been awarded thirty-two first medals in competition with other painters; not because copies of that picture have been distributed "broadcast over the country in thousands of wood cuts, not because I personally have in the old attic in my father's house, helpless as a little child and therefore, on account of the personality of the man and the sentiment awakened by the power of the picture, but that picture has thrilled me through and through because of a epoch marking picture. It is a picture which shows a marriage altar, where the far east and the far west — where the Union railroad and the Central Pacific railroad—were united by the wedding ring of a steel rail. It illustrates the dramatic moment when the great work of Leland Stanford and C. P. Huntington and Charles Crocker and Mark Hopkins was consummated. In the presence of some of the most prominent men, north, south, east and west, the golden spike was driven which forever made the east and the west, the metropolis of New York and the metropolis of California next door neighbors.

Vast was the amount of brain and physical energy expended which made the enterprise of future possibility. Over the mountains down into the valleys, the leaping rivers and the ravines, has gone the train of that locomotive that see puffing and panting behind Leland Stanford as the first president of the Central Pacific drives in the golden spike. Far, far away from any human realm of those were the workmen. Cannot you see the track of the buffalo and the prairie dogs look up in wonderment as that strange looking creature called a railroad train dashes by? "How could a man have hundreds and thousands and tens of thousands of men at work for him, as did Leland Stanford, and not have thousands of financial leakages, which would sweep away his entire fortune?" I asked a great railroad contractor when talking about the lessons of this picture. He answered, "Perfect organization," he answered. "Each man has his allotted work to do. Each man is responsible for a piece of men or for certain sections of the work, until you get down to the lowest hod and the lowest workman digging in the ditch. The success of Leland Stanford's railroad enterprises, depends as much upon the men of one talent doing their work honestly as it does upon the men of five or ten talents doing their work honestly and well." Great lesson is that—great in temporal life, great in spiritual. God has no insignificant workmen in the purpose for which the human race was created. The people who are considered ordinary folks are just as essential in God's great economy as the men styled mental giants.

No workmen useless or unimportant in God's sight. Oh, yes, we can prove that by the value of the old He'ver talent as well as by the conversation of the great railroad contractor in reference to Thomas Hills' "Driving of the Last Spike." Was the Hebrew talent a small capital with which to start life's battles? No. That talent represented about 2,000 shekels of silver or about $1,616 in American money. Then when you furthermore estimate that the laborer in Christ's day received only a penny a day, which in our money would be an equivalent of about 15 cents, you can readily understand that the good man of the parable of my text gave to even the humblest of his servants an equivalent of about $2,000 in our money. That is no small amount of money to put out at interest. And as this Labor Sunday to the clerk, the servant, the laborers in the ditch, the common soldier and the common church member God gives "A powerful one talent." My object is to talk about some of the unwritten books which would show their vast influence upon the great wide world, if would only show why all of us ordinary folks should employ well the talent God has given us to use.

In the first place, study the influence of the one talented folks in the mercantile world. Your wife some day says to you: "Come, my dear, let us go shopping. You have a day off. There is no reason for you not spending the day with me." In a moment of mental weakness you go shopping. Why do I say in a moment of mental weakness? I do not believe any man on earth can look more out of place and feel more uncomfortable and miserable than in an average dry goods store. There the women push you from side to side. When you are not stepping on your own feet you are stepping on the trailing dress of some lady's dress. Then before you have any time to say, "Excuse me, madam," some other woman knocks you in the back, and your head flies back, until your neck feels as though it would spinal meningitis. And then if you are unfortunate enough to get near to a city bargain counter you will find that you is there training for a college football field and you are the "centre rush," while every woman has a right to push you, and you are called "no gentleman" if you dare to push back. Women have certain rights, where no man has any rights. One of their rights is to be left in undisputed possession of a woman's dry goods store.

But, though you may have many unfortunate experiences as you go shopping with your wife in a great city, there is one powerful lesson you will learn there. When you enter a great dry goods emporium, where millions of dollars' worth of goods are sold every year, the floor-walker who greets you at the door, the clerk who sells you the goods over the counter, the delivery man who hands the parcels in at the door, are all one talented folks. If that clerk is disrespectful, if the young man in the shoe department does not wait upon you promptly and kindly you will put that store in disgust. In a large dry goods store as an ordinary customer you rarely ever meet the owner, the great European buyer or the owner of the store. You deal with the common one talented clerk. Nearly all the work in a large retail store are sold by one talent clerks, and in this way these clerks treat their employer's customers just as how much those customers will buy. It not this illustrations are conclusive proof to you of the mighty influence and power of the one talent people?

The one talented man says to me: "I am only an insignificant atom in my employer's business. I am only a drop of water in a great ocean, a grain of sand half miles deep and 2,000 miles wide. I am only a leaf afnid a whole forest of autumnal foliage. I am only a little flickering candle light in a horizon that makes the flaming chariots of the noontide sun. I do not amount to anything." Oh, yes, my brother, you do. The clerk is the same as the book writer or a salesman or a saleswoman you are not an insignificant atom, though you may occupy a very humble place. You are not a drop of water amid an ocean of heaving billows. You are not a leaf in a forest of autumnal foliage. You are not a little flickering candle light by the glory of the noontide sun, but you are the cogs of a wheel which are absolutely essential to make the machine go. If the little cogs are gone, then the wheel stops. If the wheel stops, then all the vast machinery of the factory is halted. In the great railroad engine the boiler, generating steam power that draws the long line of freight cars, is absolutely essential, but are not the piston rods and the driving wheels and the truck and the coal tender and the furnace and all the other parts of the locomotive just as essential?

What would you think of the wood of the branch of a great tree looking down in disgust at the roots just exposed when the sod is turned over by the farmer's spade? Why would you think if those branches would say: "Oh, you filthy, dirty roots. Why are you in yonder darkness? Can you not array yourselves in my coat of many colors? I will have none of you?" Well, to-day the owner of the great dry goods store can no more be independent of his clerks than the tree branch can be independent of the tree roots. What would you think of the wood of the tall mast despising the wood of the ship's keel? Can the hand say to the wrist, "I have no need of thee?" Can the foot say to the eye, "I have no need of thee?" Can the heart say to the lung, "I have no need of thee?" Neither can the dry goods store say to the counter, "I have no need of thee." The one talent clerk is just as essential for the marvelous success of that great mercantile world as is the ten talent capitalist. The Hebrew talent is the financial capital which God places in the hand of the ordinary, everyday, commonplace clerk who sells the goods over the store counter.

The chief of the one talented stone-cutter writes whole pages in the chapters of the world's progress as well as the pen of the statesman, the lawyer and the social sage. Henry Ward Beecher some years ago in a sermon vividly described an expert stone-cutter coming into this country as an immigrant. He knows no one and no one knows him, but when he applies for work at one of the big stoneyards in Brooklyn the foreman gives him a stone to cut. Here is a queer or form; there is a branch of what is to be a flower. He works on and by patience and toil. After awhile, when the work on that block is done, the foreman comes and gives to him another stone. He carves that stone and still another are taken away. He has no idea what use will be made of these stones, but one day looking down the street in front of the art gallery, over the doorway he sees the stones upon which he has worked. He did not know what those stones were for, but the architect did, and as he stands looking at his work, and sees the beauty of the whole street, the tears drop down from his eyes and he says, "I am glad I did it well," and every day as he passes that way he says to himself exultantly, "Yes, I am glad that I am glad I did it well!" Ah, yes, that stonecutter had a right to exultantly cry, "I did it well!" He not only done his work well the design of the architect would have been utterly helpless without his exquisite touch. Only I find every stone will and every pitch-ing press and every paved street and every house and every church and every ship and every bridge and every tower and every cathedral waiting for the one talented mechanic. Did I not do my work well? Ah, ye laborers and mechanics in overalls, never neglect the essential work God has given you to do.

But I must speak to another class of one talented folks. They are the household servants, which the parable of my text mentions by name. They are the servants, the trig servants, who, as King Solomon expressed it, "were born in my house." They are up with the lark the very eye of their master. Because he felt he could trust them he delivered into them his precious possessions.

Let me illustrate the parable. The master is about to leave for the country. All the different men and women about the farm and the fields are gathered into one room. The master goes to one and says, "John, I will make you responsible for my cattle." To another he says, "Peter, I will let you tend to the plowing and the sowing." To another he says, "James, you take care of the sheep and see that their wool is sheared at the right time." These are all five talented men. Each one is a superintendent of a department and has a large number of employes under him. Then, after giving forth some of the two talents and also some of the one talents, at last the master turns to one of his servants. Methinks I see him look at her searchingly, tenderly, lovingly and pleadingly. She does not look at him though she was a mental genius. But she had a good face. She looks as though she was faithful and true. Then the good master says: "Mary, I can give to thee but one talent. That is all thou art able to use. But, oh, it is a talent dear to me. I am going to trust to thee my children. While I am away I am going to leave them in thy charge. Thou art to be their nurse. Thou art to remain behind as a household servants." And of all one talented people do you know of any who have greater opportunities of usefulness and greater responsibilities for doing good than the one talented household servants—the cook, the chambermaid and the nurse?

Weigh her one talent as she bends over the cradle as nurse. Next to being a mother, the most tremendous responsibility that can come to any ordinary young woman is to be left in sole charge of a nursery. How great an influence that is but few people seem to realize! Some time ago a worldly man was taunting a celebrated pastor because his great congregations were made up, for the most part, of common people and servant girls. "I know it," said the noted divine. "My church is composed for the most part of just such converts as Christ and his apostles used. But as for the servant girls, I had rather be instrumental in converting them than almost any other class of people, for the servant girls as nurses have charge of all the growing children." But, though the latter has opportunity on earth that can come to the average one talented young woman is to be a nurse, yet many women seem to flee that noble occupation as they would a virulent plague. They would rather go and peddle groceries or pin cushions or tend to factory machines than mould boys and girls into mighty men and women for God. Do you nurses! Oh, ye young women whom God has sent as faithful Mitiams to watch the infant Moses, great is your calling! Do your work well. That boy by your side if you are faithful and true under God may some day lead his people out of an Egyptian bondage. That yo ung girl, through your prayers, may some day be able to raise a whole family of Christian sons and daughters. On the transcendent one talent of the Christian nurse upon the home—life! What we say in reference to the influence of the one talent mother and the influence upon the home of the Christian cook and the Christian chambermaid. Never neglect the humble but far reaching life's work of the one talented household domestic.

If the nation is dependent upon the loyalty of its one talented workers how much more loyalty can we state that our church, the beloved church of Jesus Christ, is dependent also upon the loyalty of its one talented members. When Christ established his church from branches of the tree draw his first recruits? Did they come from the palace. Did they come from the merchant prince's mansion? Did they come from the tents of the Roman generals? Oh, no. They came from the fisherman's fist, from the laborer's fields, from the homes of the one talented folks. The true Christian church had its congregation not clothed in silks or satins, but in homespun. The aristocracy despised Christ's disciples on account of their humble social positions. "The common people heard him gladly." Not the learned scribes and Pharisees were they. Not the geniuses in finance and statecraft. His people were the ordinary commonplace, one talented workshipers.

It was the one talented Christians who composed the Christian church. Has it not always been the one talented people who have carried it on? Who were the Christians who made the reformation of Martin Luther possible? Who were the Christians who brought John Knox shake of Scotland and shake the world? Who were the Christians who came over in the Mayflower and established the Puritan church of the Plymouth colony? From whence did John Wesley and Charles Wesley and George Whitefield draw most of their followers? Who made Finney and Moody the mighty religious factors they were? For the most part, the great successes of church members have been and are to-day taken from the ranks of the common people. It is the one talented folks who crowd our pews to-day. When you take the one talented folks out of the church, like Samson, whose hair was shorn by the shears of an evil mistress, will decay and as a mighty spiritual and temporal power will lose her entire strength. Make one talented many, you think, you do not amount to much in God's church! Woman—one talented woman—you do not have a full right to influence in prayer meeting and in Sunday school and in church pew! The church of Jesus Christ is to-day made up of the laborers and members upon the one talented people. You may belong to but class, but never desert the temple of God, which he calls his divine church.

But I am trying to show the importance of the one talented people in the store, the factory, the home and the church. I must not end here. I must show you that, though your influence is worldwide, yet there is no class of people on earth who are so ready to shirk their tasks as the one-talented folks. The teaching of this parable is absolutely true. Every one talented men went to work. They are in the treadmills. They cannot stop and get out. They have to go ahead or be ground to pieces. But the one talented men think that their work is of so little importance that they can stop any time and no one cares.

I enter a great mercantile store. "Come," I say, "let us lie ourselves off to the woods." "Nay, nay," says he. I cannot stop. If I did not keep working and keep my men working the payroll of my business would soon land me in the bankruptcy court." "Come," I say to a minister of Jesus Christ, "come, let us run away from here." "I cannot," says he, "the congregation will meet Sunday morning. If I am not there there will be no one to lead them in worship." But though the great merchant feels the importance of his position in the store and the minister of his position in the pulpit, how very few of the common people feel the importance of their work and their presence in the church of God for the salvation of the world and Christ.

Oh, ye one talented folks, never let a day pass without reckoning up the importance of your prayers, your service and your consecration to God for the consummation of Christ's mission on earth! May you here and now, in your ordinary lives, says: "O, Christ, take me! Take my home, take my children, take my all for thy service! Teach me to make good use of the one talent which is mine and thine!"

Agony After Eating.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cure the Worst Cases of Indigestion.

"I suffered so much with indigestion that my life had become a burden," says Miss Nellie Archibald, of Winchester, N.S. "Every time I took even the lightest meal it caused me agony after eating. Take my home, I was afraid to go out visiting for a choking sensation in the region of my heart, which seriously alarmed me. My inability to properly digest food, left me so weak and broken down that I could not perform even the lightest housework, and I would lie out doors by the hour in a chair. I sought medical aid and tried several medicines, but without getting relief. Then I was asked by a lady who lived at a considerable distance, and who had been an invalid, what was the matter with me, and she then told me how much good Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had done her, and how she had been cured through using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and this decided me to try them myself. I got a box, practically, as a last resort. In the course of a few weeks there was a notable change in my condition. I felt better in every way. The trouble that was afflicting me left my meals. From that on I began to gain new strength, and by the time I had used five boxes I was free from the trouble had vanished and I was once more in good health. I have used Pink Pills since and my return of the trouble has never occurred."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure indigestion because they make rich, red blood that brings tone and strength to the stomach. Nearly all the common ailments are due to bad blood, and when the red blood is turned into good blood by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the trouble disappears. That is why they cure anaemia, dizziness, heart palpitation, nervous debility, kidney trouble, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, and certain forms of headache, such as neuralgia, paralysis and St. Vitus dance. That is why they bring ease and comfort to all stages of womanhood and old age. They are a specific for ailments when the body supply becomes weak or impure. But you must get the genuine pills, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Imitations which some dealers offer have cure in them. Do not accept any substitute, but insist that the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is printed on the wrapper around each box. Sold by all dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Cheapest of all Medicines—Consumption, the curative qualities of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It is the best cheap cat medicine now offered to the public. Don't suffer a day but increased consumption has simply tried and cheapened the manufacture.

HOW PNEUMONIA STARTS.

You catch a little cold to-day, by standing in a draught, or a wet foot, next day the lungs are affected and you have pneumonia. Had used "Catarrhozone" which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarrhozone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion—then it cures the cold, phlegm and destroys the germs. It invigorates the blood to make natural supply of oxygen, lung-food and vitality. In any cough, bronchitis or lung affection it guarantees a positive cure. Decline any substitute for "Catarrhozone."

September Dyeing.

SUCCESS, PROFIT AND PLEASURE When You Use Diamond Dyes.

Thousands of city and country women and girls will engage in the work of home dyeing in September. Old dresses, skirts, blouses, capes, jackets, wraps and clothing for men, boys and girls, will be carefully looked out, and prepared for tinting.

It is safe to assert that every wife, mother and daughter who has heard of the great superiority of DIAMOND DYES over all other makes of dyes, will use them in preference to any of the crude, weak and adulterated dyes sold by some dealers for the sake of big profits.

It is unnecessary to add a word regarding the great superiority of DIAMOND DYES over all other makes of dyes. They have a world-wide reputation for grand home results; they give more pleasure, more fast colors, more real dyeing. Home dyeing is certainly profitable work when DIAMOND DYES are used.

Beware of imitation package dyes; they ruin your hands and good materials. Ask for DIAMOND DYES, take no others, and if you value fine colors, Dr. Hughes' Monograph, 24 pp. of valuable hints on home dyeing, work and 48 dyed cloth samples, sent free to any address.

THE YOUNG COW.

How to Obtain Best Result From Young Animals.

The ultimate value of the heifer cow depends largely on how she is managed the first year. She should be milked as carefully and regularly as possible. The temptation to dry her up the first year the more likely will she be to be profitable the second year. The first year, then, is really the test and if after careful handling she goes dry after seven or eight months' milking it may be pretty well determined that she will not prove a profitable cow to the standard of a profitable cow. Always be gentle to the heifers. They are often a little nervous in the stable, and require some petting from the owner. Even the occasional spilling of milk should be gently passed by without any violent manifestation on the part of the milker. A little correcting by moderate slapping just after the heifer has commenced milking is permissible, but should be done with discretion. The heifer must be taught from found necessary to be helpers for milking, but when done there is, perhaps, no quicker or more convenient way than to tie a strap or rope round the heifer's neck in the stable.

Teach the heifer to lead. It can be done easily. Daily exercise will become matured cows. It is a good plan to give heifers some thing to eat while milking, it will take their attention from the milker.

The feed in winter should consist of good hay and corn fodder, to make a nourishing grain ration. If fed too much grain it will cause too much fat in the milk production. Perhaps there is no better feed for milk production than clover hay and bright, well-cured corn fodder. The clover contains an abundance of protein, the bone-making material so essential in young growing animals.

CAMDEN EAST.

On Saturday last Camden East was the scene of two interesting baseball contests. In the forenoon the Senior of Yarker were defeated by Camden East juveniles, by a score of 13-7. So far so good. In the afternoon the Seniors of Yarker met the Seniors of our town, and after eight innings of play left the score stood 8-3 in favor of Yarker. Rain interfered and the game was called; in fact, the seventh innings was played in a drizzling rain. The score for the game indicates the standing of the two teams, but does not tell the story of the game. A pitcher's battle for which honors were equally divided between Harry Montgomery, of Yarker, and Roy Smith, of Camden East. In the first inning Roy Smith got a pass and hits by R. Brewer and Ed. Smith scored him, bringing the first run across the line. Yarker went out in one, two, three order, but Camden East failed to increase the score. Smart scored 2, making the score 3-0. Yarker wouldn't do it. It was a pitcher's battle, but an umpire's victory, for Camden East had the opportunity to win, and were now fully convinced that Yarker wouldn't do it. It was a contest to other means, and their official duty qualified the umpire many times upon decisions when decisions meant victory or defeat. Camden East's battery, Roy and Camden East was blanked. In the fifth Yarker got their first run, and another in the eighth. The final score stood 2-0 in favor of Yarker. Umpire Wagar has no superior capable umpire than the one we had on Saturday. Fine playing throughout. Besides being the most unbearably prejudiced in all his decisions, many who favor Camden East to the benefit of a doubt would have imposed on a man who is not in town, where baseball was a common occurrence. I am sure most of us would envy the umpire his position at the finish of the game. P. J. Moore, of Newburgh, umpired the morning game to the satisfaction of all.

The Pandora Thermometer

The thermometer on the Pandora range oven means precisely in accuracy to the cook what the square and compass mean to the draftsman. Without the square and compass the draftsman would have to work entirely by guess, just as you do without an accurate and reliable thermometer on your oven. The Pandora thermometer reduces cooking to an exact science. You know precisely how much heat you have and what it will do in a given time. It is one of the small things which makes the Pandora so much different and better than common ranges.

ENTERPRISE.

On Saturday, Sept. 2d, our popular baseball team, the Hummers, and the Shannocks, of Croydon, met in a friendly game on Enterprise diamond. Although victory rested with the locals, they were indeed lucky for the visitors was more closely contested than the score indicates. While Croydon excelled in fielding and batting, Enterprise did the better base running. Seldom did either, but the hits were scattered. Several times things looked blue for the Hummers, as the Shannocks repeatedly filled the bases, but luck rested with the locals, who kept their opponents from scoring some unusually lucky plays. The Hummers, when hits were needed, and runs at times the fiends let loose. Both teams were very effective, especially with men on bases. Treaty pitching for 11 men, and Fenwick 8. Score, Enterprise 15, Croydon 5.

MILLER—WOOD.

A pleasant event took place at the home of Mr. George Miller, Milhaven, on Monday evening, Sept. 4th, when their daughter, Mary A., was united in marriage to Mr. W. J. Wood. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. V. Sexsmith, of Bath. To the strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. Irvine Miller, the bride came in leaning on her father's arm, and met the groom. Her gown was of cream taffeta, trimmed with white broche silk chiffon and applique. Miss Pearl Burt was bridesmaid, her dress being green covert cloth, trimmed with cream silk and applique. Little Elsie Morrison, niece of the bride, dressed in white, was flower girl. Frank Miller, brother of the bride, performed the duties of groomsman. After ceremony being performed, and congratulations over, the guests, numbering about thirty, sat down to a sumptuous repast. The groom's present to the bride was a gold cresent pin set with emeralds, to the bridesmaid, a gold breast pin, to the flower girl a gold pin also, and to the groomsman, a tie pin. The bride received many useful and beautiful presents. The bridal party took their departure amid showers of rice, on the steamer Alexandria for Toronto, Niagara Falls, etc. The bride's going-away gown was of brown ladies cloth, with white silk blouse, and hat to match.

A FAMILY OUTING.

On the 21st of August, M. B. Mills and family left town on his yacht "Madge 2d" for their annual holiday cruise, stopping first at Deseronto for bass fishing, and report fairly good sport, though not up to former years. The next stop was made in Picton harbor, where his father got aboard the schooner Hamilton for Toronto to visit his sisters. The Madge then sailed to Hay Bay, where two fine muscos were captured by the party on Friday, and fun to Glen Island was made before night. On Saturday the Madge was chartered by a fishing party, and the Skipper succeeded in steering over another fine muscos, which was secured by the party, who returned to Glen Island in high style over the success. While the Madge lay quietly at anchor for a couple of days off the island, Skipper Mills was engaged in a pilot a party of rich Americans over the most likely musco grounds, but muscos are no respecter of persons, and they stubbornly would not bite, much to the chagrin of Messrs. Belmont, J. D. Rockefeller, and Messrs. Astor, Jr., et al, all had to leave without the satisfaction of capturing one of our kings of fishes.

The Madge then proceeded on her cruise to Windan Point, where a most pleasant day and night was spent. Then the return was made to Glen Island, where a spot on the bay of Quinte, and next day home, bringing a fine musco, to set up for Mr. Dingman's office, where it will be on view after it leaves Mr. Mills' able care. The Madge 2d returns to Glen Island on the 8th to fill an engagement with Mr. Dingman's party, which is expected to have a most successful time fishing and sailing. Com.

A Medicine Just for Women.

It is common sense that women need different medicine than men. Their peculiar organism requires it.

Medicines, sold alike for men and women, never contain what will do a woman the most good, that is, the uterine and other female tonics. Such medicines may relieve for a little but that is all. They do not cure, because they do not reach the cause of nine-tenths of the ills of women.

Women need a remedy compounded for their special needs. Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women are such a medicine.

This is a special remedy, compounded by a specialist for a special purpose. The specialist is Dr. Hugo, of Paris, who perhaps knows more about the needs of women to-day than any other living physician. Its special purpose is to cure the ills of women and them alone. It is not for men.

Any sick or run-down woman, no matter what the cause, will positively get more benefit from one box of these tablets than from a dozen bottles of any remedy sold indiscriminately for men and women both, which does not contain the special uterine and other female tonics her system requires.

And it takes but one box to prove our statement. Improvement is noticed the first week.

The Canning Factory.

A BOON TO NAPANEE AND THE FARMING COMMUNITY.

MACHINERY AND BUILDINGS ARE UP-TO-DATE—CORN AND TOMATOES ARRIVING IN GOOD SHAPE—A SPLENDID ARTICLE WILL BE PUT ON THE MARKET.

What the Town of Napanee has needed for many years is additional industries that will put more life into the business activities of our beautiful town. The advent of the Napanee Canning Co., Limited, was hailed with delight by all the ratepayers when a by-law was voted on last spring to give exemption from taxes (except school taxes) for ten years, etc. A visit to the establishment will fully confirm in any person's mind the wisdom displayed by those who were in favor of getting an industry of this kind located in our midst.

Our representative visited the factory recently and was received very kindly by the manager, Mr. Wm. A. Carson, who explained the working of each machine and the lay-out of the place in general.

A description of the buildings and machinery will no doubt be read with interest by our many readers.

The main building, 60x100 feet, is frame, galvanized iron clad. Carey's magnesa fire-proof roofing. The lower storey has a cement floor and is used as the process room, in which all fruits and vegetables are prepared. The upper storey will be used for the manufacture and storage of cans.

The storehouse, 60x100, is a fine two-storey building, built of cement blocks and roofed with the same material as the main building. This is used for storing canned goods and cases. A cement floor has also been laid therein.

The boiler and engine house, 36x40, is built of cement blocks, cement floor and roof of iron and steel construction.

Bath room or cook room, 18x45, is frame, galvanized iron clad, cement floor and roofed with Carey's roofing.

Corn shed, 40x100, is frame, roofed partly with shingles and Carey's roofing.

Office, 16x20, frame, galvanized, iron clad, and roofing as above.

Caretaker's frame house in construction is 18x24, with 16x20 addition. The above buildings were all constructed under the supervision of Mr. W. J. Joy-ll, and the workmanship, general appearance and strength of the buildings speak well of his ability.

The process of turning the raw material into canned goods is very interesting indeed, and many are the calls for looks with astonishment upon the seemingly human intelligence of some of the machines.

The corn after being husked in the corn shed by 50 to 75 women, is taken to the process room and put through two Sprague corn cutters, which cut the corn from the cob. From there it is put into the No. 8 Rotary Sifter, where all pieces of husk, silk, etc., are taken out, leaving the corn perfectly clean. The corn is now ready to put the corn into an M. & S. cooker. This machine cooks the corn and fills the cans at the rate of 70 cans a minute, or 4,000 an hour. The cans are put on a chain from the store room above and are automatically fed into the machine until a can is filled it passes through a continuous wiper. The cans are placed on the cans by two young ladies. The corn is then put through the Hawkin's capper, which is a truly wonderful invention. This machine places the seal for soldering on the outside of the cap and solders twelve cans at a time, having an almost unlimited capacity. After passing through the capper the dotting of the small vent is done by an expert workman, Mr. Bert. Bowland, of Belleville. After being inspected the cans are placed on trays, boiled, carried into the cook room by overhead tracks and dropped into retorts where the final cooking is done. From there they go to the storehouse and after standing for a day or two are thoroughly washed again and piled. Later on they will be labelled, cased and shipped.

Tomatoes are delivered on the east platform and first go through a Baker Grasshopper Washer and Sealer, which thoroughly washes and scalds them, after which they are placed on tables and peeled by a small army of women and girls. They are then placed in a Queen Tomato Filler, capacity 45 a minute or 2,700 an hour. Another Hawkin's capper is brought into use and after leaving the filling machine the cans go through the same process exactly as corn.

The processing is under the supervision of Mr. Geo. W. Quance, of Newark, N.Y., and Mr. Edward Spriggs of Belleville, is foreman, and has charge of all machinery.

The boiler house is equipped with two Goldie & McCulloch boilers, 72 inches in diameter and 14 feet long. 100 horse power each, built to carry 125 pounds of steam. The engine completes the equipment, all of which is under the careful manager ment of Mr. John Littlewood, of Belleville, who also has charge of the cooking.

The Napanee Canning Co., Limited, has a capital stock of $100,000, the officers being as follows:

Mr. Thos. Symington—President.
Mr. J. Eris Caldwell—Sec.-Treas.
Mr. Wm. A. Carson—Manager and Vice President.

Corn and tomatoes are arriving in good shape. Plenty of help is now available but a few more women and girls can get employment by applying at the factory.

Corn and tomatoes are the only products being canned this year, but next year it is fully expected that berries, peas, beans, etc., will be handled, and when fully equipped for the latter the factory will be well filled with machinery.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

A BLOOMFIELD WEDDING.

A quiet but pretty wedding was celebrated on Monday morning, Sept. 4th, at the home of Mrs. Carter, Bloomfield, the contracting parties being Miss Ruth Bird, sister of Mrs. Carter, and Mr. Shore Loynes, of Napanee. The ceremony took place in the drawing room, which was beautifully decorated with plants and flowers, the color scheme being white and green. The bride was gowned in her travelling suit and was attended by Miss Wright, of Picton. The service was performed by Rev. D. S. Houck, resident pastor. Her presents were many and beautiful. After the ceremony the guests partook of a daintily prepared wedding breakfast. The bride and groom took a trip west and on returning will reside in Napanee.

TERRIBLE BACK PAINS.

They fairly agonize your life. Something powerful and penetrating is needed. Doctors know of nothing so swift to relieve as Nerviline, a strong, penetrating liniment made to cure just such pains as yours. Nerviline is very concentrated, about four times more powerful than ordinary liniments. In the worst cases Nerviline brings extraordinarily good. All muscular pain flees before it. Nearly fifty years in use—a good recommendation surely.

SKELLEY—HOUGH.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Storms, on Wednesday evening, August 30th, when their friend, Miss May Kelley, was united in marriage to Mr. James D. Hough, both of Napanee. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Real. The bride was becomingly attired in a travelling suit of brown corded silk with cream crepe-de-chene waist with hat to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Lena Hough, sister of the groom, was gowned in a suit of brown linen with cream over lace. Mr. John Thomson ably supported the groom. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a beautiful gold bracelet, and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links. After the ceremony the guests assembled to the dining room where a bountiful repast was served. Following are the presents to the bride:

Mr. Henry Hough—Dining room set.
Mrs. Henry Hough—glass water set.
Mr. and Mrs. Storms—embroidered centre-piece.
Mr. Jack Henderson—china fruit basket.
Miss Lena Hough—silver salad dish.
Mrs. Alex Smith—fancy cake plate.

The wedding cake was made and given to the bride by Mrs. Alex Smith, of Napanee.

The happy couple took the train for Toronto, where they will make their home.

We heartily congratulate them.

BY ROYAL WARRANT, MILLERS TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES

What is meant by "Protein" in flour?

"Protein" in food is the food element that makes bone, muscle and brain.

Pure flour contains more protein, in most useful form, than any other food—but the flour must be pure.

Bran and shorts are waste—if your flour contains this waste, it is proportionately short in "protein."

Now, if you buy an inferior, poorly milled flour, you are paying for bran and shorts, not "protein," and to that extent you are wasting money.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is milled to make it the purest in the world: therefore it contains most protein, is most nourishing, is most economical to use.

It pays the housewife to insist upon getting "Royal Household" guaranteed flour, instead of taking a poorer flour which the grocer may be interested in selling

THE WITCH OF CRAGENSTONE

Unable to understand and much bewildered, Simon watched Hetty as she nimbly lifted her skirts and, holding her head very high, walked up and down the dairy in imitation of a peacock in pride.

"For thou knowest, Simon," she continued, with a patronizing nod, "methinks to marry a French courtier who will come anon on a white steed to woo me and take me back with him to Paris, there to set me up in a grand palace, with countless serving men and women to do my bidding."

"Hetty, what nonsense is this?" Simon cried in desperation. "What man is this thou lovest?"

"'Tis no man that I e'er seen as yet."

Hetty continued her pacing up and down.

"But know this, Simon Kempster, that I'll ha' none of thee. Dost think I would bother with thy little scraggly farm when I can be mistress of a grand estate? However," she concluded condescendingly, her foolish little mind slightly troubled by the broken-hearted expression in her companion's eyes, "think not that I will forget thee, Simon. Why, who knoweth but I may make thee overseer of one of my farms in the countryside. Think on that, thy bright future—with joyful anticipation, good Simon."

He came and stood before her with white, drawn face, depicting desperate earnestness.

"Then thou hast meant nothing by thy fair words thou might have spoken?"

"Tie, Simon," she giggled nervously, more affected than she knew by his earnestness, "sure thou dost crow baldy. Thy solemn countenance would give a body the—ugerims! Who said we could not be friends?"

Kempster turned his back upon her and walked away. At the door he paused.

"By all this talk then thou doth mean that thou canst not love me—that thou'lt never be my wife?"

"My wife! A common farmer's wife!" Hetty laughed a low, rippling sound of amusement. "Nay, good Simon, thou must seek thy mate among thine own farm hands, kind. As for me, I will wait the arrival of my gallant courtier."

"Hetty, hast forgotten the love we've had? His voice was entreating.

"The verses! Ha, ha!"

She laughed again, this time more shrilly. "To speak o' your silly rhymes as verses, forsooth! Why, body o' me, good Simon, thou shouldst buy a book of good Will Shakespeare's verses, an' then shouldst know what poetry is. Now let me hear speak again." I warrant thee, o' thy nonsensical rhyming."

Something must have snapped in Simon's heart, it were down with such a bound. Blindly he turned and gropedhis way out of the house, not seeing the sack of potatoes resting on the ground, tripped and almost fell over the house dog lying asleep in the shade and strode on with head bowed, past over the wet grass and into the dull shadows of the approaching twilight.

CHAPTER XVI.

ADAM, the goldsmith, waited late that afternoon for Christopher's return. Impatient at his delay and angry at the sight of the unfinished chores, he paced up and down the room restlessly, pausing at frequent intervals to look out of the doorway with nervous anxiety toward the forest footpath.

"'Tis passing strange," he muttered. "The lad's ne'er done the like before. If he'd a thought of fear I'd say the storm delayed him, but such things as thunder showers are naught to mother Christopher. "Nay," shaking his head, "the lad's willful and careth not that the choores are naught."

Just then a shadow fell across the threshold. Adam came forward expectantly.

"Ah, bless me, Mistress Taunston!" he exclaimed in surprise. "Methought 'twas Christopher. Happen didst see that good for naught as thou didst come through the forest?"

"I saw him not, good Adam," the dame replied, "but I walked rapidly, as I am in haste to reach the cottage of Sister Hemming, that my son brought, me word an hour since had been visited by the Lord with an affliction of pondage, so I belonged me that the prayers and services might be of use at the bedside. Did thy lad stray away?"

"'Twas after the hour of noon that I sent him to the Mayland farm with a trinket that I mended for the young mistress," he replied, "I trust I would not ha' been in such good haste to rend it had not thy good son Josiah warned me of possible evil contained in the freight aboard the golden cross."

The woman threw out her hand in a manner that suggested hopeless resignation at the mention of the child. Adam got and, addressing him harshly with tragic earnestness, said: "Thou didst send thy lad with that emblem of the black art, Adam Bewdley. Forsooth," with an ominous shake of her head, "'twas no wonder then that the storm rose heathenish, turning peaceful elements into devil's turmoil to bring honest folk to their knees calling on God to save them! Ah, sorrowful day!" she sighed drearily, then, raising her voice to a shrill bake, said, "'Twas thy duty, man, to ha' burned the wicked trinket instead o' sending an innocent lad with it to bring destruction to him!"

Adam, pale with apprehension, cowered back against the door. The words of his visitor were so positive and her manner raised such conviction with it that the old man was already aghast spot for bacteria to enter.

Red blood enriches the blood and increase the red blood corpuscles. Dr. Pierce years ago found a vegetable compound, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, that would quickly enrich the blood supply by increasing the red blood corpuscles and thereby feeding the nerves on rich blood. This "Medical Discovery" also acts upon the digestion and assimilation of food, so that the blood gets its proper elements from the products of digestion. Feed the lungs, stomach and heart on rich red blood and you have surely a healthy body which will throw off the germs of disease which lurk everywhere. Get as near nature's drugs as you can. A medicine made entirely from botanical extracts and which does not contain alcohol is the safest. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

ACROSS COUNTRY.

The signs of the times point to an enormous increase of intelligent public interest in health: to a new generation with purer, stronger blood and therefore more active, braver brains and body. No physically robust, healthy person ever succumbed to grip, consumption, malaria or any other germ disease. But with a weakened system we all have to fight the germs of disease. Our blood is often in a feeble condition for the growth of bacteria—the germs of disease—because our stomach is disordered or our liver is torpid—in either case our blood does not get the proper nourishment. A torpid liver means a stagnation of the blood and an accumulation of poisons which furnishes a weak at the possible consequences of his foolish act.

"I must be on my way, good neighbor." Mistress Taunston lifted her skirts preparatory to departure. "Let happen thy lad returneth not by nightfall I would counsel thee to rouse the village, call the men out for a search, and if aught of harm hath befallen Christopher as a result of touching that cross," she continued sternly, with a threatening emphasis, "I wot measures must be taken at once to force the wearer of it to destroy it."

"Aye, aye," the trembling old man concurred eagerly. "Such evil implements work for the sake o' wicked vanity should be destroyed. Mayhap, alas, enough harm hath been done already! Ah, woe is me! 'Tis bad time we ha' fallen on!"

"Truth hast thou spoken. God keep thee, Adam."

"And thee good dame."

The woman passed on, grim and severe, and the shadow receded slowly into the distance.

That night a party of men carrying torches searched the forest vainly for the missing lad, calling his name loudly then listening with straining ears for a response. But none came to their strong and eager cries, the accustomed stillness of midnight on the mountain being broken only by sounds of hurrying feet, shrieks of birds, roused from their nests by the unusual disturbance and glare of lights, as they flew through the trees with frightened whirr of wings, and the peculiar wailing sound of the wildcat as with gleaming eyes and showing its teeth savagely it stunk along the underbrush.

But it was not until morn that they found him. At the peaceful hour of dawn, when the sun was sending its first warm rays of light across the horizon line, tinting the sky with rosy pink that presaged the coming of another glorious day of life and activity, Taunston shouted to the others that he had found him, and his companions, running to the edge of the precipice, saw the bruised and swollen body of poor Christopher, held securely by a protruding root of a gnarled oak tree that had caught under his jacket, tossing up and down on the rushing, tumbling waters of the stream below, his glazed eyes wide open and staring, looking vacantly into the shocked and sorrowing faces above him.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE next day Sir Godfrey La Fabienne, accompanying the mistress of the Mayland farm, was riding up the mountain toward the village, sombre and silent, with slackened rein, talking earnestly in low tones.

"Nay, Godfrey, I am not ill. But since the shocking news of Christopher's death I cannot lift his trouble from my heart," she was saying in reply, evidently to some remark he had just made. "I do reproach myself that my mine own security I allowed the lad to follow his inclination and go into danger. One commanding word from me, with assurances that I would take all blame of the goldsmith's anger, would have sent him to the kitchen. Ah, lackaday!"

"Thou'rt over sensitive, my love, an' must needs bear the suffering of all about thee," La Fabienne replied. Adams not myself for what was not thy fault. By, the Lord, thou asked the lad to remain and he would not. None other Gaston's surly jests at their expense! Right merrily would thou laugh, my sweet."

Margaret not making reply, they pursued their way in silence until they reached a low log house, where just before the door a group of children were throwing corn to a hen and her young brood. An elder girl, barefooted and dirty faced, looked up curiously at the approach of the riders; then, throwing back her tangled hair, opened her eyes in wonder at the sight of such unusual splendor, for the bright sun fell on Margaret's hair and lighted the threadwork of gold on her dress, the soft wind caught her long white veil of gossamer wound about her riding hat, tossing it lightly in the air, and La Fabienne, in his usual splendid dress, rode after her, his plumed hat and in the leather purse of his belt, ready to throw some loose coin to the youngsters.

At that instant a woman in a torn cotton frock appeared at the doorway, her face drawn in terror and pointing a long finger toward Margaret.

"Tirrah! Clarinda! Luke!" she shrieked. "Come in behind the doors! 'Tis the lady with the evil cross! Hast forgot the lad Christopher's fate? Run! I command ye to run!"

The panic stricken children, with white faces and in great fear, rushed to their mother's side, clinging to her skirts tremblingly as she slammed the door and noisily drew the bolt.

"What said the shrewish wench?" asked La Fabienne as he took his place beside Margaret.

"I did not exactly get her meaning, but she called the children from me, warning them of poor Christopher's sad death," she replied. "As I told thee, Godfrey, all blame of the lad's mischance is laid to mine indifference."

La Fabienne noting the cloud on his companion's face, his own grew dark, and he laid his hand upon his sword.

"By heaven, Margaret, an any man makes such insinuations in my hearing I'll run him through!"

"Nay, talk not of bloodshed, Godfrey," she answered, with a gentle sigh, "but think rather of the time when we will ride away together from these unjust people to a joyous and happy life in France."

"Aught but that hope and the sweet joy of thy presence doth keep me here. I do assure thee, Margaret," he replied seriously. "But, mark me, sweet, until we leave the plain mischief will be without seeking the reckoning with me."

Margaret, whose kind heart was full of sorrow and trouble at the recent misadventure, also the consequent conduct of her neighbors, took heart at her lover's fond words.

"Thy protection and love giveth me great comfort, Godfrey," she replied. Then, with a little sigh, "But, I wot, this is a most depressing neighborhood."

La Fabienne laughed lightly, amused at her last observation.

"See, yonder," she continued, "is Adam's cottage, the goldsmith, whom poor Christopher's body lieth awaiting burial. Methinks the wreath of roses I sent yesterday was not enough to express my sympathy. Perchance—"

"Ah, there's the dame!" Adam exclaimed, as the sound of horses' hoofs Adam Browdie appeared at the door, and when he saw who it was drew back, with blanched face, his tongue cleaving to the roof of his mouth.

"I give thee good day, Adam," Margaret said, riding closer, "and I have much sympathy with thee in thy sorrow. Will thou accept this handful of gold, good man, as at times like these folk have many extra needs?"

The sun glittering over the house, fell on the cross lying on her bosom, illuminating it. In Adam's fear and terror it was all he saw, and to his excited imagination it appeared to blaze forth, covering the whole front of her dress.

"Go on thy wicked way!" he cried in quivering tones, "and stop not before the door where thou hast wrought such dire evil! Thy wreath of roses lieth in state in the road! We applied a torch ere thy servant left; and thy gold, take it with thee. I want it not!"

He closed the door and fastened it, drawing the bar across with noisy violence. Margaret's face was white as she picked up her rein, and La Fabienne rode at her side with dark looks and flashing eyes.

"Gads, in France we have a man whipped for less than that! Man Dieu," he exclaimed angrily, "were not the man so old and did not dwell ill in his household I would have him out! No man could live after those rough words to thee!"

"Go on thy wicked way!"

The look of old wonder in Margaret's eyes did not leave them as she guided her horse to the narrow footpath that led through the forest.

"I feel for them more than but good will and they treat me with keen dislike," she said. "Fain would I understand them. Dost get their meaning, Godfrey?"

"Fair love, thy pure and generous soul could never grasp the meaning of their cruel and wicked ignorance," he answered, then, seeing that the shadow still rested on her face, cried in vexed tones:

"Margaret, cease sorrowing! Sweet, thou hath done naught but show them acts of kindness! Some enemy of thine hath been at his foul work most diligently. 'Tis a man I've had mine eyes on!"

"Thou meanst my cousin Josiah?"

The blood rushed to La Fabienne's face.

"Call him not thy cousin, Margaret," he cried hotly. "For I swear he hath no feeling of kinship for thee. Damme, but I detest the man! The mere mention of his name doth cause my gorge to rise."

Just then a large, hulking lad who was coming toward them with a bundle swung on a stick over his shoulder, humming a tune as he came, at the sound of their voices ceased his noise suddenly, hesitated to make sure, then pushed through the brushwood and slunk away under the trees in the opposite direction.

"Was not that Toby, the horse boy?" Margaret asked. "Strange that he should dodge and hide in that odd manner!"

Sir Godfrey shook his head and frowned, then, as if anxious to dispel the gloom that had fallen on them, called out gayly to Margaret, who was riding ahead: "See the sun setting behind the hills, sweet love. What reckness it doth reflect against the sky! I wot tomorrow will be warmer still."

By now they had reached the open roadway, and the lands of the Mayland estate spread out before them.

"An' there is Josiah at the gate," Margaret said, with a happy laugh. "Fie on thee for a foolish old woman!" she called to her in passing, with affectionate gayety. "Hast naught to do but look out for our return?"

Urging on her horse, she galloped toward the house. Suddenly La Fabienne, who rode slowly to look at something by the wayside that attracted his attention, felt the pressure of a hand on his arm. Turning, he saw Elsbeth.

"Sudden misfortune hath befallen us," she said in an agitated whisper. "The servants, even old Giles, have left."

He returned her gaze steadily.

"So, ho, thou tellest me but what I did suspect a moment since," he answered. "What reason gave the cowardly churls?"

"They said," she replied, with tears in her eyes, "that they would work no longer for a mistress who wore such an evil cross, that there were strange tales going about that our bonny Margaret was a witch, and that she kept her evil magic and black arts in the pulpit cross she wore upon her bosom."

La Fabienne's hand clutched tighter at the reins.

"Said they so? The low bred parroons! What further mischief dost think that gray eled villain, Josiah Taunston, doth meditate, good Elsbeth? Parbleu, doth the fool think he is aiming blows at a defenseless woman? In the past I have thought his petty spite and covetousness were too small to notice; but, bon Dieu, an he persists in his persecutions I'll have settling with the fellow."

Then he added in a lower voice: "Twere better, methinks, not to distress thy mistress with this news. Either, too much already of unnatural nature hath happened to grieve her."

His horse entering up the door way where Margaret had pulled rein, letting her animal nibble some grass growing beside the path, he sprang down and assisted her to alight.

"I've called Giles," she said, "but no one answers. Whistle, Godfrey, so that they may know we have returned."

"Sweet, I'll be the horse boy." La Fabienne caught her horse by the rein. "Elsbeth says thy servants rose against her authority, and she sent them packing. Look not so serious, Margaret," he urged. "We can replace them ere the dawn of another day."

"Elsbeth!"—Margaret turned her white face to the old woman—"and spoke sternly—"speak truth to me, I command it. Did my lifelings leave my house because of any feeling of dislike or aversion to me?"

"Bonny babe, sweet Margaret," cried the old woman tremblingly, "they said aught against thee so much as that, but that the cross thou didst wear wast papist and wicked, containing evil that would work harm to others! Happen thou'lt take it off, sweet, she added, with hope of encouraging Margaret, "I wot they'd all come back and be glad to serve thee!"

The young mistress of the Mayland farm raised her head quickly, and the color that had forsaken her cheeks at the unexpected tidings of her servants' defection returned to them. Her eyes sparkled dangerously.

"Elsbeth, an thou say such words then cannot understand me," I am willing and eager to help these people and to do all for them within my power, but I cannot dictate to me. For shame, Elsbeth! Thou weak and silly old woman, to talk with a coward's tongue!" she exclaimed. "Dost think a woman and the blood would forgive a faithless, ignorant, disloyal servant who hath spoken ill of her? Forsooth, how long is it since I have come to the pass when I must, at a hireling's command, remove that which I see fit to wear. This is my home"—she raised her head proudly—"built by mine own dear grandfather and mine by every right. I have done no person ill either by thought or deed, and the last thing I think he can force me from what is mine own. Only this morning I promised myself a speedy departure from this ill fated village, but now methinks to remain a good time longer."

Her head held high, she turned to the lover with a flashing smile.

"Thou'lt be my horse boy, Godfrey, in thy satin doublet?"

"Right gladly will I, O proud and beauteous mistress!" La Fabienne, with answering smile, doffed his hat to the ground.

"Then I cannot be unhappy, for did not some wiseacre say 'a man is rich that hath one faithful friend?' Come, lead the horses, and I will follow to assist thee, Godfrey, for I trow thou wouldst a-weary soon with no horse boy about to cast thine imprecations at."

Both laughed merrily at this sally; then, with deep and tender protection, La Fabienne threw his disengaged arm about her.

"Aye, come with me," he said, "though thou'lt hinder more than thou will help. I warn thee. But, gads, a man can work with a better heart in sunshine than in shadow, and where thou art not, sweet, 'tis always dark to me!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

ANOTHER spell of scorching heat swept over the mountain so intense that men and women could scarce exert themselves to move, and found existence endurable only in the shelter of their homes, afraid to venture out in the scorching rays of the sun, and the sheep and cattle, stretched out on the ground under the trees, lay with drowsy eyes, panting, not caring to eat. The people, sighing and praying for relief, told each other significantly that such scorching air was a curse put upon them. But one night, whether it was in answer to their prayers or the curse was lifted, a cool breeze sprang up on the trees, and suddenly a breeze sprang up from the northwest, bringing in its wake a cool breath that fanned the restless earth, and the mountain folk awoke in the morning refreshed and strengthened to set about with energy to accomplish tasks that had of necessity been neglected during the excessive heat.

La Fabienne and Margaret Mayland, having grown accustomed to enforced inactivity, rode away gayly from the door shortly after the noon hour of that first cool day, with Gaston for a guide, to view some waterfalls in a small hamlet toward the west that the latter had discovered in his wanderings and which his master had expressed a desire to see. As they found much of interest and beauty in the mountain scenery to take their attention and occupy their time, the sun had set and the approach of twilight was at hand when they rode wearily up to the house, demanding supper from the pleased and surprised Elsbeth, who was waiting at the door.

The loiterers usually standing about the village hostelry, the Sign of the Red Heart, taking advantage of the absence of La Fabienne, and his man Gaston, now talked together loudly, and with great earnestness of the latest Christopher's tragic death; also other evil happenings that had occurred in the village of late. One or two men, more excited than the rest, threw out their arms wildly, with angry and vindictive gesture as they harangued the others, and above their heads, as if with a desire to be heard, the time and, striking a beaten gold square of wood, with a red heart painted upon it, that from long years of exposure to the elements was now dull and faded, and which had been nailed above the iron bar over the door of the tavern from which it was suspended.

Josiah Taunston, riding toward them, drew rein as he reached the door and called loudly for a tankard of ale. The idlers grouped about him eagerly.

"Hast heard the news, master?" asked one.

"What news?"

"The latest report of the devil's handiwork in our affairs; that is all," another man interposed hastily. "Of a truth thou hast heard."

"Nay, I ha' not," he answered sharply. "Hast heard the gruesome and wicked murder naught of bad tidings could surprise me. What's amiss now?"

Several of the bystanders struggled to get nearer to horse and rider, each tell the story, but the first speaker, taller and quicker of speech than the others, commenced the narrative.

"Thou'lt mind the lad, all of us, that good Widow Dawson's babe, that for a week past on account of the heat lay ill of a fever, which the leech said could be easily cured, of a sudden took a turn last night an' died. The poor dame is prostrate and sweareth that black arts were given the babe to cause its death, therefore it was resting quietly, when"—the man's voice fell into a whisper—"suddenly the mother was aroused by weird noises an' ferocious rappings on the door. All of a tremble, she opened, but no one was there. Then, with a great noise, the lattice blew in, a white sheet—a winding sheet, before the eyes smoke an' the stench of sulphur burning filled the room, an' when all was cleared away she found the innocent babe in a fit a-dying on the bed."

The men fell back, pale faced and aghast, stricken, at each other with open mouths. Taunston took the tankard and quaffed off the ale, then from his high place on his horse addressed the crowd with great impressiveness.

"The time hath come, good neighbors, when we must act," he declared. "It is useless longer to deny that wicked happenings occur here daily; that Satan, dissatisfied with the righteous and pious conduct of this God fearing community, hath entered into compact with one who shall be nameless and hath chosen to exercise his malevolent influence through her agency. Enough of evil hath been wrought already," he cried fiercely.

Old Adam, the goldsmith, opening his door at the sound of the loud talking, peered forth and when he saw Josiah Taunston ran to the spot, pushed his way through the crowd and, falling on his knees beside the horse, threw his apron over his face, crying out: "Oh, Master Taunston; oh, good Josiah, give me comfort in my hour of trial or I must go mad with thinking on it! My gran'son Christopher! The little lad left me by my dying daughter Betsy, struck to his death and his soul carried —Messrs. J. A. Timmerman and Wm. M. Clark, Odessa, were in Napanee yesterday arranging for the annual show, to be held at Odessa, on Friday, 6th Oct. Though last of all the shows, Ernestown always manages to put up one of the best township shows in this district.

DOWN BY THE SEA.

The announcement that "Down by the Sea" will appear at Napanee Opera House on Thursday evening, Sept. 21st, has caused considerable stir at the above named play house. This play is considered one of the best comedy-dramas ever written, and the demand for a most enviable record is looked for by all familiar with theatricals in this town. Competent judges claim that the sensation, humor, and pathos are so beautifully blended, and the touches of his art nature so vividly depicted, that the play will be popular, and live for many years to come.

JONES—GILMOUR.

A very pretty event occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Smith Gilmour, Thurlowvale, at seven o'clock, on Wednesday morning, Sept. 6th, when their daughter Annie was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Sinclair Jones, barrister-at-law of that town. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. K. Henry, pastor of St. Andrew's Church. The bride looked charming in a gown of white silk, carrying a shower bouquet of white roses. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting couple were present. After partaking of a sumptuous breakfast, the happy couple left on the nine o'clock train for Toronto, Niagara Falls and Hamilton. The bride's travelling dress was of navy blue broadcloth, trimmed with white, with hat to match. The bride and groom were the recipients of many handsome and costly presents.

"FLORODORA" AT KINGSTON OPERA HOUSE

If "Florodora" has charm which over-tops the many charms which have made it the most popular production of many years, it is in the novelty, originality and tunefulness of its musical numbers. There are nine solo numbers in the score for Dolores, Lady Hetty rood, Angela, Vaiela, Gladiola, Donegal, Abercrood and Tweedie Dum, to take care of. There are four rollicking Duets and two splendid trios. There is the famous double sextette "Tell me Pretty Maiden," ten chorus numbers and the two grand finale ensembles, which have never been equaled for dash and catchiness. All the delightful numbers will be heard here when "Florodora" comes to the Grand Opera House, Kingston, on Monday, Sept. 18th. Seats will be on sale Friday morning.

HAWLEY—ROBERTSON.

A very pretty wedding took place at Hay Bay church on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 12th, at 2.30 o'clock, the contracting parties being Lena Maud Hawley, of Longreach, and James E. Robertson, Sillsville. To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. L. T. Parks, the bridal party took their places before the altar where the ceremony was performed by Rev. W. Down, and was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends. The bride looked charming in a gown of cream silk mesline over cream applique trimmings, and carried a shower bouquet of natural roses, and the bridesmaid, Miss Gussie Wilson, of Ottawa, cousin of the bride, wore a gown of silk voile over taffeta, carrying a bouquet of pink carnations. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the home of the bride's father, Mr. C. G. Hawley. After congratulations had been received the guests were served to a very sumptuous luncheon, and toasts were drunk to the bride and groom. The bridal party left amid showers of rice and old shoes for Ottawa, where they will spend a week visiting relatives and the fair.

BELL—MILLING.

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place on Wednesday, Sept. 13th, at 1 p.m., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Albert Bell, Pleasant Valley, Marysburgh, when their daughter, Louisa E., was united in marriage to Mr. W. Ray Shilling, of Hawley, only child of Mr. John Shilling. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Henry Thomas, of Morven, under a very pretty arch of evergreens and white flowers. The parlor was tastefully arranged for the occasion, and the sweet strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Laura Robinson, cousin of the groom, the bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father. The bride looked very beautiful in a gown of pale blue silk eviletine with transparent yoke and lace trimmings, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Miss Hattie Wagar, Enterprise, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, her dress being of blue silk and lace trimmings, and carrying a shower bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Frank Milling, cousin of the groom, acted as best man. After the ceremony and congratulations the guests, numbering about thirty, entered the dining room and sat down to a sumptuous repast. The presents were numerous and costly. The groom's present to the bride was a gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid an ebony hand mirror, and to the groomsman a tie pin. The happy couple left on the 6.40 train for Ottawa, mid showers of rice and well wishes of their many friends. The bride's going away gown was of green ladies cloth and Persian trimmings with hat to match.

MME. SCHUMANN HEINK AT THE KINGSTON OPERA HOUSE.

From all that has been written in the Metropolitan press of the United States about Mme. Schumann-Heink Opera Company and the new Stange and Edwards comic opera "Love's Lottery" is one of the best things musically, that has been heard in a long time, and it must be admirably sung by a company than usually capable company. The principals and chorus all distinguish themselves by their really fine singing, and there is an impression of harmony given by the performance that adds much to one's enjoyment. Add to these details the best singing that ever organized for a comic opera and an augmented orchestra of New York soloists and it is readily seen why this company is going to the banner business of the season. Love's Lottery will be at the Grand Opera House, Kingston, on Tuesday, Sept. 19th. They carry their own orchestra. Seats on sale Saturday morning.

THE MISSION OF HELP

CHRIST TAUGHT IT IN EVERY MIRACLE HE PERFORMED.

MASTER ASKS CO-OPERATION

Some Hints From the Preacher of the Ways by Which the Helpful Man May Fulfil the Law of Christ — Loosening of Bonds Physical and Mental a Part of Duty.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dwyer, of Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 10—In this sermon the preacher describes man's mission of helpfulness to his fellows and indicates the lines upon which that mission may be carried out. The text is John xi. 44, "Loose him and let him go."

Never was human leader in closer touch with his followers than Jesus Christ. He walked and ate and slept with his disciples. He was closer than that. He shared their joys and sorrows and privations. He set them an example of self sacrifice. He never asked his followers to make any sacrifice which he himself was not willing to make. If they were a-hungered, he fasted with them. When he warned them that they might have to lay down their lives for his sake, he set them the example of martyrdom by yielding himself to the cross. Never was greater element which bind a human heart to another heart is the willingness of one to make sacrifices for a friend or a neighbor.

But, though Christ never asked his followers to make any sacrifice which he himself was unwilling to make, yet as I study the miracles of Christ I find that almost without exception he sought co-operation from those whom he would help. He was willing to feed the multitude with a few loaves and fishes, but he made the disciples distribute the bread and the fish and collect the fragments that remained. He was ready to give his disciples a great catch of fish on Lake Galilee, but he made them launch their boat out into the deep and let down the net and bring the fish to hand. He was ready and willing to resurrect the dead Lazarus, but he called upon the spectators to loose the graveclothes which bound him hand and foot. Not until they were ready to help Martha, Mary and Martha go forth free. What Christ did of old Christ is doing to-day. He is ready to save men, but he expects his disciples to help him in many liberation, mental, financial moral, physical and spiritual, as I propose to show how we can aid in the emancipation of helpless men, as the disciples took off the graveclothes that bound Lazarus to "loose him and let him go."

Christ bids us help liberate the intellectual man who is struggling in his mental difficulties. He wants us to cut asunder the vital bonds of prejudice with which they are born and which are gripping them almost as powerfully as the bonds of heredity hold the criminal by his side. He would have us not laugh at or sneer at or ridicule the doubter and the skeptic and the atheist. He bids us not hurl our taunts at the poor mental cripples who, with hot, blistered feet, are painfully limping over the awful deserts of blighting unbelief, but he bids us go to our brethren in mental or intellectual difficulties and kindly and gently and lovingly, yet firmly, lead them out of the bogs and the quagmires and quicksands in which they have fallen and in which they are struggling to-day. Oh, the awful tragedy of being mentally blinded and being unable to get a right conception of God! Yet there are thousands of men and women who by constitution of brain and intellect are natural born doubters. They suspect the sincerity of every good word, and therefore they naturally doubt God's goodness and love.

An incident in the life of Michael Angelo well illustrates how you and I have to continually run up against and overcome men's prejudices. The Florentine master had already chiseled some of his greatest pieces of sculpture, but, strange to say, they were a great many Florentines as there are men in our day, who could not see any perfection in any pieces of statuary unless it was hundreds of years old, so Michael Angelo, unknown to critics, made a new statue. He then broke off one of the arms of that statue and kept it. Then he stained the rest of the statue and buried it under one of the old churches, and then had one of his friends find it. At once all the art critics of Florence gathered around this exhumed piece of stone and declared it was one of the finest pieces of sculpture ever chiseled by man. "Oh!" they cried. "Where can we find words to describe the beauty of a body like that!" After Florence had praised this statue for some months, Michael Angelo came forward with the broken arm of white marble which he had kept in his studio. He fitted it to the exhumed statue and he declared: "I can make a statue as good as that. See, I have done it. Here is where the broken arm is a perfect fit." His critics were confounded, as they well might be, but as I read the story I did not condemn those Florentines as many have done. I said to myself: "Yes, those men who "criticised the rising sculptor were natural born doubters. There are some men who, by their natural mental makeup, find fault with everybody and everything; therefore, if we are going to lead men to Christ, we must learn how to overcome the intellectual doubts, the intellectual skepticisms, which trouble so many men concerning God.

And how many causes for doubt in reference to God we meet everywhere! Here, for instance, are all the doubts that have been raised in reference to the Bible. Was there ever a compass which needed to be surer or truer in the day and darkness encountered forests than the star of Bethlehem to guide the mental doubters out of the mysteries of their unbelief? How are all the mysteries of sorrow. The doubter perhaps has lost a little child or the mother of children. He cannot understand why God took his loved ones. Shall we pass over these mysteries of sorrow with a mere wave of the hand? Here are all the shortcomings of Christians which blind the doubter's eyes. Perhaps some elder of a church has cheated him in a business deal. Shall we? Some doubter talked to lovingly in reference to that matter and shown how there have been Judases among the apostles and false followers at all times? Yes, Christ wants to draw to his arms those who are mentally blind. He would have us lead them as carefully as I saw the other day a boy leading his little brother of eight summers, who was blind in both eyes, across a country field. As I saw these two boys going past me there were tears in my eyes for an especial reason. As they were passing I was told that only a year before that little boy's eyes were as good as your or mine. But his own brother, who was then leading him, while hunting one day had accidentally discharged his gun and shot his brother's eyes out. As I saw the boy said to myself, "can it be that some of us, by our own sins of commission or sins of omission, have been the cause of thy children mentally blind to thy love? Can it be that doubters and skeptics and agnostics and mental antagonists to God are resisting him to-day merely because we will not cut the mental bands which are blinding their eyes—because there is no one to uncover their eyes and lead them out to look off the bands from the eye sockets of helpless Lazarus? O God, to-day give more workers who will be honest doubter! Inspire us with holy zeal to try to scatter these doubts away whenever and wherever they are found.

But as I go up to the open tomb where slept the dead Lazarus I find that not only was he blinded, but his mental means were restrained. His resurrected body has its garments bound around the arms and the hands, the legs and the feet and the stomach, as well as around the mouth, below the lips and the eyes. Indeed, so helpless was Lazarus physically that he could not have delivered himself from the tomb, as you and I would throw back the bedclothes of a morning and leap out upon the floor. He must have had to give a lurch and roll out upon the floor of the tomb. Then he struggled to his feet and stood there a helpless statue. Thus stood Lazarus' resurrected body. As I go on up and examine the man's bound hands and feet I say to myself, "Yes; how much in symbol does Lazarus look as to his hand bound hand and foot with financial debt!" The man in financial distress sometimes cannot make one move if he would. So I believe Christ's words, "Loose him and let him go," have their application in reference to a financial liberation as well as a mental or intellectual. How much of a financial liberation many people need but few of us have any adequate conception.

Financial bondage is a reality in the store. The temptations of business life are mighty. Here is a merchant who has been left an executor of a friend's estate. For years and years he has led an honorable life. But the hard times have come. The people who once bought his goods cannot buy them now, for they have no money with which to buy. The first thing he himself, "if I can only tide myself over this year I know everything will come out right." Shall he surrender. Shall he hand over to his creditors in reference to a financial bankrupt, or shall he borrow some of the money of his friend's estate and put it into his business? He is well enough for you to denounce the misappropriation of trust funds. But, supposing you were in that man's place and your creditors were knocking at your door, what would you do? I fear you might do just as thousands of men have done in the past, who have been bound hand and foot with the grave clothes of debt. You would be dishonest, as they were dishonest. The financial temptation would fling you.

Or take another view of the same subject. Supposing you are not a merchant, but a clerk or a laborer. On account of the hard times you have lost your position in the store or the mine. Supposing you have tramped the streets day after day looking for work and you have been able to find it. And then, supposing hunger is beginning to gnaw at your vitals and the bitter cold is searching its chills playing "haze and hounds" up and down your back, what would you do? You may have learned what cold and hunger are when some time you were out hunting or tramping through the woods and you were lost. Do you remember how you tramped on and on until you became faint from lack of food, and perhaps your feet became swollen for water to drink, but there was no water, no food, no house at sight. How, then, would you look at life? Does a hungry man, a cold man, have the same chances for strict truth and honesty and purity as a well fed man and a warm man? Oh, my friends, if you and I have not a life which we can relieve some of these financial distresses I believe we will take away a large per cent. of the temptations to dishonesties of the world. Indeed, I know what I say is true. Most men are not dishonest for mere greed, but only when they have become brutalized by hunger and bodily wants and financial necessities. The majority of men are honest at heart.

This truth was forced upon me some months ago in a powerful way. I met one of the boys of one of the old farmers of my Bushhill church, where I preached for two summers as a theological student, thirteen miles from a railroad. From being a farmer's son he had worked his way through college and was traveling through the country in a camping wagon lecturing at the Chautauqua and schools upon the "Anthracite Coal Beds of Pennsylvania." As a lecturer he had been everywhere. On the deserts, in the mountains, at mining camps and in railroad towns he had worked. He had camped alone in ravines and by Mexican dugouts and by Indian villages. "Now you young fellow is being attacked and robbed?" I asked him. "Never," said he. "I started out years ago believing that most men are honest and that if you trust them they would not betray you. I have been among the cowboys and had Indians ride up to me upon the desert miles away from any human being, and I have never been molested. Furthermore, I have never carried a firearm, either gun or pistol. I never locked up my things. But I'd go away from my wagon for days at a time, and when I came back I always found my goods just where I left them. If you believe people are honest and trust them they will not betray you." I says I. From a rather varied experience I feel sure that most people want to go right. If men do cheat, forge and steal inevitably you will find that they were first led astray because hunger or cold or financial exigency of some sort drove them to crime. God inspire us to help those who are in financial difficulties to weather their few months of financial storm. Help that man financially. Do you not hear the words of my text, "Loose him and let him go?" God will save that man in financial distress if you disciple will do your part.

We must save men morally as well as help them intellectually and financially. I apply that word "morally" to all that is most vile and corrupt in human nature. I do not, however, apply it in the sense that you and I should go into the city slums and lift up the social outcasts, although their rescue should and must be done by the proper Christian workers. But I do apply it in the meaning that we should reach out a helping hand and keep men and women and young boys and girls from slipping over the precipices of moral ruin. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred this can be done if we only place around the young folks the right kind of Christian environments.

There are many influences which develop the moral life besides environment. I believe absolutely and emphatically in her lity. The reason the domestic dog circles around two or three times before he lies down to sleep at the kitchen stove is because his wild ancestor in the eastern woods or on western prairie circled around in the same way to track down the leaves or the grasses before he lay down to sleep beneath the campfires of the glittering stars. The reason the Jew is the most persistent and most successful trader and money lender of the world is because for centuries he was doomed-to-be-by the Gentiles. He could hold no real property. If he was a landowner his estate was confiscated at the whims of his neighbors. The only means of livelihood opened to Shylock was that of a trader and money lender. The reason the American Indian is what he is to-day is because the wild, roaming life depicted in Fenimore Cooper's "Leatherstocking Tales" is still in his blood, and the redskin seems to be unable to endure the confinement of a farm and change his wigwam to a stone fireside. But, though I believe much in hereditary influences, I also believe much in environment. If you and I place the right kind of associates around the young folks we inevitably save them for God if we will.

And so, my friends, if by the help of the Holy Spirit you and I are going to save the young people we must throw around them the right kind of Christian companionships. We must bring them to the church fellowship. We must make our young people's meetings so attractive that the saloon and the billiard parlor and the dance hall and the low theaters cannot successfully beckon them for six nights of the week, and we preach to them only on Sundays. We should cling to the young folks of our cities. We should go after them and hold to them all the time. The Sunday school teacher who never finds an evening to visit her pupils during the week will never have pupils who will have time to sit at her feet on Sundays. The young people of your church who welcome the strangers to their houses or visit them in their rooms or arrange social gatherings for them in the church will never have the newcomers crowding their services.

But, lastly, I remark, we must try to liberate helpless men during their time of physical infirmities as well as during the light time of physical strength and health. Of all times during which men most appeal to helpless man the best is when he is lying upon a invalid's bed or in times of agonizing sickness. Sometimes a strong man or woman is not easily susceptible to kindness But once let the strength leave the arm, once let the heavy fever come hot and feverish, once let the stomach refuse to retain its nourishment, and then the lightest kindness, as a rule, will bring tears of gratitude to the eyes and words of thankfulness to the trembling lip. Nothing reaches the sick bed is the greatest and best of all pulpits over which to preach, how few of us ever embrace the opportunity to minister to them. God's name as we should! Indeed, as horses will nearly always stop and run away from a sick animal and slowly lying upon the ground, so I think well people, as a rule, shun and fear sick people.

But before I close I bethink myself of one fact. Perhaps you are not yet lifted up from the low grounds of gospel mercy. Why. Perhaps you are to-day hearing God's voice which spoke from Calvary, but you send a casual ear yet you yourself are sitting or standing before me bound hand and foot by the graveclothes of past sins. Then, my friend, will you let me remove them in Christ's name? Will you let me take off that sin of the hand, that sin of the foot, that sin of the eye, that sin of the lip, that sin of the heart? Paul, the chief of sinners, was once bound as you. Will you let me, in Christ's name, speak unto you the words of hope? Then, like the good Ananias of old, I will say unto thee, blinded saint, "Brother Saul, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, whom thou hast seen on the Damascus road, hath sent me that thou mightest receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost." In Christ's name your eyes may be opened. Then you will be ready for his service. Will you here and now consecrate your life to taking off the graveclothes which are binding sinful men as you yourself were once bound helpless in the vicelike grip of sin?

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Pearl dreamed last night I proposed to a pretty girl.

Sue—What did I say?

They Are Carefully Prepared.—Pills which dissipate themselves in the stomach cannot be expected to have much effect upon the intestines, and to overcome confirmed constipation a remedy must influence the action of the latter canals. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are so made, under the supervision of experts, that the substances in them intended to operate on the bowels are retarded in the stomach until they pass through the stomach to the bowels.

"What can I do for you, sir?" asked the grave clerk. "Why," replied the man, "my room was full of rats last night, and I want—" "Yes, sir," interrupted the bright young clerk, "we have some for yourself or stockings for them."

A Small Pill, But Powerful.—This is what judge of the powers of a pill by would consider Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Vegetable Pills to be lacking. It is little wonder among pills. What it lacks in size it makes up in potency. The number a healthy person requires to take up in these small doses, because they are so powerful that only a small dose is required. The full strength of the medicine is secured in this form and do their work thoroughly.

Her Brother—She's been up for you every night and I don't see why you were a fool.

He—Sallie—What did she say?

Her Brother—Sallie said that he shouldn't judge a man by his looks.

"There can be a difference of opinion on most subjects, but there is only one opinion as to the quality of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. It is safe, sure and effectual."

"What good was my vermiform appendix?" asked the student.

"I haven't any good to you, replied Mr. Dustin Rags. "It's worth about $5.00 to me."

Are You a sufferer with corns? If so, use Holloway's Corn Cure and get rid of them. It has never been known to fail.

"Yes," said the thing I wanted was a man who would not care to ride in a car. "Then you ought to get on well," replied Miss Cayenne.

A certain cure for all summer complaints and cholera infantum is to be found in Dr. D. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial and one dose will relieve you. It acts with wonderful effect in expelling that dreadful poison, and that awakening the strongest man with the effects of the severest purging. It is powerful, it is safe, it is prompt, and never fails. Price 35 cents. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup."

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

In housekeeping liberality is often the best economy particularly at the beginning of Winter, when the wise expenditure of a considerable sum on the season's food supply may mean the saving of many a dollar. Some practical advice in this direction is given by Isabel Gordon Curtis in the October Delineator, which contains many features of housewifely interest. "Hallowe'en Party Novelties," illustrating delicacies for Hallowe'en refreshment and entertainment, is a seasonable item, and other culinary topics are "Serving Game Dishes," "Home Made and Whole Wheat Bread," and "A Rice Roundelay." In addition, Mary Taylor Ross has some helpful notes on "Little Things of Housekeeping."

MARKS' BROS. COMING.

No company travelling to-day, has a more enviable reputation than the well known and popular company bearing the name of Marks' Bros. who will appear at the Briaco Opera House Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 18, 19, and 20th. It is an organization which is accepted throughout the country as a standard of excellence, and the reputation it has acquired during the last few years of unswerving success will be more than sustained during the present season. The company is a large and well balanced one. It is perfectly equipped with all special scenery and electrical effects necessary for a first class performance, each play being presented with perfect scenery and beautiful costumes. The opening play will be "Life in New York." Between the acts there will be moving pictures, including the great train robbery, illustrated songs and strong specialties.

It was a kind hearted farmer who turned the nozzle of the insect sprayer from a plum tree in which a robin with an appealing cry had built its nest. The man used the hose on all the other plum trees, but when he came to pick the crop, to the robin tree yielded four fold that of the others. The kind farmer saw a great light and says it would be well if every plum tree bore a robin's nest. Birds are known to be great insect and worm destroyers. They should be protected.

COUNTY SHOW.

FIRST DAY.

The attractions on the race track were not as numerous as in former years, there being but one race, the three-minute trot. There were three starters and the race was an honest and exciting one. Result—

Nellie G., D. Grawee, Harrowsmith..... 1 1 1
Al. Montgomery, D. Lake, Napanee..... 2 3 2
Prince Boy, Percy Johnston, Napanee..... 3 2 1
Time, 3 minutes.

In the palace all was bustle and confusion, but by 4 o'clock most of the exhibits were in place, and arranged, and the large building never presented a more attractive appearance.

Space these days is in much demand in the Beaver, and our description will consequently have to be short and to the point.

THE BABY SHOW.

There was not as large a number entered this year as formerly, but those on exhibition were fine specimens of young Canadas. The prizes were awarded as follows:

Girls—Mrs. J. Sager.
Boys—Jos. McCloskey, Mrs. John J. Draper, Mrs. Thos. Mellow.

SECOND DAY.

Wednesday proved an ideal day for the show, and an immense crowd was in attendance. The weather was cooler than on Tuesday, and much more comfort was experienced on all hands. The exhibits generally, but those in all departments, were large and excellent, and competition keen.

For those who love horses, a treat was in store. Never in the history of the society has there been a larger and finer collection, both in age and classes.

The various classes of cattle, sheep, hogs, poultry, etc., need no description here. Our leading breeders in these classes are record to note in the Province, and nowhere could finer animals be seen.

During the day and evening previous the Napanee Band discoursed excellent music.

THE LOWER FLAT

was somewhat differently arranged this year, the centre of the room being taken up by the fine exhibit of fruit ever shown here. In the west end Messrs. F. S. Hart and H. B. Allen made fine displays of musical instruments and sewing machines. Mrs. Alfred Wagar had a fine cab bit of plants, and Mr. M. E. Mills, a large and interesting collection of stuffed birds and animals. The entrance of the space was devoted to vegetables, etc., the whole being tastefully arranged.

The south wing contained, as usual, the Gilsbard Furniture Co.'s beautiful display of art and useful furniture, which is always a leading feature of the show. The manager, Mr. W. T. Lapsley, is a busy man, but always takes a deep interest in the society and in the welfare of the town, and evidently considers it a pleasure to do his share to make the exhibition a success. No better or up-to-date goods can be found anywhere in the Dominion, which is amply evidenced by the immense wholesale trade they have worked up. Opposite this display were the large array of home butter, preserved and canned fruits, honey, etc., which made the state of perfection attained by our farmers' good wives.

The western wing was a most interesting one. Mr. S. G. Hawley showed a full line of pianos, organs and sewing machines, and the young ladies were entertained by an Edison phonograph.

Maddle & Wilson had a splendid display of stoves, ranges, etc., from their establishment, which attracted much attention.

One of the neatest displays in the palace was that of Mr. A. E. Paul, showing the large and varied stock carried in his popular bookstore.

The exhibit of roots, grains, etc., was very large, and the samples excellent.

Geo. J. W. Courtney, Newburgh, was on hand with his usual find display of leather, robes, etc.

UPSTAIRS

The hall never looked better, or contained a larger or more varied display. In the north wing Mr. F. W. Vandervoort made a grand display in his line, harness, robes, whips, etc. C. E. Graham & Co. are to be congratulated on their display of furs this year. Every article in the line that money can buy was shown, and in the most tempting manner. All that their claim to carry the finest stock, etc., of any firm between Montreal and Toronto is a fairly safe one. Such beautiful sacques, furs, muffs, capes, etc., as they have been the envy of the lady spectators all day. Mr. Graham's generosity was also manifested by neat show cards, containing the name of the fur and the name of the work of Mr. Arthur Halsby, who is evidently a specialty of high class work.

The eastern wing was as usual entirely devoted to the ladies, and contained a beautiful display of their handiwork.

MADILL BROS.'

exquisite display at the Palace and at their up-to-date store, the richness, taste and elegance of every article of dry goods, carpets and furs, is certainly a treat to see and comment. This enterprising and prominent firm always place the richest selections from the leading markets of the world. Choice quality and exceptional attractiveness characterize the importations for the autumn and winter wear at their city-like store. The windows and store decorations are handsomely draped with rich fabrics, and many dainty conceits, in keeping with the costume of a well dressed woman. The

A Run-down Woman

Cured by

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women.

Mrs. W. H. Graham, of Halifax, N.S., waiting to us about the great benefit she received from Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women, says:

"If I had gone to Paris and consulted Dr. Hugo himself I could not have got more benefit that I did from his Tablets."

And Mrs. Graham was right, for according to her statement, she was suffering from a run-down condition brought on by overwork. These tablets are just what Dr. Hugo would have given her.

Women are realizing more and more the value of a prescription of this great specialist, sold now in tablet form.

These tablets put within their reach the skill and experience that come from Dr. Hugo's forty years' treatment of diseases of women, and the latest and best in medical research and discovery.

They make healthy women. Improvement is noticed the first week.

CAMDEN SHOW.

The Agricultural Society of the Township of Camden was favored with fine weather on Saturday last, and the show proved to be one of the best in years. The crowd was large and the number and quality of the exhibits was truly wonderful for a township show.

Two features of this show are the horses and live stock. Seldom is finer showing to be seen of horses and Camden claims to be the banner township in this respect. It is always a difficult and responsible position to hold, the judging of horses at the Camden show, so keen is the competition and the animals of such a high class. The township has also some enterprising breeders of thoroughbred cattle, and their herds would do credit to any county show.

All the departments of the show were well filled and the exhibits of shop pigs, poultry, implements, vegetables, seeds, grains, bread, cheese etc., gave ample evidence of a bountiful year and thrifty husbandry.

The driving track as usual proved a source of attraction to the crowd, and some good events were pulled off. Enterprise Citizens' Band also provided a great attraction, and rendered some excellent selections. Following is the

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constant failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

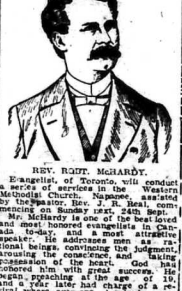
Evangelistic Services.



REV. ROBT. McHARDY.

Evangelist, of Toronto, will conduct a series of services in the Western Methodist Church, Napanee, assisted by the Pastor, Rev. J. R. Real, commencing on Sunday next, 24th Sept.

Mr. McHardy is one of the best loved and most honored evangelists in Canada to-day, and his addresses are rational beings, convincing the judgment, arousing the conscience, and taking possession of the heart. God has honored him with great success. He began preaching at the age of 19, and a year later had charge of a revival which over one hundred were converted. He spent three years in Ireland and has conducted services in many of the American cities. He is most peculiarly and naturally fitted for the work.

Western church is specially fortunate to have secured the services of this reliable and gifted evangelist. Though the meetings will be held in that church, they are not for that congregation alone, but for the general public, all of whom are cordially invited to these services.

A Medicine for the Mirth's Pack.—Preachers and others going into the mining regions where cholera are feared, should stores not at all, should provide themselves with a supply of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It will effectually set the effects of exposure, prevent fever, and when taken internally will prevent and cure colds and sore throat and as a lubricant will keep the muscles in good condition.

Throat Coughs

A tickling in the throat; hoarseness at times; a deep breath irritates it;—these are features of a throat cough. They're very deceptive and a cough mixture won't cure them. You want something that will heal the inflamed membranes, enrich the blood and tone up the system.

Scott's Emulsion

is just such a remedy. It has wonderful healing and nourishing power. Removes the cause of the cough and the whole system is given new strength and vigor.

The "Royal Household" Brand on Flour is your protection.

The "Royal Household" brand on a barrel or bag of flour means that Ogilvies guarantee that flour to be the best—that if it is not satisfactory you may return it and get your money back.

Ogilvies stand behind every pound of flour that bears their "Royal Household" Brand.

That is your protection.

Most people do not realize the necessity of absolute purity in flour—great care is taken to use only pure milk, pure water, etc., but flour, that one thing that forms the greatest part of their food, is taken on chance—but they are learning better.

As Royal Household Flour is the only flour in this country thoroughly purified and sterilized by electricity is not worth while to give it at least a trial.

It bears the stamp of the most responsible makers. You can have no better guarantee than the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co.

THE WITCH OF CRAGENSTONE

He paused for a moment to emphasize his words, then continued with a great seriousness, shaking his head in the manner of one who had abandoned all hope. "With prayer and protestations my good mother and I have urged this woman to change her ways, to destroy the evil cross that is but a witch mark invented by the devil for his purposes, one touch of which will bring a man to fell disaster. Men and brothers," he cried, "she would not hear us! She coldly turned us from her door and then in her wickedness set our sheep a-dying; but, being our kinswoman, we bore all patiently and said naught. Now, my judgment tells me that too much harm hath been done already. Here before ye all I repudiate this woman. I renounce kinship to her!"

The crowd, now having assumed much larger proportions, took up the cry of hate and bitterness.

"Good man! Good man Josiah! He doth renounce his cousin!" one cried.

"Down, down with the woman who weareth Satan's cross!" said another.

"We ha' been too patient already!"

"Hanging is the only way to put an end on it," cried old Adam tearfully, wiping his eyes.

"Witchcraft is the very blackest crime against God, the saints and the people!" proclaimed Josiah Taunston dramatically. "Such wickedness can not be choked out. Burning—burning at the stake—is the punishment our clergy and elders have ever meted out as of sufficient quickening to expiate this hideous crime."

Then, seeing his listeners were roused to an unusual height of fury, he cried in a louder voice: "My men, to the town house! Call the council for a meeting! We must act ere our own souls, caught in the talons of the devil's claws, are rendered incapable to invoke God's vengeance."

Turning his horse's head, he led the way, followed by an excited throng of angry men.

In the meantime Mistress Taunston, whose reputation for piety and her well known willingness to offer spiritual consolation to the afflicted brought her to many bedsides of both sick and dying, had been at the cabin of the Widow Dawson, and as the sun was slowly sinking down below the hilltops she came through the forest on her way home. Hearing the sounds of approaching footsteps, she raised her head and saw approaching Margaret's woman Elsbeth, who when she had advanced a few steps paused and, glancing about in all directions, called in shrill tones the little dog Biddy, that had evidently strayed away. If she saw Margaret's aunt coming toward her Elsbeth gave no sign of it. Without ever having had an interchange of hard words there was a deep feeling of hatred lying in the hearts of these two women for each other, and, although on occasions they had met with civil greetings, an underlying spirit of enmity between them was apparent and had grown lately into such proportions that at their last meeting the women had passed without speaking.

So today, with her head held high and a forbidding expression on her grim countenance, Mistress Taunston approached. The path at that point was rocky and narrow, so that in order to proceed one of them had to stand dangerously near the edge to let the other pass. Elsbeth, walking slowly, continued to look as if she saw no person in her way and called the lost dog's name with a great show of anxiety, Bristling with defiance and wearing her most scornful bearing, the Puritan woman came on until, reaching Elsbeth, who still refused to see her, she paused and, drawing her scant skirt of gray homespun very close about her, with an appearance of making a great effort not to let her clothing touch the other's, endeavored to pass.

Turning suddenly, Elsbeth confronted her so suddenly that the stern faced dame lost her balance and would have fallen had she not clutched the trunk of a tree for support. All the hatred in Elsbeth's heart for her companion blazed forth in her eyes as she looked at her.

"Fear not for thy clothing," she cried angrily, "or that contact with me shall harm thee! Lud! Even I were pitch an' thou wert covered with me, it would not show on thee, thou art so black in wiles and wickedness."

"Beware, woman, how thou talkest to thy betters!" fairly shrieked the other in outraged tones.

"Forsooth, I'll ha' my say, now I have thee cornered"—Elsbeth's black eyes snapped dangerously—"an' for once there'll hear the truth. Fool that thou art to think our Margaret hath no protectors!" she exclaimed derisively. "Dost think, dullard, that Sir Godfrey La Fabienne suspects not thy sordid vile schemes to get his cousin's estate, his deep laid plots to force her from the village as a polluted thing, so that she—her next of kin—may ride in and take possession?"

"'Tis false!" shrieked Mistress Taunston in wild anger. "Take way, woman, or it will be worse for thee!"

Elsbeth did not move.

"Methinks 'twere well to warn thee," she continued, "else in thy pride and ignorance thou'lt go too far. Sir Godfrey La Fabienne is a nobleman of much wealth, hath influence at the French and English courts, and with both Puritans and papists his wishes have great weight."

"Ha, is't so?" The dame laughed scornfully. "Thy cavalier may have influence at the English court in all else but matters pertaining to the black art and witchcraft. His majesty hath spoken, and the flat hath gone forth that all such shall be brought to trial and executed quickly. Oft and many times hath so expressed himself, being a godly man and pious, to have me for his interference. Now it is my turn to warn thee." She raised a finger and pointed it at Elsbeth solemnly. "Before you sun hath rolled from our sight doth fall again tomorrow even, thou and thy fledgeling had better begone."

"Make way, woman!"

Her manner betrayed such conviction and evil portent that Elsbeth's heart sank within her, although her face retained its expression of indifference and defiance. She drew aside to let the other pass, saying coldly:

"Take heed how thou dost persecute Margaret Mayland further, and rely not too strongly on thy delusion of having the king's favor. That is all I have to say to thee."

Then she walked on calmly, calling in shrill tones to the straying dog.

CHAPTER XIX.

HETTY JAUNSTON, pale faced and wearing an air of great despondency, leaned over the gate idly. She was lonely, and an undefined feeling of fear was upon her. Some hours more than the usual interval had drawn the men from the farm earlier tonight, and, having laid a cold supper on the table for her father and Josiah, she hung about the dooryard, eagerly awaiting the advent of the first comer to relieve the monotony of the lonely hour and bring her news of what was happening. Soon the sound of horses' hoofs was heard.

"Ah!"—she breathed a sigh of relief—"Josiah home at last!"

The horse and rider approaching nearer, Hetty discovered the latter to be none other than her former friend and lover, Simon Kemper, who since their final understanding in the dairy had met her with cool indifference, doffing his cap and passing by in silence. At the unexpected sight of him Hetty's heart gave a bound, and the blood rushed to her face. Surely, she thought, this sad night when she was so lonely he would pause for the evening chat to which they had been accustomed for so many months. Oh, why had she not put the pink blossom in her hair that he admired so much! Hetty was frightened, apprehensive. She wished he would stop, if only for one short moment, and bring with the young woman had other ideas for a husband, she had admitted to herself more than once of late that for a common everyday Hetty she did very well, that she missed him and that her heart was a little sore at his treatment of her since she refused to marry him. Kemper reached the gateway.

"A greeting, Simon."

The soft, fluttering voice fell on Kempster's ears strangely. He felt a tugging sensation in his breast, but, controlling himself by a strong effort, regarded the little smiling, catching face coldly.

"A good even, mistress," he said, with quiet civility. Then he rode on, possibly a trifle faster, without even a backward glance.

For a moment she stood speechless with surprise; then as an understanding of his meaning came to her she drew a sharp breath and tossed her head angrily.

"Now I will marry my French courtier when he doth come!" she exclaimed hotly. "A common farming man need ne'er take such a high hand with me. He hung so much about me in the latter months and I was e'er so friendly with him all—what is right there only decent to offer him a greeting. But," with a shrug of her shoulders, "I'll ha' done with him now, and—mayhap—when I'm gone from him to France forever"—with a little tremble in her voice—"he'll regret his cold looks an' ugly manner."

Pouting her lips, she took a seat upon the bench at the door and soon grew so absorbed in her plans to wreak vengeance on poor Kempster that she did not hear the firm, quiet step of her mother nor was she conscious of her approach until the harsh voice fell sharply on her ears.

"Art pining again, foolish lass? Canst find naught to do but sit and think thy silly thoughts?" she asked crossly. "Where are the tallow dips, that they are not lighted? Am I, that am weary with a day of prayerful toil, to cross my threshold into a darkened room? Once thou wert of some use and handy at thy work, but of late, prithee, 'tis naught but dreams and sighs! And thy pale face and absent mind doth fairly madden me."

Hetty, who had risen at the first words, now hastily entered the house, followed by her mother, still scolding. She lighted the candles and hung the kettle on the hob, saying as she did so:

"Forgive me, mother. My thoughts were but of our cousin Margaret, whom I met an hour since walking on the highway. She stopped to have speech with me; but, remembering thy strict injunctions not to speak to her, I turned my face and passed by hurriedly. Once I paused to glance backward, and she was still standing where I had met her, looking after me with such a sad, regretful and grieved expression on her fair face that tears sprang to mine eyes, and I ran hastily toward home lest I might be tempted to disobey thee and go to my cousin."

"Thou passed her on the road an' she looked long at thee with her evil eyes?" cried the dame in great consternation. "No wonder thou hast such a pale face and pining. Ah, woe is me! What trouble more will come upon this house?"

"What meanst thou, mother?" Hetty regarded her mother apprehensively.

"I mean, Henrietta Taunston, that thy cousin is a witch, a woman in connivance with the devil to invoke harm to God loving people, and that she hath been proclaimed so to be by the people," the woman replied, with a stern-ness that did not quite cover up a certain gloating in her manner. "To thy knees, girl, and pray for God's good influence to overcome the evil to which thou hast been exposed today."

Unconvinced, trembling and wondering, the little dame knelt down and her knees before a wooden chair and covered up her face with her hands.

Later that night, as Josiah Taunston was putting up his horse in the barn, a light footfall was heard, and a small, gray clad figure came toward him hastily.

"Josiah, dear brother," Hetty exclaimed breathlessly, "dost bring good news? Surely the tales my mother hath been telling me of our Margaret's dire affliction of being possessed of the devil are not true. My heart is breaking, for I do love her, Josiah. Surely she is blamed without fault."

She clasped her little hands about his arm and clung to him entreatingly.

"One so pure, so beautiful and kind could never willingly consort with such vile sin and wickedness," continued Josiah, she is our kinswoman. Use thy great influence for her good and let no harm befall our cousin."

Josiah threw her from him roughly.

"Call not that devil's witch thy cousin!" he cried angrily. "Know now that I have renounced her before the village and that she is an outcast from us forever. All the long afternoon the elders and councilmen have been in consultation and but an hour since arrived at a decision. Messengers on swift horses ha' ridden toward Sterndorf with orders signed with the chief councilor's seal, who hath all power in this village. Fool, thy pure, kind Margaret Mayland"—he laughed a loud, scornful laugh of derision—"will be taken at the break o' day by the king's men, and then now on their way from Sterndorf, where they ha' been stationed o' late awaiting orders, and brought to trial for a witch."

"Josiah! Brother!" Hetty gave out one piercing scream. "Thou'lt not hang our Margaret!"

"Nay, soothe thy fears, I'll not hang her," he replied sneeringly, "but happen the people, our good friends and neighbors, who have had enough o' her damnable qranks, may decide to burn her!"

The blood left Hetty's heart. She groped about her blindly, then, with another wild shriek of horror, fell in a heap on the floor. Angrily and with rough jerks Josiah tried to lift her to her feet; then, seeing that she was really unconscious, he strode to the doorway, calling loudly:

"Ho, mother!"

She appeared at the window.

"Doth want me, Josiah?"

"Aye, come at once an' bring water, for Hetty, weak and overwrought that she is, hath fallen in a swoon!"

That night the full moon hung low and yellow over the mountain and sent its clear rays through the trees, whose branches, rustling with the soft summer breeze, cast weird, quivering shadows on the ground. Hardly a ripple stirred on the brook, and but for the occasional hoot of an owl or the call of the whippoorwill no sound disturbed the peaceful quiet of the hour.

Margaret Mayland, standing before her door, quite passed the beauty of the evening by, so latent was she upon looking down the roadway in the direction of the village. With her light hair wreathed high upon her head and caught with a jeweled ornament that flashed and sparkled under the moon's rays, and her dress of white gauze, with fine threads of gold woven through its dainty meshes, clinging to her gracefully in soft folds, she resembled some goddess or queen of the night that the moonbeams had come to worship. After a time, her listening ear catching no sounds of approaching footsteps, she drew a sharp breath of impatience and, stepping down, paced restlessly back and forth before the door.

Elsbeth appeared at the window to draw in the lattice.

"Hath on no wrap, bonny?" she asked solicitously. "Thy frock is thin, and methinks there is much coolness in the air tonight."

With a little shiver Margaret turned and entered the house.

"I truth I am cold," she said; "but, more than that, a nervous and uncanny feeling hath possessed me. Fetch me my cloak, Elsbeth," she added impatiently as the older woman was about to speak, "and waste not thy time in uttering foolish reasons why Godfrey doth not come."

At that moment Sir Godfrey La Fabienne, followed by his man Gaston, to whom he was giving some final instructions, came out of the door of the Sign of the Red Heart. Wearing a doublet made of purple velvet ornamented with heavy silver trimmings, long silken hose of lavender and on his head a velvet hat with an ostrich feather sweeping over the brim, his gay appearance was in direct contrast to his dull surroundings and the plain dress of the onlookers. The usual number of loiterers stood about the steps, and to his brief salutation they returned sullen looks and ominous scowls so significant that La Fabienne's anger was aroused.

"Diable"—he turned upon them furiously, laying his hand upon his sword in intense indignation as his face—"curs, whelps, that durst not speak, but stand about silent, conveying threatenings in thy glances! I have tried to ignore ye, but endurance now hath ceased. If any man or all of ye have aught against me let him step forward and accuse me, and"—drawing his sword—"that one will see that I am not loath to defend myself against his accusations."

The group of countrymen, alarmed at his vehemence and evident determination, drew back from him hastily.

"Cowards! If there is a man among ye, let him step out, and once for all we'll put an end to this stabbing in the dark, these innuendoes and insinuations in look and action. What, dastards!" as no one came forward. "None of ye trained to fight in the open? God's death, but thou art valiant mothers' sons! Where is thy brave leader, Master Taunston?" he scornfully cried. "An he's anywhere about, ask him to step out. I'd like to settle with him the first of all. Not coming yet? he repeated, turning to the innkeeper, who stood near and who had ventured to give the information. "I' truth, he hath not come, nor will he until from his skulking place in the forest he hath seen me, the man he hath cause to fear, well out of his way."

Then he took off his glove and dashed it on the ground before the men.

"When thy leader—thy brave, upright leader—doth arrive, give him that glove; tell him that Sir Godfrey La Fabienne calleth him a woman striker and a coward! And if after that," he continued, with an angry laugh, "he careth not to fight, by heaven, when next we meet he'll take a well deserved horsewhipping." Then he sheathed his sword and, slowly followed by his servant, strode away in the direction of the Mayland farm.

A moment later Josiah Taunston, white faced and looking as if he had heard the loud and angry words just uttered, came around from the back of the inn. The men, excitedly pointing to the glove, told him what had been said. He listened quietly, with a sneer on his face, nor did he move it until one young fellow, stooping to pick up the challenge, was suddenly sent sprawling on the ground by a push from Josiah.

"Heedless caitiff!" he exclaimed in a low, terrible voice. "Wouldst thou touch aught belonging to an accomplice of a witch? Hath forgotten Christopher? Ah, calling to the innkeeper, "throw a burning fagot on that devil's instrument that it may be consumed!"

"Wilt thou take the cavalier's words and make no answer, man?" whispered a neighbor, following Josiah into the drinking room of the tavern. "Why, he said he'd horsewhip thee for a coward!"

Taunston turned to him with a black look on his face sinister and contain-

"Are mine eyes evil?"

yonder by the sundial, near the path that leads through the pasture from the Taunston farm, when one of the village women, walking through, came into view. For a few seconds she stood still and stared at me, then, throwing up her arms, ran from me, crying wildly: "God's protection, 'tis the witch! I have looked into her eyes! I will be stricken of the devil! Godfrey, tell me what it all doth mean."

Her lover's face reflected the seriousness of her own.

"Sweet, this foolish nonsense hath gone to greater measures than I had ever thought it would," he said. "My cousin's influence is strong in this community and the superstitions of the people so great that it takes but little rattling to make great stories and to have them all believed. It is that foul fiend Josiah Taunston's scheme to set all against me, so that when will be forced to abandon thine estate. Then when thou art gone, as next of kin, he would ride in and rule possession."

Sir Godfrey's face grew dark.

"The dastard keeps out of my way, or from the very bitterness I hold in my heart against him I would long since have run him through," he said. "But I will deal with him before I leave, for I have sworn that no man may speak evil of thee and live."

"Godfrey?" Margaret's eyes were filled with sudden terror, "promise me that thou'lt not anger him, for any hasty word or action, at the present, against the other, that a conflict would ensue that might end in—death, Emile"—she swept her hand with affected gayety over his frowning countenance—"chase that angry look from off thy face, and now under this bright moon, with the breeze stirring so softly, think only that thou art with me and that tonight is ours."

He drew her closer to him, and they paced slowly up and down under the shadows of the trees.

"Margaret, methinks to journey forth to London in three days. Canst be ready to go with me, sweet?"

At the unexpected announcement a deep flush spread over Margaret's countenance, extending to the roots of her hair.

"Ready to go with thee, Godfrey?" she repeated questioningly.

"Aye, love, as my wife," he replied in a voice touched with emotion, "as my adored, deeply cherished wife—that is how I will take thee, sweet?"

For answer she raised her face to his, and they kissed each other.

"I will go with thee, Godfrey," she said simply.

The moon rose higher in the heavens and seemed to shed a brighter luster on the scene as, pacing slowly up and down, the mistress of the Mayland farm and her lover, talking in low voices, made their plans and arranged for their departure. As there were no servants about the place, Elsbeth taking care of the house and Gaston doing the work among the animals, there was no chance of their intended departure being known. It was La Fabienne's idea to rise before the sun and, with Elsbeth and Margaret, ride down the mountain, leaving the estate in charge of trusty Gaston. By fast riding they could reach London before the dawn of another day and would be at once to the house of La Fabienne's sister, the Lady Grenville, where they would be married and then proceed to Paris.

Margaret saying, with a little shiver, that she would never care to visit Cragenstone again, Sir Godfrey said that they would offer her estate, including house and animals, to a land dealer he knew in London at such a low figure that he would not refuse to buy it.

"For thy cousin can have naught that doth belong to thee," he announced, with decision.

Their final arrangements being made, their conversation drifted to other matters.

"Now truly doth the Scripture speak, dear Godfrey," Margaret said gently, "where it saith that 'one day telleth not what another day bringeth forth.' When thou didst come I did not think to go back with thee. Methought thou would come again for me."

"Margaret, tell me truly, had the condition been happier, had thy sweet here been more pleasant, could thou have let me ride down the mountain without thee?"

"Ah, Godfrey," she replied, with a little fluttering sigh, "I am such a weak woman and so overfond of thee that hadst thou been more cruel to me to let thee go I wot when I saw thy back turned toward me I would fain forget my promise and in my loneliness and despair run after thee, throw myself in the roadway at thy horse's heels and cry to thee to take me with thee to sunny France, to Paris, the city I love."

La Fabienne laughed a joyful, ringing laugh as he pressed her closer to his heart. "Then I set foot in this village and saw the set of church about where thou hadst taken up thy dwelling I resolved when I would begone to take my sweet love with me. Didst think, Margaret," he cried, with sudden passion, "that I would leave thee, my tender flower, raised under the warm, genial sun of France, to wither away and perish on this bleak mountain? Nay, love; too close I hold thee in my heart."

The wind rose and blew colder through the trees. Drawing her cloak closer about her, Margaret clung to her lover's arm.

WHEN SEVEN MEN DIE.

You know at least one of them has Consumption. At first it was only catarrh—but it was neglected. When "Catarrhosome" came so quickly the foolish to suffer—it's a shame to keep on sniffling and hawking. Catarrhosome goes direct to the cause of the disease—that's why it's so dead certain to cure. It stops the cough, prevents that disgusting discharge, clears phlegm out of the throat in five minutes. Very pleasant, and safe too; get Catarrhosome from your druggist to-day.

At 8 30 to-morrow morning, Sept. 23d, our Millinery Department will be ready with our Fall Opening Display. You are invited to see it. A treat is in store for all lovers of fine Millinery.

EVENING EXHIBITION.

Our Opening night Display will be ready at 7.30 p.m. Then we will use our counters and main aisle tables for displaying the latest novelties in Dress Goods, Silks, Trimmings, Linens, etc. On the first floor, with our increased space, we will have a grand exhibit of Jackets, Furs, Costumes, Carpets, Curtains and House Furnishings. We go to a lot of trouble to make these opening night displays interesting, and we would like to have as many as possible see them.

Fownes' Kid Gloves.

Our new Fall stock of Kid Gloves arrived from Europe this week. There is no radical change in shape. The two dome Kid Glove is still the popular shape. The range of colors shown is much enlarged and improved. Fownes have succeeded in producing exquisite shades of Tan, B own, Red, Navy, Green. Fawn. Years of solid practical experience in selling K'd Gloves has satisfied us that Fownes' Kid Gloves are reliable. Hence we keep them and have no hesitation in recommending them. If by any chance you get an imperfect pair, we are only too glad to replace them.

Improvement in Making of Women's Skirts.

If you visit our new Skirt Department we will show you how our skirts are made so that they cannot possibly sag in the back; also how they will not gap in the back. It's a new way of overcoming difficulty. Price no more than common kinds. Ask to see them. Not sold elsewhere hereabout.

FURS.

WITH A GUARANTEE BEHIND THEM.

With us the buying and selling of Furs is long since passed the experimental stage. There are thousands of homes in this locality that can and do speak well of us. The fast increasing volume of our business proves that. If you have a fur need of any kind better lean upon us. There is so much deception in Furs that only an expert would detect it at buying time. We guarantee our values equal to any city house in Canada. We have a fine new department for Furs on the first floor. You are invited to inspect.

OUR JACKETS ARE COMING LIVELY.

Much selling these days among our Jackets. One of the busiest spots in the store. No wonder.—The stock is larger. Assortment is immense. Everybody appreciates the chance of having a lovely jacket, different from their neighbor.

When she came back at the appointed time the maestro declared that he had found a voice "as pure as a diamond, as soft as a flower." Jenny Lind used to say this remark kindly repaid her for the three months of silence, during which time she had lived on her fears."

Then he kissed her and she grew indignant.

"How dare you?" she almost sobbed.

"Why, I'm a soft heir from the south," he replied tenderly.

She didn't say anything when he kissed her again.

Our baseball nine were defeated at the Centreville show by a team supposed to hail from Selby, but in reality it was a team of picked players from Napanee, Newburgh, Camden East, Hinch, Selby and some other small village. Selby must be a very insignificant sort of a place when it can't find nine men of its own to play ball. Then they had a Newburgh man as umpire, and of course he wouldn't favor a team with Newburgh men in it. What surprises me is that this so-called Selby team didn't make more fair hits for they used their private bat, as they called it, almost exclusively. This private bat was merely a flat bat shaped like a board, and who can't hit a ball with a flat board. Our men say they would like to play a match game with the Selby nine that we were to play at Centreville, but as Selby hasn't nine men of its own, we will have to forego the pleasure, I fear.

HIS THEME MOUNTAINS

THEY TEACH US OMNIPOTENT STRENGTH OF THE CREATOR.

LIKEWISE THE LOVE OF GOD

Mountains Reveal God to Men For No One Man and No One Race of Men Have Lived Long Enough to Do What Was Necessary to Do For the Creation of the Hills.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dixey, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 17.—In this sermon the preacher takes as his theme the mountains, now assuming the hues of autumn, and finds in them a lesson of God's strength and providence and the love and care he has for all his children. The text is Amos iv, 13, "He that formeth the mountains."

Have you ever visited the Schroon lake of the Alps? Have you ever slept under the shadows of the snow capped Rigi, with the horizon sweep of 200 miles in circumference? Then you have visited Lake Lucerne, one of the most romantic and picturesque lakes that ever lapped the foot of a hill or nestled to sleep like a smiling babe in lap of a gigantic mountain. The old poet sings of the charms of Lake Geneva, another of Switzerland's scenic wonders, with its battle scarred castles standing sentinel over it, a castle whose walls are seamed with defying the cannonading of the elements, as well as resisting the attacks of man.

But, though there may sing about the beauties of Lake Geneva or Lake Windermere or Lake Saima, of Finland or Lake George of New York or of the "Lake of the Woods" of Minnesota, all of them beautiful lakes, I still believe that Lake Lucerne is the queen of romantic lakes for many of us. There we not only saw some of the most beautiful of all scenes, but we also stood before Thorwaldsen's greatest masterpiece, "The Lion of Lucerne." Most of you know the history of that marvelous piece of statuary. When the French throne was tottering amid the upheaval of the awful revolution which has made the names of Robespierre and Danton and Barere infamous for all time, Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette dare not trust their lives and those of their children to the loyalty of their own soldiers. They sent across the northern border and hired some Swiss soldiers to be their bodyguard. Eight hundred of these were quartered in the Tuileries. Fatal August 10, 1792, came, and the mob broke loose and started for their royal prey. They battered down the gates and doors of the king's residence. They slew the Swiss soldiers wherever their hated uniforms were seen as mercilessly as the Sioux Indians tomahawked Custer and his little handful of followers on the Little Big Horn river. They literally annihilated the whole band in order to get at their hated rulers. Thorwaldsen, the great Danish sculptor, to commemorate the death of these brave soldiers of the king's guard, chiseled into the solid rock of Lucerne the colossal form of the dying Swiss lion struck to the heart by a spear, yet in his death agony still defending the shield of France. What a wonderful statue is that, which thousands of tourists every year travel miles and miles to study!

But as I stood before that marvelous piece of stone under the shadow of the overcovering Rigi I said to myself this: 'Yes, many Swiss soldiers have been struck down by foreign bullets, but more, far more, have brooded their lives away because their hearts have pined under homesickness when they have been removed from the sight of 'yonder hills.'" When Nebuchadnezzar took his bride, Amytis, to the glorious capital of Babylon, she could not get over her longing for the hills of her childhood. Babylon was built in a flat country. To satisfy her longing for the mountain scenes of her youth her loving husband erected for the queen the famous "hanging gardens." But just earthly gardens suffered for pessimism. Buildings heated with steam and lighted by electricity.

The gigantic hills in the first place teach us the omnipotent strength of the God who created them. They seem to speak to us as something to God's man, why will thou not look upon me even as thou wouldst regard the works of human hands? When those standing before the huge pyramids of Egypt with their great sides of stone, they dost not say they were built by a race of pygmies, about whom Homer and Herodotus wrote, but rather as they in the moonlight and dream dreams upon the Acropolis overlooking old Athens and see there not only the glory and the splendor, with its Parthenon and its columns and its statuary and its marble of purest white and its stone fitted not giants in those days. Thou dost not walk through the corridors of the Alhambra, with its mosaic floors and its magnificent walls, and say that the ancient Moors were not master architects and master designers and master workmen. Thou canst not study the footprints of the ancient without seeing there the indentation of a great race. Is not a watchmaker greater than his own watch? Is not a locomotive constructor greater than the iron and steel warship he sets afloat? Is not the creator greater than the thing he creates? Therefore, oh man, is not the creator of the mountains a mighty, an omnipotent God, because he has created me?" "Yes, yes," we answer, "the God of the hills must be an omnipotent God, for none but omnipotence could have laid their foundations and erected their heights."

Great is the omnipotent power of God. Not one man and no one race of men could live long enough to do what is necessary to do for the creation of the hills. Not one man could stand upon the great cathedral called St. Peter's of Rome. This cathedral was supposed to have been begun by Michael Angelo in 1524. Every generation since then has had a part in its construction. The Roman Emperors of Rome was building for 500 years, the seven hills upon which Rome was originally built before the building for a longer time than that. Away back in the past millenniums God began to collect the rudimentary stone foundation of the hills. He spoke the word and manufactured a gaseous substance—vapor stuff. Some are likely think — out of which to build the strength of the hills, yet that was the first substance God created out of which to make the mountains. In all probability this earth in the beginning was nothing but a nebulous gas. After awhile God cooled this gas, transforming it from gaseous into fluid form. In a thousand years in his sight are but as yesterday or a watch in the night, God through the ages was using up the cooling process. He cooled this liquid mass down until there was a thin crust over its surface, as the ice that you might form on the surface of the coffee cooling on the breakfast table. He kept on cooling the planet until wrinkles and creases began to appear, like ridges on an orange when the juices have been squeezed out of it. Then the waters ran down into the valleys or the ocean beds and left the dry land appeared. Then the strength of the hills revealed themselves in mighty mountain ranges, which reach up and down the continents, giving strength to the land as the vertebra does to the human frame.

The work went on for ages upon ages. The glacial movements of the were fire and storm and hail and pencil of ice and volcanic eruption. A mighty workman is known by the strength of his ments and the times which he used as the means for his creation of the hills. We must learn of the hills more about the Creator of the hills. That strength alone was sufficient to pile up the Matterhorn and Mount Blanc, Chimborazo, Mount Cualtahera and Mount Roraima of Sierra and Mount Everest. Omnipotent as well as eternal is our God. He alone hath created the hills and created us. Why is it that from out the mountains and treadeth upon the high places of the earth? The Lord, the God of hosts, is his name.

But as I go wandering over the eastern valleys with this herdsman of my text I say to him, "Amos, why is God in the hills? Of course it is a right and proper for one of your poetic temperament to admire the gigantic cliffs and the rocks. In the evening hour it is beautiful to see the golden clouds waving their garments in the faces of these grim monsters, but, Amos, you are not a Rousseau or an Emerson. You do not leave your flocks and as a mighty buffet pursue the wild goats that leap from crag to crag. You are not content about slaying the hungry lion, unless he comes down to steal one of your lambs. Why do you pause among the valleys and the green fields and harvests and the flocks and herds? I see the old prophet turn and look at me with his quiet smile as he answers: "Friend, I am grateful for these fields and the vineyards and the orchards when I am among the mountains. Do you not know that the beauty of the valleys are dependent upon the strength of the hills? The stork builds her nest in the fir tree, but the reason for the cattle, the grapes hang heavy upon the vine and the harvest fields are filled with grain are merely because the mountains shed their waters into the valleys." I say, "Amos, when you are thanking God for the hills you thou art rendering thanks unto the divine strength that feeds and clothes and houses us." Then the old prophet answers: "Yes, my son. The Lord of the hills is the Lord of the practical provider for the everyday wants of his children."

But though the God of the hills feeds and clothes us in the valleys, as he feeds the birds of the air and the lilies of the field, how few of us ever stop to think of his kindness and goodness and care. How few have been accustomed to be fed and clothed by him so long that few of us ever stop to give him thanks. The very best blessings have come from the soil and are the works of our hands and not from his hills. We do not remember the fact that the divine Father does anything for us. We do not believe that the God of the hills has any part in our harvests. We say, "Our hands planted the corn." We think God has nothing to do with our clothes. We say our sheep grew the wool. We assert that God has nothing to do with our homes, because our timber is turned into the boards which are nailed into the walls. "Oh, no," we say, "there is not true; the God of the hills waters the fields. He gives drink and food to the flocks. He nourishes the grain into mighty forests. It is God, and God alone, who provides all." Ought we not to give him thanks for the hills, who clothes us and feeds us every day?

Shall we stop here? Was the eastern herdsman only symbolizing the strength of God, and was he not teaching providence of God in the strength and the power of the hills? Was he not making allusion to the gold and the silver buried in the depths of the mountains, and to the diamonds hidden in their subterranean vaults, and to their many precious stones, some of which St. John in Apocalypse saw in the walls of the New Jerusalem? Was he not using these stones as the symbol of the joy, and the peace, and the happiness of this world which comes from God to those who are living in close communion with God? I think he was. Furthermore, I believe that this herdsman, not only found these symbols of earthly happiness coming from God by coloring the mines, but their little lights into the ground, but also by following the call of the bird, singing to him on the top of some mountain ravine or in some hidden glen.

Methinks I can follow this old herdsman as he some autumn day hies away to the hills. We will call it an autumn day, for that is the time when every tree becomes a flaming torch. Amos is longing to go off for awhile and be alone with God. He turns over his sheep to the care of one of the under shepherds. He takes his staff and climbs up the mountain side. Higher and higher he goes until his parched lips call, "Drink, drink; and me drink." He reaches up and pulls off a leaf from an overhanging branch. He bites it into a more beautiful chalice than was ever handed forth by the Egyptian cup bearers at Pharaoh's court. Then he stoops down and fills up the water out of the gushing spring.

The rocks seem to close in about him. He seems to be in a temple, and the waters at his feet seem to be "holy waters." Holy because they have been touched by the fingers of God. Then he stretches his tired limbs upon a couch of moss. Then the same bird that called him from the herd now brings to him his companions, and they begin to sing. A gentle eyed deer pokes forth her head from the thicket, and seems to say: "Who art thou—a friend or an enemy? Dare I trust my little fawn in thy sight while I quench my thirst?" Then the leaves begin to sway and sigh. That peace of the woods comes over the happy prophet, as he says: "Yes, God has made the mountains. God has made the gold and God has made the silver and the precious stones buried here. He has made the woods of the mountains, the trees and the moss, the birds and the flowers and the brightly colored leaves. He has made the brooks to sing as well as his feathered songsters. Truly God is the God of peace, the God of joy, the God of happiness. If man in anything then it is because as a sinner he is out of touch with God." Do you feel that in the symbols of the gold, the silver, the precious stones and the moist, fragrant leaves of the woods Amos is speaking to-day?

The God of peace of the mountains is also the God of forgiveness and pardon. We see the strong limbed hunter start forth for the chase. There is health and vigor in every swing. As we see the Alpine climber go forth not to escape beast, but glacier and cliff and to win exhilaration from unscaled heights.

The prime of manhood is here. The bravery that flinches not when its eye looks into the open jaws of death is there also. Or I see the eager wading up and down the cool streams. But, as I see the sportsman and the man of health hunting or fishing or climbing in the mountains, I also see the poor invalid crawling there or being carried there or lying back listlessly in an armchair. His cheeks have an unnatural luster; his cheeks are flushed; he coughs much, he has the awful pain in his chest. Then I see him under the powerful tonic of the scenes of the Adirondacks. He begins growing stronger and stronger. The cough grows less and less and finally comes the day of returning gait is noted for the healthful stride. The invalid who was carried to the woods goes back well and strong and rejoiced. Oh, why cannot the God of the hills be to-day the God of health? Cannot he, will he not cure that chronic disease of sin which has been curing men for many years? Cannot, will not he do this, if we only climb up to him on the Mount of Transfiguration and humble ourselves at his feet as we cry, "Jesus, my Saviour, my Lord?"

But I must not stop here, even if I would. The love of God is found in the strength of the hills, but God's limit of forgiveness and pardon are found there also. Though God is ready to receive us if we come to him now, the figure of my text distinctly proves that there will come a time when he will say: "Not unto all who call Lord, Lord, unto will I open unto them, for unto many in that day I will say, I know you not." The future destruction of the hills prophesied.

In Java, a few years ago, the great Krakaton volcano, after erupting for a few days, suddenly exploded. The island of Java was literally split in twain. Sixty thousand corpses floated upon the surface of the sea. A mighty tidal wave forty feet high arose and swept on and lifted a German man-of-war and carried it many miles inland, and there left it stranded. Java is an island over 200 miles from India. There are many reasons to believe that this island was once connected with the mainland. The inhabitants of India and Java have the same customs They speak almost the same language. They worship the same gods. In fact, it suggests they hunt the same kinds of wild beasts as are found in India. Yet all of that connecting belt of hills miles of land with its mountains has entirely disappeared. As the God of the hills is some day going to destroy this mountains, some day He is going to destroy our rejected opportunities for salvation. Thus, my friends, as we look off into the hills, as did the psalmist, from whence cometh our strength, do you not find in the future destruction of those hills the foreshadowed rejection of souls that have refused year after year to come and bow at the foot of the cross which was once planted upon the top of a small mountain called Calvary?

How many people are hugging to their hearts the false hope that the mountains of God's pardon will be a main fern for them to climb, even from the weakness and helplessness of a deathbed! Ah, my countrymen, I have read of travelers lost on the desert. Without a drop of water, with swollen lips and a thick tongue, they staggered on until they dropped. Suddenly off in the distance they saw a beautiful mountain. There the streams were flowing and the rustling leaves and the singing brooks were calling them to come and drink and live. The dying men were aroused. They rushed in the direction of this beautiful mountain until, in a moment, it disappeared. It was nothing but a mountain of optical illusions, a mountain of mists, a mountain of false hopes, a mountain which was a mirage. So will it be with those who are forever putting off their opportunities for salvation. May God lead each one and all, not to follow the delusive hope that in some future time we can seek pardon. He promises to pardon not to-morrow, but to-day. Come into the mountains of Salvation. Come into the mountains of His forgiveness, of His strength, of His love. Come and stand upon the mountain of Calvary, with all its pardon, with all its atonement. There you shall find peace and joy. This Calvary is a mountain which is not a mirage. It shall never fade away.

Deadly Anaemia.

LEADS TO CONSUMPTION UNLESS PROMPTLY CURED.

Many a young life might be saved from consumption if simple anaemia was promptly brought to a cure. Anaemia is the doctor's name for weak, watery blood. When the blood is in this condition the lungs have poor strength. The whole system begins to break down. Then the growing girl slips into a decline until all fast the cough starts and her doom is sealed. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can cure all weak, watery blood without doubt or difficulty. They actually make new, rich, health-giving blood—they cure anaemia and prevent consumption. This has been proved in thousands of cases. Miss Edward Gobeil, Morrison, Ont., says: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured my daughter Edwina, and I feel that her case was almost hopeless. For more than a year she was a sufferer from anaemia. She gradually grew weak, was subject to violent headache, and dark circles appeared under her eyes. She was terribly pale, had no appetite and complained of being constantly tired. At different times she was treated by doctors, but got no real improvement. As her case progressed, she was attacked by violent palpitation of the heart, and a sudden dizziness of breath. She had a dull, dead pain in her side, which continued to deepen. For months I felt that she was in a hopeless decline, when I mentioned my attention was called to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I began giving them to her. Before she had taken eight pills many weeks when her appetite was greatly improved, and this was the first sign that she was really getting her. She continued the pills until she had taken eight or nine boxes, when the old pain in the region of healthy girlhood. Every symptom of her trouble had disappeared, she had gained in weight and is strong and robust. Her recovery is looked upon as marvellous by the doctors brought her case hopeless."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure any case of bloodlessness just as surely as they cured this case. The pills guarantee not only one thing—new blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do only one thing—they make new blood. That is why they cure all diseases like anaemia, headache, backache, indigestion, kidney trouble, palpitation of the heart, neuralgia, nervous troubles, and all ailments arising from poor blood, the lives of so many growing girls and women miserable. Be careful to get the genuine with the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People on the wrapper around the box. If in doubt, send direct to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50.

A few years ago a contractor undertook to widen a cutting in the hillside, and while the men were at work one day a serious landslide occurred. There was much confusion, and the cry went up: "Count the men."

"Never mind the men," cried the thrifty contractor, "count the wheelbarrows."

A canal boat captain, at a town, sent his boy out to buy a dollar's worth of provisions. The boy brought back thirty-five cents' worth of whiskey and a five-cent loaf of bread.

"Heavens!" exclaimed the captain, "what are you going to do with all that bread?"

"Why, in only five years ago that I started in with the same dollar and a five," said Bragg, "and now I earn fifty a week and live like a nabob."

"That's so; it's easy to earn that," replied Newitt, "but how much to you get?"

Reuben Fax—Yonder's a farmer that raised a pumpkin that weighs I was out in two his twins each used half for a cradle.

City Sigh—That's nothing. In our town we often have three or four fullgrown policemen assign on a single beat.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?
Let your morning urine stand for 24 hours in a glass or vessel, and then if it is milky or cloudy, or contains a sediment like brick-dust sediment, or if particles or germs float about in it, your kidneys are diseased. If the kidneys are well they filter just so much blood, but if they are sick or weak from any cause, they leave the poison in the blood, and this poison affects the entire system.

It is natural to pass urine three times a day, but many who regard themselves as healthy are obliged to get up from two to ten times daily and are obliged to get up frequently during the night. They have sick "Oh, they have backache and don't know it. Smith's Buchu Lithia Pills cure Rheumatism and all Kidney and Bladder diseases, and make new, rich blood.

We will send you a generous sample post paid Free, together with our large book on the above mentioned diseases, Address, F. F. Smith Co., 185 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.

And still she stayed upon her knees, and he was all unheeding. While Mary reigned in his office floor, he calmly kept on reading.

STRANGE FIRES.

Dust is a wonderful producer of fires. There have been fires in post offices where the dust of the mail bags ignited in the process of the custom exploded with terrific force from spontaneous combustion. Fires occurrence in floor and drug mills. The origin of many fires in the public halls may be traced to the so-called dry cleaning of clothes. A mixture of benzine is frequently used in removing grease spots from clothing and fabrics and is filled with inflammable fluid. Many fires have occurred in shops which is closed up and the air is corrupted by the vapors issued material which of itself is not dangerous. Fires have been placed in the hold of a ship are either the cause of fires in the cargo. Frequently a spark from a flint struck a reading glass in a section bag where it smoulders for weeks. The dust will be thrown into the air by the direct investigator of fires. Gasoline stoves in the hands of careless persons have caused many fires. Matches are also a fruitful source of fires. Many fires have been caused by the ignition of matches in the pockets of clothing hung in closets. Spontaneous combustion of oily rags is the cause of many fires. COUNTY COUNCILS ACT WILL BE APPEALED.

To the Editor of The Beaver:

Toronto, Sept. 1st, 1905.

Dear Sir,—Prior to the year 1897 the County Councils of Ontario were composed of the Reeves and Deputy Reeves of the various townships and the representatives of towns and separate from the counties. In that year, however, the new County Councils Act came into operation, whereby the number of persons composing the Council was greatly reduced, and a new method was adopted of electing the members directly to the Council. By this means all direct connection between County Councils and Township Councils was removed. The Premier of Ontario, Hon. J. P. Whitney, on several occasions prior to his being called to form a Government for Ontario, made the announcement that a revision of the Act in reference to County Councils would be a matter of concern to his Government. It is proposed to fulfil that promise.

At the recent session a Bill was introduced amending the Act, and providing that in future County Councils should consist of the Reeves of the various townships. The Bill was given some consideration, and certain amendments were agreed upon, but it was felt that such a Bill did not come into operation until the beginning of 1907, first consideration might be postponed to the next session of the Legislature.

The full and final provisions of the Bill need not be given here, but the general principle of the Bill may be stated, namely, it is proposed that beginning with 1907, County Councils shall consist of Reeves and such Deputy Reeves as may on further consideration be decided upon. It is proposed to make the number of Councillors to be elected by the Councils prior to 1897, but, most important, to restore the direct connection formerly existing between the County Councils and Township Councils.

In the amendment to the County Councils Act provision was made whereby County Councils might, by resolution, decide to revert to the old form of election, such action to take place on or before the first day of October in any year preceding the holding of an election.

It has been felt that, if any Council have under consideration the adopting of such a resolution, it would be advisable to let them know what is the policy and intention of the Government. I need, therefore, simply state that it is the present intention of the Government to introduce and to pass at the next session of the Legislature a Bill providing for the repeal of the present County Councils Act and to provide that the County Councils of Counties shall consist of Reeves and certain Deputy Reeves of townships and the Mayors of towns not separated from the County.

Trusting that this information may be of some interest to you, I remain,

Very truly yours,

NELSON MONTEITH,
Minister of Agriculture.

Is your Coal Wasted or Used?

It is comparatively easy to build a range that will make a lot of heat, but it requires the exact science of Pandora range building to produce a range that will use all the heat in the coal wi hout waste.

A common range may burn twice the coal that a Pandora will, and yet do only half the work.

If you use a Pandora range you can be certain that your coal money is not wasted, but used.

Fine Finish

The farmer manufactures beef, pork, milk, etc., and he must properly handle his live stock machinery to get the greatest and best finished production.

Just as he is careful to put oil on his harvester bearings, so should he be as careful to keep his live stock machinery in good working condition.

An animal whose digestive machinery is heavily loaded needs more oil than one that isn't.

Clydesdale Stock Food

is the oil to ease the load on your animals' digestive machinery, because it increases the digestive fluids owing to the food being made "easy."

It also makes the feeder bristle with activity and vitality, making the blood circulate better, thereby distributing the flesh more evenly over the body instead of into the pounch for tallow at 4c. per pound.

It makes the hide and coat soft and glossy, giving that "fine finish" that fetches from 25c. to 50c. per hundred more than from ordinary feeding.

Contains nothing injurious, and can stop feeding it without harmful effects.

Your money cheerfully refunded by the dealer if you are not satisfied after feeding it. Same for all Clydesdale Preparations.

STORM—DENNISON.

A very pretty wedding took place on Tuesday, Sept. 5th, at 7 p.m., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Storm, Leinster, when their youngest daughter, Gertrude, was united in marriage to Mr. Archie Dennison, Forest Mills. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. W. DeMille. The parlor was beautifully decorated with plants and bouquet. To the sweet strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. DeMille, the bride entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her father. The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of silver grey with white overlace and applique trimmings, and was attended by Miss Myrtle Davis, of Roblin. Mr. Frank Richmond ably supported the groom. After the ceremony and congratulations the guests, numbering about fifty, sat down to a sumptuous repast. The bride and groom were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents. The groom's present to the bride was a beautiful gold chain, to the bridesmaid a gold broach, and to the groomsman a tie pin. The bride's travelling suit was of navy blue broadcloth with white silk waist. The happy couple took the train for Toronto where they will spend a few days. Their many friends wish them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

NEWBURGH.

The Tamworth and Napanee fall fairs proved attractions for a large number of our citizens last week.

The Sunday School rally in the Methodist church on Sunday morning was a decided success. The weather was fine and the attendance large. The various Sunday Schools of the circuit assembled in the basement, and marched in to the auditorium of the church, where they were assigned special places, the Switzerville school occupying the western side, the Newburgh and Shannonville schools the centre, and the Wesley school the eastern side. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, and the large auditorium filled by Sunday School scholars and parents, besides many visitors from the neighborhood. D. A. Nesbit, C. W. Neville, Andrew Price and Byron Rose, superintendents of their respective schools, T. A. Dunning, superintendent of the Presbyterian school, and Rev. J. P. Mears and Rev. J. H. Clark had seats in the altar, and took part in the service. John Farley, late superintendent of the Newburgh school, also had a seat in the altar. Mrs. Courtery and Miss Young presided at the organ. "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind" and "Bring Madden sang, "Jesus wants me for a sunbeam" in their usual pleasing style, and the choir, which was up to full strength, rendered "Rejoice, O land, in God, the story." The service was most interesting and helpful to all Sunday School workers.

Mrs. J. F. Mears, D. A. Nesbit, B.A., and T. A. Dunning took part in the Sunday School convention at Yarker, on Monday, which was a success. The Methodist church was withdrawn from the circuit, and the delegates to leagues to attend the convention at Yarker.

CORRECTION

A rather serious injustice was done Mr. L. B. Bogart, Gosport, last week, in the report of the prize winners at the County Show. In took third for brood mares, four of 1905, first for draught horses for mare and foal, second for foal of 1905, third for foal of 1905 in team and carriage class. Also, first for special prize of the Napanee Clydesdale Horse Co. for best foal of 1905, by Royal Action. In Shorthorns, first for bull, calf, first for bull foal of any sex. All these were sired by Mr. Bogart's bull, Royal, by D. Creighton". Mr. Creighton was a heavy prize winner, and was unfortunately left out of the "count" in at another much expense.

A GOOD CLUBBING OFFER.

Now that the dairy and cheese industries have developed to such immense proportions in Canada, it is to the interest of all concerned, and to that the product is kept up to the high standard which has made Canadian factories in Ontario that disgrace the name of cheese which is sold in England with which they are shipped to the British market. Realizing this fact the most efficient farmers have tried to secure the best means to prevent cheese losses. The Canadian Dairyman, the official organ of Eastern and Western Dairymen's Associations, a weekly publication, edited by an editor of the highest farmer will also be posted and furnished by the publishers to any one who will send $1.00 a month at $1.00 a year. For the benefit of those who take large and our subscribers, we will send the Weekly Leader in two for a year for $1.00.

MR. WILKINS.

Mr. Wilkins had a dollar, so he said He guessed he'd pay
A little turn it borrowed from a gentleman named Grasp;
Then Grasp he took that dollar, and he said, "I guess
I'd better pay that little debt I owe to Mister Meaker."

Then Meaker the dollar paid upon a gentle Smart;
By Smart was paid to Thomson, and to Mister Hart;
And so that coin kept rolling" as a merry tune plays,
Until it paid indebtedness amounting in a chain.

To more than forty dollars, and it may be rolling yet;
And all because this Wilkins thought he'd better pay a debt.

For when a dollar's started
On its debt-destroying way,
There hardly is an end to
To the sums that it will pay.

MILLINERY OPENINGS.

The Robinson Co.

Early Saturday forenoon, we were on hand to see the opening of Fall Millinery. The company had promised us a treat and certainly we were not disappointed. Such a wealth of styles millinery has seldom been our privilege to inspect. Miss Smith very kindly gave us some inside information about what is new in colors, shapes and style of trimming. Fashion has decreed a season of smaller hats at least in regard to the profuse use of feathers as shown by the elect of fashion centres makes the large hat indispensable and popular. One of the season's ideas is a one color hat. In chiffy creations of this kind are to be found interwown many shades, and the one color, producing a most exquisite effect. Among these whose is the Mulberry. Also the Alice blue, violet serpent green, and Nile greys. These are worked out in rich velvets, tinted felts, satins, flowers, wings, ribbons, chenille and silk embroideries, feather bands and glycerine effects. Of the latter we mention less the many different styles and shapes, or explain the curious curves and outlines of the newest draped effects. Suffice to say, Le Louis XV., the Napoleon, Continental and La Jumpadour which allow the hair to be taste a variety of choice. Toques are certainly much in favor for, simply but prettily trimmed with a touch of chenille tones, or a flurry, of green wings, they give a dressy appearance for winter wear.

The opening exhibition was indeed an artistic display of the choicest dry goods. Compliments galore were showered upon the staff and management. Customers in the millinery and display sections were all delighted and certainly with good reason from each experiment. The Dress Goods, Silks and Mantle rooms are fast to meet our eye. Draped on forms were exciting sets of Bolgers in pale blue and green, Mother of Pearl, Nasum, Apricot crepe de chine, Nile green silk reps, Mulberry silk warp Henriettas, Nun's cloth, Venetian cloths, Prunella silks, plain and figured, Paisley shawl crepe dress, shadow laces, brocaded silks, Alice blue and tweeds, p.d.s, etc. Every drape was the ruling agent in favor for the coming season. Flowing and gored occupied the centre of the room, a full assortment suitable for street, day and evening wear.

The next section was a display of Underskirts, Fancy Belts, Belting, Silk, Spanish laces and scarfs, Xmas-handkerchiefs, that last named department was and were much admired. The display of linens was in the section reserved for homekeepers. The firm are the ruling agents here for the famous Cole Meets and Old Bleach. Cole Meets and Old Bleach. Cole Meets and Old Bleach.

THE WITCH OF CRAGENSTONE

"'Tis a solemn night, Margaret," he said whimsically, "thou and I alone together on this high mountain top, miles away from those who love us and in reality among a band of evil wishers and enemies—we two, with our troth plighted and our wedding day so near at hand! Is't not enough to make a man stop to consider when he is on the brink of such a serious undertaking?" Sweet Margaret," he continued seriously, pressing her hand, "knowing as well thy worth, seeing thy marvelous beauty and having a fine understanding of thy high character, I tremble lest, imperfect man that I am, I may not live up to thy standard; that I may fail to fill thy life so full of happiness as I hope now and pray God I may do."

Margaret laughed a sweet, low, happy laugh.

"Math finished, foolish Godfrey? Then hear mine answer to thy drivelings! In all the world I love no one like thee. Of thy imperfections I know naught. Thou art part of me. Without out thee I would die. When, Godfrey, thou art near me, 'tis as if the sun doth shine, or when thou'rt gone all is gray, dull and dark, an' naught is bright until thou dost come again. An', Godfrey, I trust thee entirely. I come to thee without fear, to thine own dear wife, to care for thee, to do thy bidding, to go with thee wherever thy fortunes take thee, hand in hand and heart to heart, and to love thee, Godfrey, until death us do part."

"Speak of naught that can part us, sweet Margaret!" he cried, in a sudden haste. "Let us talk only of bright hopes, long life, happiness, joy and love!"

"Happiness, joy and love!" she repeated softly.

Suddenly on their ears fell the sound of the steady tramping of many feet. Both drew apart and listened attentively. An officer's voice giving a sharp command was brought to them through the dense stillness of the night by the light wind, and soon they could see across the fields the full moon illuminating the steel helmets that they were, a small band of soldiers on their way to the village. Margaret looked at her lover in questioning amazement, and La Fabienne, his face expressing quick suspicion, uttered an exclamation and, running down to the stile, watched the soldiers until they turned the corner and disappeared.

"If 'tis as I think," he muttered, "the villian hath me! I had no thought he would dare again venture after I have played the fool! Margaret," he cried, going to her with quick strides, "methinks at the sight of military there may be fighting hereabout, so I would take thee from here speedily. On the morrow be ready ere the sun riseth, Godfrey and Elsbeth, and we will ride away without further delay. Farewell, dear love. God keep thee."

He threw his arms about her protectingly as he led her to the door. At the steps they both paused.

"Margaret," he said seriously, "thou sadst erstwhile thou trusted me. Dost mean it, sweet?"

"Godfrey, I trust thee."

"These are dark times, Margaret, darker a mayhap than we know," he said, "but whatever cometh, if things go not our way, trust me. Know that thou art in my heart before all else. And now farewell again. I have business in the village and must give my parting instructions to Gaston."

Margaret's eyes were filled with tears at her lover's earnestness, and as he attempted to leave her she clung to him, sobbing bitterly.

"Godfrey thy words are ominous," she cried. "Thou knowest something of evil portent. A feeling of fear hath fallen on my heart."

"Take courage, love. Pardieu, Margaret Mayland showing fear of these still village wights! Didst not hear my promise, sweet, that on the morrow we'd begone before the village is astir?"

As her head still drooped on his shoulder and she did not reply, he repeated:

"Didst thou not hear me, Margaret?"

She raised her head, and, although there was expression of strength and resolution in her eyes, her lips trembled.

"Aye, I heard thee, and at sunrise dressed for the journey thou wilt find me at the door. God be with thee, Godfrey."

"In a few short hours we will ride away," he said, with affected gayety. "Farewell again, and once again farewell," embracing her tenderly. "And now, so much I have to do, perforce I must be gone."

Putting her inside the door and closing it, he walked quickly down the path toward the forest, and when he reached it he had to grope his way to keep from stumbling, for the moon went down and left in a dark shadow fell athwart the mountain.

CHAPTER XXI.

At The Sign of the Red Heart La Fabienne found a scene of unusual excitement and commotion—soldiers just arrived and moving about jesting among themselves or calling roughly for bed and supper; the busy landlord cursing and giving angry orders to a simpering housemaid, and horse boys, agape with admiration of the scarlet coats, glittering cuirassiers and helmets of the newcomers. The soldiery was an unusual sight in Cragenstone—were hurriedly piling hay in the corners of the large, low roofed kitchen for the men to sleep upon. Catching a glimpse of Sir Godfrey making his way through the throng to the foot of the narrow staircase, his host ran after him and, touching him on the shoulder, whispered anxiously, "My lord."

La Fabienne paused.

"I have been forced to put the young officer in charge of these men into thy room for the night," the innkeeper said. "He will not annoy thee, sir. We ha' spread a rough pallet in the farthest corner, an' thy man Gaston hath consented to lie in the stable for the night."

The excited man rubbed his hands together propitiatingly.

"Thou'rt ever generous, my lord, and readier with thy gold than most, so I would not offend thee, although here are many who grumble that he may rest easy on his pallet," he concluded "indifferently as he walked away.

"Bah! Yes, I will contrive to get thy breath, send me a tankard of ale. I will drink in my room tonight."

The landlord, whose mind was greatly relieved, after receiving the gold, hurriedly drew hastily, and Sir Godfrey, alone on the dark, crooked stairway, where there was no light, continued his way, feeling that stirred him by forcing a calm exterior, paused, thinking deeply, great anxiety showing itself on his countenance.

"'Tis well, good landlord, that thou didst give me the proper man, who happen hath a taste for home brew that taken in quantities makes many loosen his tongue," he said under his breath. "If my suspicions are correct, that these men have been sent here to get evidence against Margaret upon Josiah Taunston's representations and then to take her into custody, by my faith, to-morrow at sunrise is not one hour too early for us to depart. Fool, fool that I have been to treat the deep laid schemes of that villian with such contempt, Diable! Almost instinct, I say, the net he threw did catch us in its meshes!"

A few steps brought him to his room, and, throwing open the door, he saw by the flickering light of the candle a man of about twenty-five years of age, a dandified looking fellow, with weak blue eyes and light hair, standing proudly up and down the room in the riding suit that Sir Godfrey had thrown off before his visit to Margaret. The officer, being a man of lower stature than La Fabienne, the long leather boots reached fairly to his hips, and his sword, that he had just unbuckled, rested against them as he walked. At the sudden appearance of their owner he fell back against the wall, with pale face, hanging jaw and a look of great abashment on his countenance.

La Fabienne entered with easy familiarity, giving the discomfited man, by who at once began to tug at his boots in a desperate endeavor to get them off, a word of friendly greeting.

"Pardon, my lord, a long leave without such a suit," the fellow explained in great confusion, "an' I bot took the opportunity, without meaning offence, of seeing how the fashion would become me."

Walking to the small window, he threw open the lattice.

"By the mass, but it's warm in here! Such holes as they have cut out to let the air in one can hardly get his hand through!"

The soldier, who had accepted the suit with many expressions of pleasure and gratitude, now approached La Fabienne, but at that moment, a housemaid entering with the ale, he turned impatiently, dismissing himself up to his highest stature and strutted before her conceitedly.

Smiling at his airs, his companion took the tankard, bade the girl bring up another, and, inviting his new acquaintance to drink with him, they sat down on the bench together.

"Art fond of ladies, good sir?" the captain inquired, with a roguish shake of his blond head. "I warrant that wench was not ill looking, barring the wart on her chin."

It being his turn, he lifted the tankard and after taking a long draft held it on high, exclaiming with dramatic emphasis, "Whate'er of faults John Bingsli hath, a slow eye for a fair lass can ne'er be counted amongst them."

The housemaid returning with the second order, he waved his hand toward La Fabienne with a graceful motion and, still holding the ale above his head, cried gayly:

"Women, lovely women! Let us drink to the ladies, Sir Roommate."

Sir Godfrey echoed his companion's boisterous laughter with an appearance of great enjoyment as the maid, blushing and simpering, left the room.

By now the house below had fallen into complete quietness, the only sounds audible being the loud breathing of the soldiers, who lay about on the straw asleep.

"They men rest heavily and breathe as if greatly fatigued," La Fabienne observed after further conversation of a light nature regarding the captain's pet theme—women. "Didst march far today?"

THE KIND OF CLOTHES.

"Now, boys" said the schoolmaster, during an examination in geography "what is the axis of the earth?"

Johnny raised his hand promptly.

"Well, Johnny, how would you describe it?"

"The axis of the earth," said Johnny, proudly, "is an imaginary line which passes from one pole to the other, and on which the earth revolves."

"Very good!" exclaimed the teacher. "Now, could you hang clothes on that line, Johnny?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"Indeed!" said the examiner, disappointed "and what sort of clothes?" "Imaginary clothes, sir."

THE CHRONIC GRUMBLER

PESSIMISTS WHO WERE BORN UNDER ABSENCE OF LIGHT.

"GIVING THANKS UNTO GOD"

Blessings That All Men, Even the Chronic Grumbler, Should Feel and Express Thanks For—Stellar Settings of Gold To Be Found In the Lives of Most, According to the Preacher.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 24.—The preacher is calling for his theme vacations' end, when the multitudes are flocking back from seashore and mountain, there to find that home has its own peculiar blessings, which are never better appreciated than on return after absence. The text is Ephesians v., 20, "Giving thanks always for all things unto God."

Some people are "weeping Jeremiahs." They are always seeing ominous visions and dreaming portentous dreams and prophesying. Some of their prophecies are never like the chirps of the red-breasted robins, harbingers of the spring. They are like the autumnal frosts, forerunners of winter's storms. They prophesy pains and miseries and wars and massacres and tomahawks and tortures at the stake, amid a chorus of unnerving yells and Indian whoops. They are not like the ancient astrologers, who used to foretell a glorious career for the newborn babe from the relative position of the stars of the solar system hoverering over the cradle on the night of the babe's nativity. They never see stellar letters of gold. They only see eclipses and tornadoes and absence of all light. In the black pages of the night they see the fulfillment of the troubles that are past and the forecasts of the troubles that are to come.

These pessimists always droning a dirge. They never make an inventory of their blessing. They are never happy for what is to-day. They are always dwelling on the things which they have not and which they would like to have. These modern pessimists are like the farmer who when it rains grumbles and says: "This rain is killing my corn. Corn needs sunshine." And when the sun shines then he complains that the drought is killing his hay. "Grass," he says, "needs rain, not sunshine." These pessimists are always grumbling, always complaining. Every Monday is for them a blue Monday and every Sunday a blue Sunday. They grumble at night. They grumble all the time. They think they live in the poorest country, surrounded by the meanest people, at the most unfortunate of all times. The country is for them always rushing headlong to destruction. They are never happy unless they are miserable. If they ever reach heaven, and their natures are not completely changed before they get there, they will complain about the architecture of the white mansions and complain about the glare of the streets of gold and complain about the weakness of the gates of pearl and complain about the style of the celestial music. These people were not born under "a lucky star." They were born according to the teaching of ancient astrology amid the absence of all light, unless that light was the flashing light of the lightnings. These pessimists derive the motive of their music from the growlings of a tempest and not from the notes of a sweet-throated, happy nightingale.

Paul, in the words of my text, hurls his anathema against the chronic grumblers. He bids us look upon the bright side and not the dark side of life. We should find a sweet nectar in every flower and a blessing in every moment. We should be like a bee gathering honey and not like a wasp thrusting a sting. We should have that beautiful spirit of contentment and thankfulness to God as had an aged octogenarian. Some one said to him, "Grandpa, when is the happiest time of life?" He answered: "When spring comes and under the influence of the gentle warmth of the atmosphere the buds commence to open and flowers I think to myself, 'Oh, what a beautiful season is spring!' Then, when summer comes and covers the trees with thick foliage, when the birds are so happy in singing their pretty songs, I say to myself, 'Oh, summer is a fine thing!' Then when autumn comes and I see the same trees loaded with the most tempting fruits, I cry out, 'Oh, how magnificent is autumn!' And finally, when the rude, hard winter sets in and the trees appear, and there are neither leaves nor fruits on the trees, then through their naked branches I look round and see somewhere better than I could ever do before the stars that glitter in the sky." Aye, like the aged Christian, and like Paul of my text, amid all things we should learn to give thanks unto God.

Give thanks unto God for all things. Yea, we ought to be ready to do that. But in order to bring our spiritual season a little nearer home and to make an inventory of some of the blessings which naturally have come to those of us who have just returned home from our summer vacations. Many of us during the past summer have been away to the mountains or down to the seashore, seeking rest and physical and mental strength and recreation. We are now back to the old treadmills of city life. Some of us when boarding the train for home did so with a sigh. "Well," we said, "fun is over for another year. Time for another twelve months of hard grind." We sighed thus, as though all the pleasures of life were found in vacation and none in duty. Let us see. Let us study for a little while the blessed resuscitation which will come to every one who takes a new and healthy woman from a summer vacation. Perhaps a short summary of the blessings of our city lives and see how much there is in them for which we ought to thank God.

It is a strange fact that, in order to appreciate our city homes as well as our other blessings, most of us have to be deprived of them for awhile. We must be separated for a time from our blessings in order to appreciate them when they come back to us. We are like some people living in the climate of southern California, one of the most glorious climates in all the world. Here people some times grow absolutely tired of the climate. "Oh," said a man to me some time ago, "I wish I could get rid of the sun. I am so tired of looking at it. It is beautiful day after beautiful day for week in and week out and for month in and month out. I would that I could see just one old fashioned New England storm, or an Illinois blizzard," were the words of my friend. "You wish you could see a Chicago blizzard again, but as soon as it begins to howl around you and send its chills running up and down your backbone and make you hug the fire you would mighty quick wish you could feel again the glowing warmth of the California sun." It does seem strange that perpetual blessings can pall upon us. We must be deprived of blessings for a little while to appreciate them when we get them back. This fact is especial true of the comforts of our city homes.

When the summer months drew near last spring the city house did not look as attractive to us as it is to-day. We longed for that little cottage by the seashore; or we longed to give up housekeeping for a time and have the cooking and go and board at the summer hotels. We pictured the beautiful visions of sitting under the trees and hearing the bees hum. Our mouths watered at the idea of eating the fresh laid eggs and drinking the rich milk, thicker than our city cream. The trunks were packed; the tickets for the summer resorts were bought; the city house was deserted. For what? Instead of the beautiful cottage by the seashore we us exchanged our comfortable city homes for a little bandbox of a house. It was so small that we had to go out into the front yard to turn around, or else we might have done ourselves a physical injury. Or, instead of the two great wide parlors of our city home, we were shut up in two or three little rooms of a hotel, where it was so hot that, like the Chickens on a sultry day, we had to keep our mouths open most of the time to catch our breath. Then the food. Rich milk? Fresh laid eggs? Delicious vegetables? Oh, no! The best of the farm products are sent to the city markets, not to the country. We were crowded and jostled. We had to read our books in stiff backed, uncomfortable chairs, or sit down under the trees, where we were afraid to stir for of being stung by the "yellow jackets." Instead of our great big city closets we had to live for the most part in trunks. And the beds! Oh, my. The mattresses must have been filled out of shavings. And everywhere you turned you kept longing for the comforts of your city home. Now, my friends, we are back to our city homes. Let us thank God for them. Let us thank God for the simple, wholesome meals we have. Let us thank him for the sitting rooms, with their big, comfortable chairs, and for the bedrooms where we have a place for everything and everything in its place. Do not talk to me of the sublime blessings of a summer watering place, but of the sublime blessings and comforts of our own city homes.

We should also thank God for our city homes in a broad sense. What the gold setting is to the precious stone, the halls, the walls, the fireplaces, the bedrooms, the sitting and dining rooms and the parlors are to the family jewels we call our wives, our husbands, our fathers and mothers and children and brothers and sisters. There is an old motto which we often hear here in church, "What is home without a mother?" We sometimes hear it flippantly spoken. But I not only ask this question in a reverential sense, but I ask the same kind of a question in a broader sense. I ask, "What would home be without all the children and the parents being gathered together under the same roof?" In truth, it would not be a home. Think to-day, amid the blessings of our vacation compensations, that to God unto our families are reunited. I thank God that father sits at one end of the table and that mother sits at the other end of the table and that all the children, from the biggest to the youngest, are lined up between with the two places of honor next to the mother reserved for the two youngest in the family.

No; there is not one missing. As you look about the long table at your Sunday dinner to-day you will find them all there. Many a day has passed since the first day of January that you would have given a good deal to have the whole family about you, as you have this Sabbath day. Some time last first place, no sooner did the schools close last summer than the children went every which way. Some were in camp, some of your daughters went to visit a school friend in the east or on the ranch, some were off to take the sick child down to the seashore, you as the husband and father were away for some business or pleasure trip, and when you returned you had to spend most of your time in the city. You snatched your Sundays for a few days here and there to go to the country, but, for the most part, you were alone. Now the family circle is reunited. Schools have opened. The boys and girls have to come back to their books. The many dangers of travel are past. Say what you will, you won't is a great deal about that boy of yours using that gun. Yes; you are all home again, safe and well. Thank God to-day for your reunited families! "Amen! Amen" I can hear from dozens of grateful lips as a great climax to this domestic thanksgiving.

Then, again, I want you to thank God that you have returned to the work of the store, or the factory, or the office. Let me see; how long were you out in the country? Two weeks? Three weeks? Two days? Oh, it does not matter much how long. I know one fact about you, and that is you were away long enough to know that the hardest work a strong, healthy man can do is to loaf, how or nothing. When you left the city some months ago you went off in high hopes. Visioning to do, "nothing to do," was your congratulatory cry. The first night you went to bed in the country you said to yourself: "Now I am going to stay in bed just as long as I wish. I am not going to get up until 10 o'clock if I do not desire." Did you stay in bed until 11 o'clock? Oh, no. You arose at your regular time. Old habits cannot be broken in a day.

Then after a few fishing trips and a few mountain climbs you began to grow restless. You wanted to get back to work. Then, if I mistake not, it has been your good fortune during this vacation to be thrown with a few chronically unhappy men. Unhappy because they have nothing to do. Perhaps on account of inherited wealth or maybe the fact that they have made money they retired from business to have a good time. What a miserable mistake they have made. Instead of being happy with nothing to do, you have found that they are the most unhappy of men. They spend most of their time in playing nurse girl or picking up pins or in finding fault with their children or in making the lives of their wives as miserable as their own. The simple fact is a full-blooded man like you has no business loafing around the house with nothing to do. If you loiter about the house than you will degenerate into nothing but a first-class "funser" and a genuine masculine nuisance. You know that you never felt happier than when you boarded the street car one day and started for the store. In my time I have met hundreds of wealthy men who had retired from business because they had amassed a competency. I never envied one of them. I have always thanked God, first, that he has given me health; secondly, that he has compelled me to work. Thank God to-day that you have been able to cast off the inactivities of a vacation and have been compelled to go back to the daily treadmills of manual and mental toil. The financial struggles of life not only earn bread for our children, but also unlimited joys for our own healthful, physical and mental existence.

Then again, I gladly welcome you back as worshipers to your own church and to your own pew. Well as I preach most of the good we get from a gospel sermon is due not so much to the inherent worth and to the brilliancy of the sermon as to the spiritual preparations we make at home for the reception of the Bread of Life. This Sabbath day, in a Christian home, you have felt a spiritual atmosphere. You did not see any fishing poles. You did not see the carriages being driven up to the long mountain ridges. You did not see the pleasure parties starting out for a yachting trip. You arose in a spirit of prayer. After breakfast you gathered the children about the family altar. Then before you started for the Sunday school you all knelt. Then you uttered a prayer like this: "O Lord, like Enoch, may we walk with thee this day. Be with our Sunday school. Give the teachers power to impart the word. Give the scholars receptive hearts to listen to the lesson. And O Father, thou great and omnipotent King, be with our pastor. He is one of us. May we lift up his arms. May he to-day be a man with mighty power for God. May just the right word be spoken which will bring down a shower of blessings to our hearts." Are not those prayers having results? Why, friends, as I speak this morning I feel a strange influence lifting me up. That influence, oh, my people, comes from the prayers of the family altars of my church. That power comes from the prayers of my people here in this church home, praying for me. That power comes from the fact that when you started for church you and your households were in a praying atmosphere. It is hard, awfully hard, to make the necessary spiritual preparations for a Sunday service when we are out in the country in a worldly summer hotel. I congratulate you that you have been able to start this holy Sabbath in the right way upon your knees before your family altars.

Then I also congratulate the homecomers because you have come back to your opportunities of religious work as well as to your privileges of going to your church worship. A vacation from your church labors and from church work. You may have attended the church services, but you were not a church simply as worshipers and not as workers. And, my friends, true Christianity is not developed except by bending the knee in prayer, but in toiling in God's vineyard.

The vineyards of Christ's great city are now ripe for the plucking. Your Sunday school class is ready to welcome you back. The boys and the girls ought all to be brought into the Christian life this winter. The missionary society needs building up as never before. Your pastor needs your help this winter. You only gave half-hearted service last year. You must do better work for the store, or the factory or the office. Let me see; how long were you out in the country? Two weeks? Three weeks? Two days? Oh, it does not matter much how long. I know one fact about you, and that is you were away long enough to know that the hardest work a strong, healthy man can do is to loaf, how or nothing. Then again, I gladly welcome you back as worshipers to your own church and to your own pew. Well as I preach most of the good we get from a gospel sermon is due not so much to the inherent worth and to the brilliancy of the sermon as to the spiritual preparations we make at home for the reception of the Bread of Life. This Sabbath day, in a Christian home, you have felt a spiritual atmosphere. You did not see any fishing poles. You did not see the carriages being driven up to the long mountain ridges. You did not see the pleasure parties starting out for a yachting trip. You arose in a spirit of prayer. After breakfast you gathered the children about the family altar. Then before you started for the Sunday school you all knelt. Then you uttered a prayer like this: "O Lord, like Enoch, may we walk with thee this day. Be with our Sunday school. Give the teachers power to impart the word. Give the scholars receptive hearts to listen to the lesson. And O Father, thou great and omnipotent King, be with our pastor. He is one of us. May we lift up his arms. May he to-day be a man with mighty power for God. May just the right word be spoken which will bring down a shower of blessings to our hearts." Are not those prayers having results? Why, friends, as I speak this morning I feel a strange influence lifting me up. That influence, oh, my people, comes from the prayers of the family altars of my church. That power comes from the prayers of my people here in this church home, praying for me. That power comes from the fact that when you started for church you and your households were in a praying atmosphere. It is hard, awfully hard, to make the necessary spiritual preparations for a Sunday service when we are out in the country in a worldly summer hotel. I congratulate you that you have been able to start this holy Sabbath in the right way upon your knees before your family altars.

Then I also congratulate the homecomers because you have come back to your opportunities of religious work as well as to your privileges of going to your church worship. A vacation from your church labors and from church work. You may have attended the church services, but you were not a church simply as worshipers and not as workers. And, my friends, true Christianity is not developed except by bending the knee in prayer, but in toiling in God's vineyard.

The vineyards of Christ's great city are now ripe for the plucking. Your Sunday school class is ready to welcome you back. The boys and the girls

BEES AS ACROBATS.

(Country Life in America.)

When wax is needed a certain number of self-elected citizens gorge with honey and hang up in chains or curtains, each bee clinging by her front feet to the hind feet of the one above her, like Japanese acrobats, and there they remain sometimes for two days, until the wax scales appear pushed out from between pocket. It is not hard to understand that much honey is needed for manufacture of wax, a bee after filling with raw material will consume much more wax by keeping quiet than by using any of the gorged honey for energy in building about and working. But the necessity of "ho'ding hands" while this work goes on must ever remain to use another one of the cloze relations in the bee commune.

RANGES MADE OF STEEL.

Peninsular Steel Ranges are made of planished steel that has a lustre like that of a well kept locomotive. They require no blacking.

The body is carefully rivetted with steeple head rivets and is made of two thicknesses of steel with an asbestos lining. This retains all the heat in the oven.

If you take pride in your kitchen and your cooking, you will "fall in love" with PENINSULAR PLANISHED STEEL RANGES the moment you see them.

We are showing all the new styles and handsomest designs.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

City Man—Grow all your own vegetables, I suppose?

Farmer Grouch—Most of 'em. We get some cabbage heads from the city.

A Carefully Prepared Pill—Much time and attention were expended in the experimenting with the ingredients that enter into the composition of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills before they were brought to the state in which they were first offered to the public. Whatever other pills may be, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of much expert study, and all persons suffering from dyspepsia or disorders of liver and kidneys may confidently accept them as being what they are represented to be.

The Preacher—Why, I'm not mistaken. I married you three years ago, Mr. Higgins, and I'm sure you would have been divorced since, and now we have decided to remarry?

The Preacher—Youth, have to go elsewhere. I'm not running a repair shop.

A Successful Medicine.—Everyone wishes to be successful in any undertaking in which he may engage. It is therefore extremely gratifying to the proprietors of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills to know that they offered to compound a medicine which would prove a blessing to mankind have been successful beyond their expectations. The endorsation of these Pills by the public is a guarantee that a pill has been produced which will fulfil everything claimed for it.

Nearly all infants are more or less subject to diarrhoea and such complaints while teething and at this period of their lives is the most critical moment with them. Be sure to get a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. This medicine is a specific for such complaints and is highly spoken of by those who have used it. Those in doubt, apply it with cure any case of cholera or summer complaint.

Teacher—Now, Tommy, if I give you five apples and you eat two, how many will you have left?

Tommy, aged six—Five.

Teacher—No; if you eat two you would have only three left, wouldn't you?

Tommy—No, ma'am; I'd have five—three outside and two inside.

As the Oil Rubs in, the Pain Rubs Out—Applied to the seat of pain in any part of the body the skin absorbs the liniment, causes brisk friction and the patient obtains almost instant relief. Those who use the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil are surprised many times at the unlooked for results its qualities, and once known it will not be rejected. Try it.

Mary had a little lamb

But Mary only sighed and wept

"No," replied the man, "this is merely a bridal path."

"I wonder how it is that men succeed who mind only their own business?"

"Because there is so little competition."

McLAREN—McCONNELL MARRIAGE.

There was a quiet wedding on Wednesday morning, at the residence of Mr. Pickard, at Mt. Pleasant Farm, the contracting parties being Mr. Renzo McConnell, six miles south of town, and Miss Charlotte Ann, daughter of Mrs. Carrn, Brew. W. J. Hinder, of the Church of England, officiating. The bride wore a brown broadcloth tracksuit, with hat to match. Only relatives and immediate friends were present. A number of beautiful and valuable presents were received.

Mr. and Mrs. McConnell removed to Alberta in the spring of 1904, from Napanee, Ont. The groom, who is the postmaster of Nanton, and a member of the Nanton Lodge No. 1, is one of the most prosperous and popular young men in the district of Alberta. The bridal couple took the northbound train and left amid showers of rice and other points of interest before their return.—The News, Nanton, Alta.

For Renewing

Faded and Discolored Suits and Fall and Winter Overcoats for Men and Boys.

Diamond Dye Fast Black for Wool. Diamond Dye Fast Navy Blue for Wool and Diamond Dye Fast Seal Brown for Wool, are always fashionable autumn colors for your husband's and son's coats, vests, trousers, and fall and winter overcoats.

Coats, vests, trousers and overcoats that are faded and dingy can be made to look as good as new when you use the celebrated Diamond Dyes in the colors above mentioned. Many families save scores of dollars each year by using DIAMOND DYES.

Do not allow any dealer to sell you weak, crude and dangerous dyes with fancy names. Such package dyes are sewers and imitations, and are sold only for the benefit of the merchant who handles them, as they pay large profits. Wise and prudent women always insist upon getting the DIAMOND DYES, sold at 10 cents, same as the wealthiest ones do. If your dealer cannot supply you, send money, and name colors wanted, to Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, Montreal, P.Q., will send you the dyes by mail.

ADDINGTON FAIR,

It is estimated that the crowd in attendance at the Addington Fall Fair held at Tamworth on Saturday, Sept. 23rd, was considerably larger than previous years. At any rate there was a good big crowd of people present, who enjoyed the exhibits, the races, etc. The day was bright, although somewhat chilly, but the latter fact did not in any way mar the day's proceedings.

Friday afternoon there were horse races, but there were not many present to enjoy the exciting finishes. In the three minute trot only two heats were run off on Friday, the race being finished Saturday afternoon. Following are the results:

SATURDAY SHOWING.

The exhibits in the palace was fair, there being extra fine exhibits of roots, vegetables and fruits of all kinds. There was also some nice exhibits of furs, leather, sewing machines, pianos, etc., and the collection of fancy work by the ladies was most beautiful indeed.

The exhibit of cattle was better than in former years, and some very fine animals were shown. The showing of horse was not very large, although in the exhibit of single horse in harness, and span of carriage or roadsters there were several smart turnouts.

Taken altogether the Addington Fair this year ought be termed a grand success.

The doctor may come too late, or have you a reliable remedy at hand? Baby's Own Tablets break up colds, prevent croup, reduce fever, check diarrhoea. Every mother should keep these precious little tablets in the house. They are guaranteed to give relief, and give sound, healthful sleep. And they contain no opiate or harmful drug. Mrs. Alex. I find nothing so good as the Tablets when any of my children are ill." Sold by all druggists, or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Cooks and Bakes perfectly at the same time

There is not another range built in which the heat may be regulated so that you can bake in the oven and cook on the top at the same time without spoiling one or the other.

But you can do both equally well at the same time on the Pandora, because its heat is not wasted and is at all times under the simplest, most positive control.

If you do the cooking of your household you can appreciate exactly what this means.

CLYDE—BAKER.

The home of the bride's parents, Cataraqui, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on September 26th, when Miss Martha, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Clyde, was united in marriage to Thomas James Baker, of Napanee. The marriage was performed by Rev. Mr. Laird, of Kingston. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Minnie, and Joseph Bray, cousin of the groom, best man. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very pretty in white organdie with a long bridal veil, and she carried white roses. Her travelling suit was made of blue broadcloth trimmed with white, silk blouse with hat to match. After the ceremony the guests assembled in the dining-room, where a sumptuous repast was served. The bride was the recipient of many handsome presents, showing the high esteem in which she was held. Mr. and Mrs. Baker left on the three o'clock boat for Amherst Island, where they will take up their residence.

A GREAT AWAKENING.

The Quarterly Official Board of the Western Methodist church has made no mistake in inviting the Rev. R. McHardy, the noted evangelist, to hold special services for two weeks in this town. His sermons since Sunday morning last have created very great interest. Many have already been awakened, and we confidently look that before his missals here he closed the entire town will be raised. This evening he will give an address, especially for young people, to which all, old and young, are invited.

On Sunday next he will preach at 10.30 and 7 p.m., and in the afternoon at a mass meeting for men only he will deliver an awakening sermon, subject "A Sure Thing". Singing will be conducted by a male quartette. To the afternoon meeting every man in town and surrounding country is invited. Meetings every night next week except Saturday. Come thou with us "and we will do thee good." —Com.

REID—COXALL.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in Christ's church, Tamworth, on Tuesday, at 7 a.m., when Miss Adeline Coxall became the bride of Mr. G. A. Reid, the Rev. J. R. Sexton, of Gananoque, officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked lovely in a gown of cream silk-de-chine with dainty chiffon trimmings and wore a veil caught with bridal roses. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Fannie Coxall, in white silk, carrying pink roses. The groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. G. S. Reid, of Centreville. Miss Lucy Wheeler presided at the organ. The groom's gift to the bride was a brooch, maple leaves set with pearls, to the bridesmaid an initial brooch set with pearls, and a pearl tie pin to the best man. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the house of the bride's parents where the wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Reid left, mid showers of rice, for Montreal, on the ten o'clock train. Mrs. Reid wore a very travelling suit of reseda green with blouse of white embroidered linen and reseda green hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Reid will return to their own home in Tamworth on Monday, and Mrs. Reid will be at home to her friends on Oct. 9th.

A GOOD WORK.

Few of our citizens appreciate what has been done for our town by the Napanee Horticultural Society. During the last few years a new life has been infused into the lovers of flowers, with the result that the humblest house in Napanee, almost without exception—has its flower beds and window pots full of beautiful bloom. This fall each member will receive two beautiful bulbs called Specisonum Rub.um. They are free flowering plants, and the blooms are large and full, suffused and spotted with crimson. They should be planted in the open ground in rich loamy soil about four inches deep. There will also be given to each member four choice hyacinths which should be potted, and kept in a cool dark place until well rooted. The Society also contemplates presenting to the park a bed of garden hydrangeas. These handsome shrubs will greatly enhance the beauty of the park, and the thoughtfulness of the Society in this particular must be commended. During the winter months a public meeting will be held at which some experienced horticulturists are expected to discuss topics of interest to all who believe in making the home beautiful. The Secretary will for a few days withhold the order for the bulbs and plants for fall distribution so that any member desiring to send a special order through the Society, may have the privilege of doing so, and thus have the benefit of the wholesale prices.

W. H. BRUTON.

An old and worthy citizen, Mr. Wm. Henry Bruton, passed over to the great majority on Friday morning, 22nd Sept., aged seventy years. Deceased had been in poor health for a number of years, but did not give up until a few days before his death. Mr. Bruton was born in Watertown, N.Y., and came to this country with his parents when but a lad. For over fifty years he was almost a continuous resident of Napanee, carrying on business all that time, with the exception of several years in business in Deseronto. Deceased was an energetic, respectable and honorable man, and was esteemed by everyone. He was for years a member of the Eastern Methodist church, and having a talent for music, was for years a member of the choir of that church. He was also a member of the first brass band Napanee had, which was organized over forty years ago. Besides his bereaved widow, he leaves five children, Charlton, of Toronto; Fred., of St. Louis, Mo.; Walter, late of Chicago; Mrs. Fred. Laughlin and Miss Maud Bruton, at home. Also a brother, Mr. George Bruton, of Gananoque. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon and was largely attended, the remains being interred in Napanee cemetery.

One of the finest concerts given here in years was that in the opera house last night. Every artist was taken, and the audience was thoroughly appreciative one. Mr. Elston's numbers were also rendered faultlessly, and vigorously encored. The other numbers, solos, duets, quartettes, by Mrs. F. J. Tamlyn, Mrs. A. C. H. Wartman, Mrs. Gibson, and Messrs. H. Daly, W. J. Bookwell and Mr. Elston, were of a high order, and a credit to our clever locals talents. Miss Lamb's solos rendered at the piano, and proved a capable and sympathetic accompanist.

The Town Hall had been promised for the meeting and up to the last minute was thought available for that purpose. Many persons finding the door closed and locked, went away thinking there would be no meeting. It was, however, a representative meeting and unanimous in its condemnation of our Dominion legislators' late raid on the public purse.

This would only be a few days until woodwork in the engine window, etc., would be required for the new power house, and a saving of $5.00 per week should be made for same. Report adopted.

From Councillors Kennedy and Wagar, that Mr. C. H. Spencer be paid the sum of $6.00 for month for use of vacant lot for electric light poles while fencing around same was being built. Moved by Councillors Kennedy and Simmons that Fire, Water and Light committee be authorized to see the different firms of the town to fence around the new power house, and that the tenders be looked over in due course. Carried.
